That Bowser Outfit Will Increase Your Oil Profits

The times, keen competition, pure food requirements, your own profit and welfare all demand a Bowser System for retailing oil and gasolene.

You wouldn't take money out of your pocket and deliberately throw it away—then why continue a method that is doing that very thing for you? You lose a certain per cent. of profit on every gallon of oil you sell under the old method and you can't avoid it so long as you use a measure and funnel.

BOWSER
Self-Measuring Systems

eliminate the use of measures and funnels—they prevent every cent of loss. You can make enough more profit with a Bowser to pay its cost.

Then, too, the time has passed when haphazard, slipshod methods in the general store will bring results. The man ahead to-day is the man who takes advantage of the modern time and labor-saving devices—he modernizes his business and thus invites patronage. And why not?—he can serve his customers better, quicker and at a far greater profit. The very neatness of his store begets business.

Why not modernize your oil department with a Bowser System? It saves time, space and money—does not require measures nor funnels, is quick, accurate and attractive.

A SMALL INVESTMENT AND A BIG PROFIT.

Make more money this year than you did last—start NOW by sending for our 1912 book, No. 5. It tells how FREE.

CREATIVE SALESMANSHIP.

A DEALER is a creative salesman when by personal conversation he sells goods not asked for by the customer. He is a creative salesman when by means of a display, an advertisement, a neat delivery outfit, or any other method, some one is induced to purchase something he otherwise would not, had he been blind or had his attention not been drawn in any way to that article.

The number of sales made by the dealer over and above the actual demand, depend upon the degree of efficiency with which he uses the selling powers at his command. The dealer or clerk, for instance, who combines an attractive personality with a knowledge of the talking points of the goods in stock, who presents his displays in an adequate manner, who advertises judiciously and effectively, is going to get more new business, than the man who utilizes but one of these methods, other things being equal.

The big city department stores get their business by advertising and display. If they were as efficient in personal talks to customers they would get a great deal more. And this is why the smaller retail dealer will always be a factor in the trade. His personality, backed up by his power to suggest and persuade, a power largely lacking in the big stores—is going to make him always an important link in the trade chain.

This issue, our annual Spring Number of 1912, is based on Creative Salesmanship. In it readers will find much food for thought. Many progressive Canadian dealers have been induced to express their views and their methods of doing business. They tell how sales are increased from day to day; how a new customer is made from time to time; how customers are kept and the hundred and one other points that everyone is anxious to know about.

If on reading the Spring Number, you find it profitable from any standpoint, let us know. We are anxious to perpetuate the good features.

SEA-WATER DAMAGED NUTMEGS.

IT IS well that the Canadian government is working towards Pure Food standards and a definite foundation as regards the manufacture and sale of foodstuffs in this country.

A couple of weeks ago a representative from a United States firm was in Canada to dispose of some peculiar goods. They included nutmegs which had been damaged by sea-water—not the wooden variety this time; pepper shells; cinnamon chips; exhausted ginger and spent cloves. These were goods offered Canadian manufacturers, one of whom asked the salesman why he did not dispose of them in the United States.

"Oh, our laws over there prohibit their sale and use," was the reply.

He had been sent over to Canada to dump these goods on us simply because our pure food laws did not protect the Canadian dealers and Canadian people.

It is therefore about time we had a clearly defined set of food standards. It will be a happy and a healthy day for us when Canada will no longer be a dumping ground for foods which our neighbor to the south has to reject.

In this connection The Grocer would urge upon retailers the necessity of raising the standard of quality of goods sold. To do this every dealer must make it a point to keep in stock goods he knows to be absolutely pure and of a high standard of purity. Few customers will purchase, for instance, a low grade of spice if the superiority of the better grades are explained. The same applies to jams, flour, etc., and should be carried out by every dealer who sells to customers at all particular as to what they purchase.

GOING AFTER BUSINESS.

A CITY visitor on the farm was inspecting the barns and contents with the farmer's son. Naturally he was inquisitive. He asked questions about the horses, the hogs and the hens and finally came to the cows.

"Are the cows giving much milk these days, Johnny?" he inquired.

"Ain't givin' no milk at all," was the brusque reply, "we has got to go and git it from them."

This presents to merchants and salesmen a good lesson. The man who wants something nowadays usually has 'to go and git it,' as the farmer's boy so tersely put it.

To make a success in these times of strong competition, a dealer has got to go after business. He must not simply wait for demand, he must create demand. His success, other things being normal, will depend proportionately on the amount of business he secures which he wouldn't get if he didn't make an effort to bring it.

Success, like the cows' milk, doesn't come of its own accord. We get it by going after it.

TO MEET PRICE CUTTING.

HOW to meet price cutting is frequently a somewhat difficult problem. The fact that stores maintaining prices at a fair profit continue to succeed while the same cannot be said of the price cutter, is a proof that the price cutting method is not in the end a profitable one.

In meeting the price cutter the remedy begins with a careful study of just what customers pay for. While the dealer furnishes his patrons with cooked meats, canned goods, and other groceries, he gives a considerable amount of value in service.

It is not likely the price cutter can give as good service. If such is the case make the strong talking point that of efficiency in serving customers, and demonstrate that this greater efficiency is real.

WHAT THE ADS. CONTAIN.

READERS frequently tell our representatives of the accommodation our advertising pages are to them. The advertising section of The Grocer contains information about the goods they have in stock and about which their customers ask and it is therefore imperative that they read them carefully to be abreast of the times.

Another value found by readers in the ads. is the uses to which certain goods they sell can be put. This applies particularly to such goods as ammonia powders, lyes, cleansers, cooking materials, condensed milk, etc. They furnish information about fixtures and equipment which the dealer may be contemplating getting; they contain hints on display, buying, selling and business management which make and save money regularly to those who follow them closely. Last but not least they keep the merchant posted on new goods on the market.

In this Spring Number the advertisements are full of information which will aid every dealer who reads them carefully to increase his business. They will help to create sales—and such new business supplies the cream to the profits in retailing groceries.

DEPENDS ON SERVICE RENDERED.

ONE of the biggest agencies that help along the growth of a business is service and under that general head come a number of important subheads, one of which is courtesy to customers. The salespeople should ever seek to cultivate their relationships with patrons in that manner best calculated to further the interests of the proprietors of the store.

Many a retail establishment owes its conspicuous success to the reputation given it by the attentive and painstaking services of its salespeople. The salesman who knows how to attend a customer, creating the impression that he is representing his employer properly and at the same time inspiring the confidence of the customer, is a mighty valuable member of the staff. He does not allow his attitude of efficient service to degenerate into servility nor will he allow unreasonableness or rudeness on a customer's part, which are only evidences of weakness, to influence him to take any action other than what, in his judgment, is to the best interest of the business.

Little personal spites and feelings are not worth while. The welfare of the business should ever be the first consideration. The employe who can live up to that maxim need never fear as to his own well-being, because they are inseparable.

VALUE OF STORE CO-OPERATION.

TEAM-WORK in the store is of great assistance in furthering the success of the business. Unless all factors and portions of the store are working together with a common end in view, its general advance is not likely to be as great as it otherwise would be.

In the first place there should be co-operation between the different factors of the store, the advertising department, the sales force, and the window dresser. These should frequently consult with each other to secure the best results. When a certain article or line is being given prominence in the advertising, then is the time the window dresser and the sales staff should also put some effort behind it. The power of many an ad. has been lost in the fact that the other departments failed to co-operate.

Then the sales force in itself should work together for the general advance of the business.

Much more can be accomplished by concentrated efforts. An example of this may prove interesting. About the middle of the month it was found that sales, if they continued in the same manner, were going to fall far behind those for the same month of the previous year. The sales force held a consultation. If possible, they were not going to allow this. They devised plans, and all began to work together in the common cause of keeping sales fully up to the previous record. And they did it, too.

The value of team-work can scarcely be overestimated.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

GENERAL conditions throughout Canada are in a healthy condition. This is shown in many ways. One is the substantial increase in building permits of 32 Canadian cities during the first quarter of the year. The total increase is $5,332,616, or 30.2 per cent. over the corresponding period of 1911.

Western Canadian cities figure prominently in this increase, their share being $5,252,466, or 50.4 per cent., as compared with 16 Eastern cities with a total increase of $80,150, or 1.1 per cent.

Building permits for March show a goodly increase over the same month a year ago. It is expected that April will establish a new record in this line. These figures, in conjunction with the larger bank clearings, are a source of gratification, in so much as they prove that Canada's progress is real and substantial. Money may be tighter later on in the year, dependent on conditions during the next few months, but on the whole the business outlook is distinctly encouraging.

A great deal of wheat has been moved from the West during the past few weeks, and in most cases the grain has been found to be in better condition than was hoped for. As a result of this movement Western farmers are beginning to get money on their shipments, and collections are better. Threshing has commenced in many districts of the West, and in a short time the whole country will probably be again busy tilling the soil.

Trade reports from all over the country are encouraging, and indications are that the current year will be a banner one for manufacturing and industrial progress. That the retail trade will come in for its share of the prosperity incidental to the great increase in population anticipated, and the greater demand for labor, is natural.

WINDOW AS A SALES CREATOR.

IT has been said, and rightly too, that the window is the soul of the store.

"Show me the merchant who takes trouble with his displays, who changes them frequently, ever aiming to make them respresentative of the stock that is carried, and in such a way as to sell goods, and I will show you a man who is progressive and keen after business," states one authority.

In this Spring Number of The Grocer, and indeed in all our regular issues, we are constantly striving to drive home the value of window display as a medium for creating sales. The emphasis and importance given to this phase of the business is by no means overdone. It is well warranted.

In their movements among the retail grocers throughout the Dominion, our editors find myriads of progressive grocers loud in their praise of the show window as a means of creating and extending business. Not infrequent is it that the dealer earnestly declares that to take his windows away from him means to take his business away.

And yet in the face of this strong evidence of the value of the show window from Canada's best and most prosperous merchants, there are still found a good many grocers who do not seem to fully realize their great importance. At least this is what must be concluded from the unattractive and ill-kept windows which are constantly encountered, not only in our smaller towns and villages, but even in the cities, and on the main thoroughfares of the cities, too.

To those merchants who have not fully recognized and taken advantage of the opportunities for creating business offered by their windows, let this be a call for them to awaken to the possibilities at hand in this regard. Let them decide that for the next six months they will devote more attention to their show windows, and it is safe to say that on the occasion of our Fall Number, results will have become so evident, that they will not relinquish their efforts in this direction.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Spring trade campaign should be begun at once by every dealer.

In Spring the housewife's fancy turns to thoughts of carpet-beating and home cleansers.

Butter is at last on the downward path. This will be easier to explain than the recent rapid rise to heights unknown before.

The man who can create business is an asset to the retail trade. The man who waits for demand is a detriment.

And now we see hog products going up. The hog evidently resents the feeling of being behind the times.

It is not many years back when macaroni and vermicelli were practically unknown in this country. Then when they did make their appearance, they were regarded in the light of a curiosity by the majority. The only consumers were European immigrants, mostly from Italy, who brought the taste for it with them. However, it has since become well known, and is becoming a common article of diet in almost every household. It combines food value and palatableness with a reasonable cost.

Store That Has Been Termed a Museum

Something About The Hudson Bay Co.'s Store at Winnipeg—A Firm in Business for Centuries—Caters to the Best Trade—Considered a Model in Display and Arrangement of Goods—Metal Ceiling and Silent Salesmen Prominent.

The world has a certain feeling of respect for an old established business. That a firm has done business for half a century is in a sense a guarantee of its integrity on the one hand and of its adaptability on the other.

Few business institutions in the West have stood the test better from both points of view than the Hudson Bay Co., with its centuries of existence.

The accompanying illustration of the beautiful interior of the grocery department of the Winnipeg emporium shows what can be done in the way of display where there is ample space, ample means and ample diversity of stock to work on.

View of Grocery Department of the Winnipeg Store of The Hudson Bay Co., the Oldest Retail Firm in Canada.

Every Device to Please.

True it is that the majority of grocers have not the vast resources of the great company; but the great company has many competitors and to hold what it claims to have, some of the best of the city's trade, it has to employ every device to attract and please.

A Grocery Museum.

The grocery department of the Hudson Bay Co. has been called a museum —the world has been ransacked to fill its shelves. No man, however well posted in his business, when visiting the city, should neglect to have a look at it. There are always lessons to be learned in the art of display.

The Artist and the Artisan.

This matter of display is of such vital importance that though it may seem like quoting truism to enlarge on it, a word in season will not be amiss. In the matter of display, work done is either that of an artist or an artisan, and it is the artistic work that counts—work that had head and heart both put into it. Changes of seasons, exigencies of the times, and preparation for the future, have all their part in displaying the goods at the up-to-date store.

Elegance of the Interior.

A glance at the picture shows attractiveness from ceiling to floor. The metal ceiling is panelled off into sections and is kept spotlessly clean. The shelf arrangement is one that compels attention. Many of the goods on the shelves are kept behind glass. Large mirrors placed at intervals along the wall may take up a little room, but their effect in reflecting the handsome interior more than balances any loss of shelf room.

Confectionery, preserved fruits, bottled goods, etc., are shown in long silent salesmen while down the centre between the counters are displays on the floor and on tables which sell large quantities of goods. Floral decorations on the walls and showcases lend an extra favorable effect on the entire interior and greatly enhance its appearance.

Display cards calling attention to various lines such as candy, fruit, etc., are hung about the store. Rest chairs for customers giving orders are another addition not used extensively enough in many stores.

In a word, the whole general appearance of the interior silently but forcibly expresses the elegance which is made a part of the display and which, everyone must admit, goes a long way in attracting and holding trade. It is a creative salesman in the finest sense of the term.

Make the Public Look at the Goods

This is Chief Aim of Stratford Firm Who Believe Strongly in Display as a Selling Factor—Cases Where Marmalade, Jam, Vegetables, Etc., Have Been Sold Through Display — Goods With Good Margin Are Pushed But Not Without Regard for Profit.

Beattie & Sons, grocers, of Stratford, Ont., believe that the best method of introducing new goods and extending the sale of staple lines is by keeping them forever prominently before customers. They are strong, on this point as is shown by a visit to their store on Ontario Street.

The first thing that will impress one is the extensive display of goods. Every effort is made to show goods so that customers cannot help but notice them. Advantage is taken of every possible chance of doing so.

Strong On Display.

On one side a long counter is taken up entirely with the display of goods. Not even a space is left for wrapping parcels. They believe in making use of every available foot at the front and of using the rear of the store for wrapping goods. Behind this counter the shelves and ledges are put to the best possible use in display work.

Along the other side the display feature is carried out just as extensively. A large mirror backs the display space near the front. Then comes a closed-in wall case in which is shown a variety of bottled goods. The open space along this side is interspersed with a series of displays on counters, and small tables as well as display racks for flour, vegetables and lamp chimneys. They also have a closed-in case for showing meats, and another for different varieties of cheese.

"Display is our chief method of advertising our goods," says Mr. Beattie. "We believe in having the goods where the people can't help but see them, where they will literally fall over them and if possible where they may pick them up and examine them.

It Sold The Marmalade.

"For instance, only yesterday we opened up some new marmalade and jam and placed some on the counter. During the afternoon a woman picked up a jar of the marmalade, and we succeeded in selling it to her. Later on the jam caught the eye of another, and she purchased also.

"I don't believe, however, in forcing goods on customers. It is all right to diplomatically show an article to a customer and explain about it, but rather should it be done in a manner as if you were attempting to be merely obliging and not trying to sell.

"It is a good thing to have an attractive store," reasons Mr. Beattie, "but it is possible that a store may have an attractive appearance and yet fail to sell goods; and that is what we are here for. For instance, we may pile our goods up evenly and nicely, and have our counters spic and span. The arrangement may look neat and still not sell goods. The grocery store is a busy place and judgment must be used in the amount of time given over to fixing attractive displays."

Goods in This Store are Placed Where They Must be Seen by Customers.

Introducing Soups.

This store until some little time ago never had a big sale sale for soups. They did not have any special brand which they pushed. In fact they didn't push any. They began to realize the possibilities in this line and decided to put in a stock of a well known brand of good quality and feature it. When the first shipment was received they did not put it underneath the counter and wait for customers to ask for soup. They kept samples out before the people and were ready at all times to explain to customers their value. The success they have met with in the sale of this line is shown by the fact that 40 dozen more were recently purchased. Thus is shown what may be done to create demand for goods for which original demand is small.

Want Profit and Quality.

"We push the goods that pay the best profit," says Mr. Beattie, "making sure, however, that the quality is just as good or better. We have a special brand of flour for which we have a big sale. We pay the mills 10 cents per cwt. more to put in a little more of the better wheat than usual. The result is that we get 20 to 30 cents per cwt. more for it, and besides, the quality brings customers back again."

"We operate independent of prices the other grocers in town are selling. They might just as well be in Toronto as far as we are concerned. We make sure to get a good article and price it at what we consider a fair profit. If a person attempted to meet the special prices of all stores, he would soon go out of business."

Good goods and good service are the chief factors in building up a trade in the estimation of this store. "People want good goods," they say. "Most customers are similar to youself, and want the best. When a man goes into a store to purchase a necktie, he doesn't want bargain stuff but something of quality. This is especially true in groceries—the stuff you eat. People today are not looking for bargain groceries."

Low Sugar Price Had No Effect.

Mr. Beattie gave a case to show that this is true. A firm in the same town put a cut price on sugar, offering 22 pounds of No. 2 and 20 pounds of No. 1 for a dollar. Instead of knocking all his sugar profit to pieces by cutting on this line, Mr. Beattie continued to sell only the best and at the usual price of 18 pounds for a dollar. That people are not looking for bargains is shown by the fact that his sugar sales did not fall off in the least.

Mr. Beattie is a firm believer in price and show cards, and they are used extensively about the store, and to good advantage. "They act as little salesmen," is his opinion. "People are bashful sometimes and do not like to inquire too much. You know the feeling you have yourself when you go into a store. You may inquire the price of one or two articles, but you are backward about asking about any more. The price card makes this unnecessary."

One of the most profitable fixtures that Mr. Beattie considers he has in the store in his vegetable display stand. He purchased it two years ago and considers it has already proved a profitable investment. He now sells a lot of green goods and all without waste. It is attractive and appetizing when filled with different lines of vegetables arranged with an eye to the color scheme, and is a valuable selling medium for these goods.

Supplanting the Mail Order Catalogue

Battleford Trading Co. Sized Up Situation Among the Western Farmers and Met M. H. O. Houses on Their Own Ground—Sent Out Booklet Costing $3 per Page—An Example of the Business Developed Though This Medium.

There are districts in Canada where the catalogues from the large city mail order houses solve several problems for the people who receive them. For that reason, the local mechant who would capture that share of business which properly belongs to him, must adopt methods which will emphasize in the minds of his people the advantages of his position and the possibilities of his store.

Catalogues as Home Companion.

It is not necessary to imagine a case. Facts are available which go to show that it depends upon the local merchant whether the catalogue from the outside mail order concern is to assume in the home the position of a household companion, an exclusive periodical of reference in which the housewife may find description and prices of what is needed by the family.

When a person, with a fully developed shopping instinct, has to travel several miles to the nearest town to find out whether the merchants there can supply her with things she has read about in the catalogue, it seems safe to say that in a great many cases she will take the course which simplifies effort and assures her of reasonably satisfactory results.

Where Local Merchants Step In.

Before a person reaches that point the local mechant, through his advertising, should have stepped in. As an example, consider the merchandising proposition as presented by the Western homesteader or the settler in any other sparsely settled part of the country. He lives tweny miles or more from a settlement. Because of his isolation, he orders a season's supplies at a time. These call for an outlay of from $100 to $500. Let it be supposed that the merchants in the nearest town do no exceptional advertising—the fact is that many of them are too much inclined to take the distant customer for granted. They are regularly represented in the weekly paper, in which the homesteader may or may not be sufficiently interested to become a subscriber. Often he prefers to receive the paper from the place he refers to as "back home," and is downright indifferent about acquiring particular knowledge as to what the nearest merchants are doing. The latter are sometimes satisfied with a fair trade and do not think it worth while worrying about the people living on the far reaches of their merchandising radius.

Advertising with a Personality.

There are merchants who seldom adopt any means of advertising which, figuratively speaking, will knock at the man's door and step into the home as a distinct personality.

No merchant in the situation described can lose sight of the fact that to be effective, his advertising must have something of a personal status in the home.

In those districts where inhabitants are comparatively few, where the farmer or the farmer's wife do not often have an opportunity to exchange experiences with neighbors, where companionships are limited, attractive mediums of information are prized according to their practical value or utility.

It stands to reason, therefore, that the merchant who would have anything like an actual being in the household is he, who, to the greatest degree, prolongs and emphasizes the favorable impression of his store and of his merchandizing. They must create preference by permanent means of comparison.

Here is a clearer view of the proposition. A settler and his family "locate" twenty miles or more from the nearest town or village. They receive their mail once or twice a week, and shortly after their arrival a copy of a mail order catalogue reaches them or they may have taken one with them. The farmer, his wife and children become interested in it and it is finally placed where it can always be referred to. Full of illustrations, it suggests things to that family. It assumes somewhat the position of a shopping guide. Groceries, clothing, housefurnishings, tools, implements, toys, etc., are described and priced and on a good-sized order there are no forwarding charges.

Those Bulk Orders.

The settler shares in the prosperity of the country. He finds that he can afford to buy things. He has had a good crop and is optimistic. The winter may be in sight and the requirements of the family must be attended to. He consults his wife. She has been to town two or three times and has purchased a few things that were absolutely necessary. She has an opinion of the "local" stores, and it comes to a point where either they or the mail order houses receive their bulk order. That merchant has done well who has so informed the family upon matters pertaining to his store that the mail order catalogue on the peg in the kitchen has been supplanted to the extent that. before purchasing, the farmer and his wife are able to size up the advantages to be obtained in buying near home. The information he has given them places him in that position where comparison does him full credit and leaves a good margin in the favor of the homesteader.

On the other hand, if the information has been spasmodic, indifferent, has not the right ring to it, the mail order house gets those little orders, each amounting to one or two hundred dollars.

Trade from 100-Mile Radius.

This is by no means a suppositious picture. An outstanding example is supplied by The Battleford Trading Co., Ltd., North Battleford, Sask. The mail order houses had been their greatest competitors, especially in the outlying districts.

To fully understand the difficulties and obstacles to overcome a knowledge of existing conditions is necessary. The Battleford Traling Co. secure their trade from a district of about 100 miles radius, newly and in many parts sparsely settled, without railway communication but with some 25 post offices scattered throughout.

Travel at any time is ardous and tiresome over the trails, and the women who are the buyers for the household, are loath to undertake an ox-cart journey to the town, finding it much more convenient as well as expedient to make out their order by the fireside from the catalogue.

Cash System and Booklet.

"We tried different advertising mediums aside from the colums of our local paper," states H. W. Detmiller, secretary-treasurer of the company, "but found them too general, even the colums of the local, reaching the hands of but few of the newcomers.

"In the fall of 1906 we adopted the plan of advertising in the form of a catalogue or price list. We were adopting the cash system, and our first publication, which took the form of a 6-page circular brought good results. Still we found that it was not sufficiently complete, thereby losing much of its effectiveness, whereas a booklet with a greater list and covering a wider range would be kept as a reference, and lead to a comparison of prices with the catalogue house. Our hopes have been amply justified by results.

"The last issue of 1,200 cost us $3 per page, and were sent to addresses in this district, all being tributary to the town, believing this to be the correct method for direct results. This may appear to many as rather a large item for advertising along one particular line in a small town, but we firmly believed that the only way to meet the mail order competition to-day is on their own ground. We keep a copy of Eaton's catalogue on every counter, as well as our own booklet, and whenever a customer gives quotations we immediately refer him to the catalogue for facts, demonstrating to the customer that we have confidence in the goods we sell. The result is always satisfactory, obviating many unpleasant discussions and arguments.

Got the Homesteader's Order.

"We buy a little heavier in the articles specialized. We have every reason to believe that this method has been a success by the results achieved, of which we shall quote you only one instance. In the fall of '07 just after the regular issue, a homesteader who had, since locating here, bought all his supplies from Winnipeg, and who had received a copy of our booklet through the mail, came into the store with booklet in hand, with items checked for his fall supplies, the order amounting to $89.75.

$150,000 Business in Two and a Half Years

Castor, Alta., Firm Left Their Old Location to Open Business In a New Town—Went While Lots Were Being Offered For Sale—Member of Firm Now Mayor — Attention to Interior Display.

Western Canada has many fine looking grocery stores. The interiors of the best appeal strongly to the better class of trade, and a handsome looking store is considered half the battle in selling goods. It attracts the people, the remainder of the selling work being left to the salesmen and the goods. If the goods are of the right quality, and fresh and clean, and the salesmen understand their work, the public can easily be persuaded to purchase. The bright interior and inviting display brings them in.

Dillon & Shaw, Castor, Alberta, as will be seen from the illustration herewith, have an interior that attracts. From the top shelf to the bottom, the goods are artistically arranged. The effect of arranging packages of cereals in semi-circular fashion on the shelf at the top is appealing and, looking at the picture, at once catches the eye. The goods on the shelves are kept clean and in order, always presenting a display that must be looked at. And every dealer knows what it means to have customers cast their eyes over the shelves. Much of a deserving character is said about the window and the show case, but the shelf must not be overlooked when it comes to creating sales.

Among the other fixtures to be noted is the biscuit and confectionery display case. Boxes of high class confectionery are in the glass case on top. A computing scale stands on the counter.

The Dillon & Shaw store handle chinaware as well in the grocery department. A display on the table just inside the entrance sells a considerable quantity.

The appearance of the salesmen in this store as well as the interior invite business. They wear white coats and white aprons which appeal strongly to those people who are cranks on cleanliness.

To Castor in its Infancy.

Dillon & Shaw began business in Williston, a mile and a half from Castor. At the time of the sale of Castor lots in July, 1909, they moved to the latter place. Their business is a general one, including dry goods, men's furnishings, etc., as well as groceries, confectionery, and chinaware, their turnover being in the neighborhood of $150,000 during the past year.

Geo. M. Dillon, who is the active partner, was elected mayor of Castor in November, 1911. While Castor is only 2½ years old, it has already a population of some 2,000 people—such is the progress being made by some of those Western towns, which grow up like the proverbial mushroom. The merchant who gets in on the ground floor reaps the advantages.

Traveler Helps to Build Good Business

Tells of How Husband of Woman Went to the Yukon After Starting Wife in Grocery Business in Front Room of House—He Went After Gold, but Wife Made More Money Than He—Have Splendid Business Now.

"It is strange the way you become used to the people," remarked a Montreal traveler to The Grocer, "after calling upon them week in and week out the whole year round. Here is an interesting bit of a story that occurred to me as being of interest to you.

"Call him Jones so others will not know who it is. He and his wife will recognize it as soon as he reads this. Jones got the Klondyke fever eight or nine years ago when the Yukon country reported gold, and everyone possessed of the get-rich-quick idea caught the fever and imagined that here was something easy.

Establishes Grocery in House Front.

"Jones was one of the crowd and he decided that he must go, but he had his wife and children to provide for. So what does he do but open out the front of his house a bit, turn it into a small grocery shop, put in four hundred dollars' worth of groceries and hands it over to his wife telling her to try to make it pay. He asked me particularly to lend a hand to see that his wife made no mistakes.

"Jones had several children going to school and the oldest, a boy, was big enough to carry parcels after school hours. So while Jones was off in the Yukon district being roughly but surely wakened from his dream of gold, his wife was with little difficulty holding her own and building up a fairly good trade.

"At any rate, her husband marches home after being away a year and a half, but instead of a fortune he brought with him only six hundred dollars which, of course, was better than coming home without car fare. But his wife was able to show a good stock of groceries and somewhere around $800 or $1,000. Any way, they joined forces and continued the business. They did not need to hire anybody to help them so that all the money they received was theirs except for paying for living expenses and their goods.

"Now, the family is fairly well off. They have property worth over $12,000 besides a good business. The boy has $1,500 in the bank and the girl has quite a bit put away. So you see, you never can tell which way it is going to go in this world.

"I mention these things more as an encouragement to others who may be wondering whether anybody ever began business with less hope for the future than they. And yet Mrs. Jones did not flinch."

It also shows there are not a few in the trade who have to thank some traveler who has helped them at times.

Deposit Account System in B.C. Store

Customer May Shop by Phone and Have No Trouble Over Accounts, Change, Etc. —Money May Be Drawn at Any Time—Large New Store Recently Moved Into by The H. A. Edgett Co., of Vancouver—Departments Added.

Last December the H. A. Edgett & Co.'s new grocery store in Vancouver, B.C., was opened to the public. It is located on the corner of Cambie and Pender Streets. A little history of how H. A. Edgett has built up his present busisess and something about the deposit account system will prove interesting and profitable to readers.

Twenty years ago Mr. Edgett opened a little store on Harris Street. The town grew and Mr. Edgett's business grew with it. Later he moved down to Cordova Street, almost directly north of his present premises. That was a little store, too, with a frontage of twenty-five feet on Cordova. Business increased and in a few years the store was doubled.

The next move took Mr. Edgett to Hastings Street, and there he has served his customers for years. They came to him from all over the city in answer to the advertisement of good food which Mr. Edgett stated he was retailing at the best price he could quote.

The Present a Big Store.

And now the business has been moved up to larger and better accommodation. There is a big high ceiling store on the ground floor which has a frontage of 120 feet on Cambie Street and 100 feet on Pender. The building is three storeys high. Big glass windows admit light in profuse quantities.

The store building itself is clean, with white walls, hygienic shelving and sanitary equipment.

There is one new thing about the store which is particularly worth reference to. This is the system of deposit accounts which has been inaugurated.

According to this system a customer deposits a certain sum in the bank with the cashier at the store. The firm gives you 12 per cent. on your money when it is averaged up for the month. Of course you can take the money out at any time, but the idea of the thing means that you can secure your goods over the phone without having the fuss or bother of keeping accounts and settling at the end of the month. You get the benefit of all cash prices and have a help in times of stress should you be caught down town without any money.

The plan, stated Mr. Edgett, has been worked out successfully for both customer and store. It is a convenience to customers. Yet it is only one of the many useful and convenient features about the store.

Crockery and glassware have been added and a fine stock is offered for sale. Other new departments added were hardware, furniture, etc.

Large Display Space Given Confectionery

Edmonton Store Neatly Fitted Up to Attract New Business—Silent Salesmen and Dust Proof Bins Add to Appearance—How Vegetables are Kept Fresh and Free From Dirt—Rest Chairs for Customers.

In Western Canada practically every good grocery dealer has a confectionery department. This is so because western dealers are progressive and they know that confectionery sales mean good profits, and good profits and many sales are what builds up a business.

If a confectionery department is worth while, it is worth specializing on. This is the way The Acme Company, one of the Edmonton, Alta., high class department stores considers it. As will be noted from the accompanying illustration, a large share of the grocery section is given up to confectionery.

Interior View of the Grocery and Confectionery Department of the Large Acme Company's Store in Edmonton, Alta.

Silent Salesmen for Dispilay.

To the left as one enters the store are seen bright, attractive silent salesmen for displaying high class chocolates and other confections. The boxes in the bottom of the showcases are all shown attractively with cover turned outwards to produce the best effect. Boxes of high class bulk chocolate are shown behind glass on the shelves.

From the illustration may also be seen a small table laden, among other things, with a few choice brands of chocolates. A couple of rest chairs nearby invite the tired shopper to look them over.

The grocery department is fitted out with modern bin fixtures for the display of goods, as well as a large silent salesman near the door. Computing scales are used in this store and among the other fixtures is a large refrigerator across the rear of the department for butter, eggs, cheese and delicatessen articles. Fresh vegetables are displayed in a refrigerator case on the floor so they can be kept crisp and free from dust and flies.

A few attractively written show cards are placed about the store in conspicuous spots reminding shoppers of confectionery, fresh fruit, etc.

Attention to Cleanliness.

The Acme Company are strong believers in the power of display and a clean, bright store to create new business by attracting custom. The fixtures are of the latest design, the salesmen are dressed in white suits and the show cases and shelves present an inviting appearance.

This is one of the best assets a dealer can have. A clean store with neatly dressed salesmen attracts business as much as anything else, and once attracted it can be held by service and quality goods.

These are some of the ideas of J. E. Livingstone, manager of the grocery department of the Acme store. He is an artist in decorating the store and arranging the stock, which contributes much to the general impression of quality on those who enter. It is a good example to dealers in other Canadian towns and cities and especially to those which are older than Edmonton and which have had better opportunities.

SACCHARIN LAW IN U. S.

The United States Pure Food Board's order regulating the use of saccharin in foods as a substitute for sugar became effective last week. In that connection attorneys for certain food manufacturers made public a letter to the Secretary of Agriculture protesting that the decision of the board gave the impression that the use of saccharin was prohibited absolutely. The letter declared that the decision permits the use of saccharin providing a label indicates that it is used for the benefit of those to whom sugar may be deleterious to health.

The order of the board especially permits the use of saccharin in food for invalids or semi-invalids who cannot use sugar, and the food manufacturers argue that it is obvious therefore that its use cannot be regarded as dangerous to the health of well persons. They argue further that sugar is used as a condiment and that the public should have the privilege of choosing between sugar and saccharin provided the presence of the latter ingredient is distinctly declared upon the label.

Tariff Preference With West Indies

Hon. Geo. E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, Talks to The Grocer on this Question—Not Ready to Announce Schedule Until Agreement is Ratified—Flour, Cereals, Potatoes, Tropical Fruits, Raw Sugar Likely to be Affected —Better Steamships and Cable Facilities Referred to.

Those British West India Islands with which Canada is negotiating for a mutual tariff preference will be interested in what Hon. Geo. E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, has to say in reference to the question.

Mr. Foster when interviewed by The Canadian Grocer stated that the arrangement was on a preferential basis and is of a comprehensive scope so far as the exchange of products of the two countries are concerned.

"It includes exchanges of products on a wide scale and is based on a preference of the products of each country in the markets of the other," he said.

"What effect will this preference have on fruits, for instance, coming into Canada from the British West Indies?" was asked the Minister.

He thought a moment or two.

"Well, I guess that's a leading question," he remarked. "You see I cannot very well disclose information as to what goods may be more freely exchanged or the schedule of tariffs until the agreement goes before the various governments concerned. If I told you fruits would be cheaper, or that there would be no difference made, your conclusions would be obvious."

The Islands Negotiating.

"What islands are affected?" Mr. Foster was asked.

"They include British Guiana (whose chief export is probably sugar); Trinidad, (cocoa, oils and sugar); The Barbadoes (which produces molasses and sugar; St. Kitts, (various tropical products); St. Lucia, (cocoa, cotton); Mootserrat, (limes); Dominica, (cocoa); St. Vincent, (arrowroot); and Antigua, (tropical products).

"If the Bahamas, Bermuda, Jamaica and British Honduras desire to open negotiations, a provision is made to include them at any time," he added.

"Our chief exports to the West Indies are flour and cereals and potatoes.

"I have discovered that Canadian manufacturers have not understood well enough the possibilities of trade with their sister colonies in the West Indies. I know of an instance where considerable business has already been done in flour since these trade negotiations have been undertaken."

The Probable Effect.

While he would not make any definite statement in regard to the effect of the agreement—should it be ratified by all parties concerned—it is practically safe to assume that Canadian flour and cereals will enjoy some sort of a preference. On the other hand West Indian products such as tropical fruits, raw sugar, arrowroot, etc., should be similarly affected. The exact nature of the preference of course will not be known until the matter is sufficiently advanced to be assured of its being ratified.

"The agreement," said Mr. Foster, was made not in the sense of trying to drive a hard bargain, but in a spirit of generosity and brotherly kindliness which I have never seen before in any conference.

Steamship Facilities.

"The agreement, however good, might remain a dead letter, unless the means of steamship and cable communication between the two peoples were so arranged and carried out that it would be possible for the agreement to become fruitful in results. The Dominion of Canada, through its government is prepared to put its shoulder to the wheel, to do its share, and double its share if necessary, in order that these two matters should be brought to a conclusion. The cable rates, anywhere from 40 to 50 cents to seven shillings a word, must be brought down.

"The mother country," he said, "had a deep interest, as the guiding and helping power of these colonies, in this matter. The West Indies would help themselves with great vigor and initiative. The mother country would continue to help in the future as she had been doing! And Canada was willing to make extraordinary efforts if necessary, in order to accomplish these results desired; she stood ready to do her third, and more if necessary."

Direct Lines.

Mr. Foster intimated that the government would do more in the way of perfecting a system of commercial agents and trade commissioners in the future so as to facilitate the exchange of products of the two countries. A system of preference would be initiated as an impetus and attraction to trade; in this matter the government was prepared to go as far as conditions made it proper to go. And further, he promised that when steamship and cable communications were improved, the government would say that preferential goods shall come by direct line of steamships from the West Indies to Canada, and go from here there. This would double the amount of products shipped in his opinion.

Whether Canadian manufacturers take advantage of this or not was a question in Mr. Foster's mind. He hoped they were alive to their possibilities in selling to the West Indies.

"I think," he said, "that we make a mistake in Canada if we don't cast our eyes on foreign fields as well as sell at home. No war in history was ever so strenuously fought as to-day the war of commerce is being fought. To-day the manufacturing interests of the United States, of Germany, of Great Britain, and every other great country are exploiting every acre of the outside market they can exploit. They are getting into the foreign markets. And if manufacturers do not wake up they may find every fortress held by foreign rivals and it will be all the more difficult for them to get into these new fields.

U. S. Milling Interests.

That a preference will likely be granted Canadian flour is evidenced by the fact that United States millers are very anxious lest that country lose their trade. In fact while the negotiations at Ottawa were going on a representative of the United States milling interests was there endeavoring, it was said, to block a portion of the agreement giving a preference to Canadian flour and its products in the West Indies.

The Visitors Here.

Among the visitors from the Indies present at the conferences were the following:—W. D. Auchinlock, Auditor-General of Antigua; R. J. Cameron, C.M.G., Administrator of St. Lucia; Col. W. B. Davidson-Houston, Commissioner of Montserrat; F. W. Griffith, Supervisor of Customs, St. Vincent; H. W. Porter, Treasurer for Dominica; J. McI. Reid, British Guiana; T. L. Roxburgh, C.M.G., Administrator of St. Kitts; H. B. Walcott, Collector of Customs, Trinidad; F. A. C. Collymore, Barbadoes; J. C. Hazell, St. Vincent; J. C. Macintyre, Dominica; Adam Smith, Trinidad, and C. Wyatt, British Guiana.

Always make exact change. Never knock off the cents. One hundred of them make a dollar.

Making Better Store Interior Displays

Value of Bin Receptacles for Goods Which Should be Kept Free From Dirt—Combine the Showing of Samples With a Place for Stocks—Ensure the Goods Being Noticed—Carelessness Met With in Some Stores.

The first thing that strikes one on looking at the picture of the store interior on this page, is the system of displaying groceries by means of the bin receptacles. To the left, at the rear, behind the counter and beneath the counter itnself, can be seen these fixtures, and the effect they should produce on the eye of the customer can be readily imagined.

Samples Sure to Be Seen.

The biscuits contained in each bin are shown by the samples under glass on the outside. These samples must be seen by everyone with eyes on entering this store; there is no waste of time opening biscuit boxes on the counter and pulling them from the shelves. They are seen at a glance and because they are always to be seen more biscuits will be sold.

The same applies to other lines. No person can possibly approach the counter shown at the rear of this store and overlook observing the nuts, icing, candy, etc. This also means extra sales.

Indicative of Order.

The display bins in this photograph are certainly admirably shown and demonstrate their uses clearly without being elaborated on here. They show the attention given to interior appearance by the merchant. They indicate order, convenience and symmetrical arrangement—something to be desired in any store.

Too much can scarcely be said of the value of attractive, orderly interior display. Anyone who has gone about from town to town knows how to appreciate it in good stores. So many dealers forget the importance of the business it brings, that they are content to let stuff accumulate on the shelves, on the counters and floors, so that customers look upon the place as disorderly and the merchant as careless.

Floors Should Be Free.

There are stores known to the writer where it is almost impossible to accommodate more than two or three people. Boxes, soap cases, barrels and baskets are piled one on the other in the middle of the floor, in some cases so high that they prevent a view from one side of the store to the other.

In others may be seen paper, string and other refuse lying on the floor from morning till night without any apparent endeavor to make the floor look respectable.

With an equipment such as shown in the accompanying illustration it would of course be somewhat of a sacrilege to have a dirty floor with barrels and boxes piled half way to the ceiling.

Coffee Mill and Computing Scale.

In addition to the display receptacles, the metal ceiling is worthy of notice. Among the other fixtures to be seen are a coffee mill and computing scale and a cash carrier into the office of the firm. A refrigerator for the preservation of perishable goods is located in the corner at the end of the shelf behind the counter.

Business Getter and Holder.

That every dealer who can at all afford it, should aim to have a store that is attractive and inviting goes without controversy. The interior has much to do with attracting new custom and holding present patrons who are at all particular as to where they purchase. As this is the sort of trade that is above the average in its remunerative character, it should be catered to as much as possible—and the general impression gained on looking at the interior arrangement has much to do in assisting to create the extra business.

Automobile Delivery in Vancouver B.C.

Number of Retailers Have Adopted This Method—Speed in Delivering Rush Orders Is Commended—Auto Replaces Two Horses With Satisfactory Results —Wholesalers Using Motor Trucks.

By R. B. Bennett.

The auto in Vancouver, B.C., is becoming a feature in store service. The London Grocery was the pioneer in this line in the retail business in Vancouver, and even after many trying experiences, such as all pioneers have to put up with, this store stands by the auto for quick and satisfactory delivery. Last month Henderson's grocery has added a delivery auto to its equipment, and the report on it is that it has given eminent satisfaction.

A Business Getter.

"I have found," said Fred Walsh, proprietor of the London Grocery, "that it pays to have auto service as compared with the horse and wagon. Even if it costs more, there is the greater convenience and business-getter of having the goods delivered quicker. The auto goes with a rush, carries a big load, and in the hands of a good chauffeur the store gets first-class results."

The London Grocery has been considering a proposition to hand its delivery over to an auto service company on terms to be agreed upon. This has not been decided yet, but there is a probability of it coming to pass. It is contended that the company, which deals in autos, could do it cheaper, since with its repair shop and hands always available the expense of maintenance would be reduced. This is the big expense with the store, for autos need considerable fixing from time to time, but after all it is a question whether the cost of maintenance would not be less than for the horses required to give the same service.

When Roads are Good.

Henderson's Grocery has the advantage in that most of its trade is among people in the west end of the city where the roads are in a state of constant repair. It is not difficult even in the rainy weather to get to all parts of the district. This store's business has rapidly increased in recent months, and delivery necessitated either another horse and wagon, two having been used before, or an auto. It has been found that the auto did better than was expected. Double the ground could be covered than with a horse. This meant much to the housekeeper who perhaps was waiting for an order. It has been found by Henderson's that an auto delivery service brings business, for nothing is more pleasing to the customer than quick delivery.

This feature of a store is soon spread among neighbors, with the result that when something is wanted in a hurry, that store gets the preference, even if the person is trading somewhere else. From casual custom, it is not long before the full trade of that house is enjoyed.

Wholesalers Using Motor Trucks.

Of course, wholesale grocers in Vancouver have used the big trucks for some time, and have found them indispensable. They have done some of their own delivery to New Westminster. Auto delivery of wholesale goods to New Westminster will likely be much larger this summer, for the reason that the B. C. Electric Railway Co. has increased its rates. This coupled with slow delivery is causing the wholesalers to take action on their own account.

Not only are the jobbers using their own trucks, but they are utilizing the services of independent auto transfer companies. Generally, the trucks in the store service are no more than what are required for city delivery, and an independent company is a boon. The time occupied is an hour and a half, or at the outside two hours, which is a saving of from twelve to thirty-six hours over rail delivery. This feature alone, the wholesalers think, is enough to recommend the service. The road to New Westminster, outside the city of Vancouver, is macadam, but contracts are now being let for permanent pavement. This, when completed, will greatly facilitate auto delivery between the two cities.

For Conveying Ripe Fruit.

Ripe fruit has been hauled to the satisfaction of shippers. It would be almost an impossibility to utilize horses, since the trip would take from five to seven hours, and the fruit would be bruised by the passage. A team of horses could not make two trips in a day, so the expense would bar out this system of delivery. The auto truck seems to have created an opportunity for itself, that none but itself can fill.

Claim Made By Brantford Dealer—How New Lines Are Introduced—Fixtures And Display Considered Important Factors In Attracting Trade—A Delivery System With Merit.

Forde & Co., of Brantford, Ont., believe that to have the store stand out prominently so as to attract attention is a valuable feature in creating sales. Their present store was arranged with that in view.

For fifty years this firm, established by the father of the present proprietor, occupied premises on the opposite side of the street to the present location. While a good sound business was built up there, it was always felt they were prevented from obtaining best results by reason of the architecture of the store. Although the floor space was fairly large, the front was narrow, preventing efficient display and failing to attract the attention of passing customers to the store. For this reason a change of location was decided upon and a little over two years ago they moved to the present site.

The present store is arranged on the square plan, making it, in Mr. Forde's opinion, more convenient than the old one. The front is wide and outstanding, so that customers cannot fail to notice it when passing. In the centre is the door. On either side is a display space where goods can be seen from both interior and exterior, while farther outward are the display windows proper. The show windows are improved by mirrors for a background.

Arranged for Convenient Service.

The interior of the store, which is shown in the accompanying photograph, is arranged so as to be attractive to the eye and convenient for clerks to work. A counter extends along one side and the rear of the store. Two mirrors assist in the appearance of one side. On this side the shelves are arranged of separate circular display stands with bottled goods shown in this circular form. The attractiveness of this method of display is not shown up well in the photograph. Spice receptacles come beneath the shelves with larger bins for bulkier goods below them. Canned and bottled goods, built in systematic manner, are shown on the ledge above the shelves.

Metallic Ceiling Installed.

A factor in giving the store an attractive appearance is the sanitary metallic ceiling. This may be cleaned each spring with little difficulty. Canned goods are arranged around the pillars but it is the intention of the firm to place circular mirrored shelves around these pillars, so that any kind of goods, especially bottled, may be shown. Besides a long silent salesman, three racks for showing biscuits are among the fixtures in the store.

One of the chief trade attractors also, and when customers come in, they are introduced and their good points explained.

They have made a success of a number of lines in this way, a certain brand of fancy biscuits being one instance where results were good.

No price cards at all are used in the store. Mr. Forde explains that a high class trade is done and claims most people want good quality goods and are willing to pay the price.

"Yes, we find we can always sell the brand of goods we wish," says Mr. Hastings, the head clerk. "Customers put dependence in the grocer who always gives them good goods and customers will purchase goods which we recommend."

Note Attractive Appearance of the Metal Ceiling, the Shelves, and the Canned Goods Display About the Pillar.

which the store has is its neat, clean and attractive appearance of both front and interior. The store front is of itself distinctive, and when the windows are nicely trimmed they can hardly fail to attract the passer's attention. It is by no means an unusual thing to have people cross the street to view the windows while the goods in the interior also show up to good advantage from the sidewalk.

Fancy Biscuit Line Introduced.

When any new line of goods which customers are not acquainted with is received, an attempt is made to get customers to know them. If the quantity is large enough, a window display is put in. A display is made on the counter

The Delivery System.

This store has a delivery system which they believe saves them time and money. The delivery boxes are of the folding variety and fit together so they can be piled one upon another in the delivery wagon.

"We have had these delivery boxes for four years," said Mr. Forde; "and haven't lost one, and they are still as good as new. The first thing we make known to the driver is that he is responsible for those boxes and they are checked up every 2 or 3 weeks to see that none have disappeared. Previously, we were buying baskets frequently, as they became lost or worn out. Delivery is one of the important features of business anyway. People like to have their goods delivered right. To ensure this a separate box is given over to each customer's order."

A PICTURE OF A BASEBALL GAME.

E. J. Ryan, grocer, Dundas street, London, Ont., has a novelty in an advertising scheme for the sale of a certain brand of soap. He has one of his windows nicely decorated with the soap, and in the centre has a beautiful picture with a fine oak frame, entitled "It Is Up to Me."

The story of the picture is a baseball match, ninth innings, with the score a tie, two men out, and a man on third base. The picture shows the boy at the bat with determination on his face, also the boy behind the bat, with mask on his face signing the pitcher to strike the batter out and thereby win the game. It also shows a crowd of boys with eager faces looking on, some on the fence, some crouched down. Altogther it is a picture that appeals to every boy, who is a baseball fan.

Mr. Ryan offers this picture to the boy who sells the most soap, and it certainly has "caught on" with them. To all boys selling 100 bars he gives a ticket good for any Canadian League game. This scheme should be tried out wherever they have league ball.

Stopping the Reflections.

Window panes sometimes reflect the light and make it difficult for passersby to see inside when the interior is dark. One suggestion to prevent this reflection is to have the windows lighted from the sides if possible and have white ceilings and walls.

A Water Window Display.

"Come in, the water's fine." This was the inscription on a show card recently noticed in a Montreal window where bottled water was offered for sale. The display consisted of a mirror about 2½ by 1½ feet in dimensions placed flat on the bottom. About the edges of the mirror was strewn some sand. A perpendicular gas pipe about three feet high from the floor, with a globe on the top, stood at the edge of the mirror. At night when the gas was lit the mirror looked like a pond of water. The sand along the edge and shredded green paper covering the floor of the entire window made the scene even more realistic. Placed around the pond were several bottles of the water. The show card, "Come in, the water's fine," therefore had a double meaning.

Meat Slicer Saves Money.

A meat slicer for the grocer who handles meats is a profitable investment in the opinion of Jno. Carpenter, of Hamilton, Ont.

"It is far in advance of the big butcher knife," says Mr. Carpenter, "both in results to the grocer and satisfaction to the customer. If you slice a pound with a knife, it is not only usually poorly done, but the amount looks very small. However, if the same pound is cut with the slicer, it not only looks nice but it has the appeadance of more for the money. It saves money for the grocer, too, in the fact that waste is eliminated."

Increased His Coffee Sales.

What is possible by proper salesmanship efforts is shown by the fact that John Diprose, who conducts three stores in London, Ont., has succeeeded in building up a sale for 600 pounds per month of a certain coffee.

Mr. Diprose commenced to handle this coffee in a rather peculiar manner. Having bought out another grocer, a number of his customers said they would continue to deal with him if he handled this particular coffee. And so he did.

At first he was able to sell only 150 pounds per month. However, the fact that certain customers liked it so well gave Mr. Diprose reason for recommending it to others. That customers will purchase on the advice of their grocer is shown in the number of people whom he succeeded in getting to try it. Its good quality brought them back again for it.

Display of Canned Fish.

A canned fish window recently arranged by B. T. Williamson, of the Barnsdale Trading Co., Stratford, Ont., was one that attracted a great deal of public attention and also was successful in the primary object—that of selling goods.

A miniature fish pond six by three feet was made in the centre of the window. This was made of a galvanized iron tank. All the rest of the window was filled in with real sod. A figure of a "nigger boy" with a straw hat and fishing pole with the line in the pond made the display an interesting one. Pyramids of salmon were built up at the rear corners while a large show card read "Good fishing at this store."

Young and old alike were forced to stop and view the display and although it took some little time and trouble to arrange, the firm felt that it was nevertheless profitable.

Dealer Recommended the Flour.

The cold weather of the past winter brought out many purchasers of flour beyond the usual number. Possibly it was a desire to return to homemade bread or to make use of the steady fire required in the home.

A Peterborough, Ont., grocer tells of a customer who, when she stated she intended to make bread at home, also remarked she had forgotten the flour formerly used.

The grocer recommended a brand that is known throughout Canada for its good qualities both in bread and pastry. The woman accepted it on her grocer's recommendation. It gave every satisfaction but when she needed a second bag she went to a store that sells more flour and feed than groceries. This dealer recommended a different brand and claimed that it was as good, if not better, than that she had obtained from the grocer. It is also being widely advertised. But the proof of the pudding is in the eating. The customer did not like the bread as well and also concluded that it did not make as white a bread as the first flour. The result was that she returned to the grocer's suggestion again and is still using it.

Letter to Money Savers.

Eric C. Jamieson, grocer, corner Wilson and Fairleigh Ave., Hamilton, Ont., struck upon a good introduction to a circular letter which he sent out some ago to get new customers. Here it is:

"To Money Savers.—Are you a money saver? If not, please hand this to your neighbor. Modern business requires modern methods, and this grocery and butcher shop is determined to move forward with the most progressive."

Reading further on is noted:

"Let's pull together. Listen: Give us your cash trade and we will share our profits with you. Here's the plan: With each cash purchase you will get a printed receipt from our new cash registers showing the date and amount. Return receipts for cash purchases amounting to $25 and get 50 cents in trade free."

Doesn't Hide His Light.

The complaint is sometimes made that the show window loses its advertising value while it is being dressed. One expert Canadian grocery window trimmer recently told the writer that his show windows continued in their work while they were being arranged.

"I do not believe in pulling down the blind and shutting myself off from the public when dressing a window. I allow people to see me working at the display. It interests them. They wonder what I am making. Probably if they are near the store when it is finished they will call to see what it is like. I have often seen quite a crowd in front of the window when it was being trimmed. A couple of people will stop; others will see them watching and come to. You know just how it is.

"Another method I have of maintaining the value of a window while trimming it, is by the use of show cards. Cards announcing special prices or new goods are put up. A couple of such cards will often attract considerable business.

"Show cards are valuable things," he continued. "In the summer I use more show cards and put less goods in the window, as the hot weather frequently deteriorates many lines."

Displays that Sold Well.

Fred Millman, grocer, of Woodstock, Ont., believes in keeping window displays to one line at a time.

"When several different lines are shown in the window at once, a person's attention is not concentrated on anything in particular and the result is the window fails to sell goods, and that is what it is arranged for."

When Mr. Millman gets in any line he wishes to push he tries, if possible, to get enough to make a good window display, if he feels at all as if he can sell that quantity.

A recent window which this store had was of castile soap. It was just a simple display but a considerable quantity was used. A price card was added. That the display was a business getter is shown by the fact that in little more than a week about seven cases of the soap were sold.

Another similar case of the window selling goods was that in which a shipment of honey in pails was received. The window was trimmed with this line and the total shipment of about 100 pails was cleaned up in a short time.

Another window in which the one line idea was carried out was a display of pickles, all constructed out of the one brand of pickles. The floor of the window was merely covered with fine sawdust and the bottles scattered about on it. A price card was used and the window brought considerable business to the store.

Turns Bare Wall to Advantage.

At one side of the entrance to a Hamilton store there is a plain wall. When customers were leaving the store their eyes used to rest upon it. The proprietor's eyes as he came out one day also observed it. He noticed it was bare and unattractive and at once began to plan to improve it.

To-day, a customer on leaving the store beholds that glad hand sign, "Call again." in place of the bare wall. Customers will not, however, be allowed to see it until it becomes so old that it creates no attention. In a week or so it will be changed to "Have you forgotten anything?" Thus will this unattractive spot be turned to good purpose in advertising. Other signs will be: "Did you order tea?" "We have fresh oysters to-day." "Fresh halibut for dinner," "Have you everything for baking?"

These short and pithy signs create business.

Summer Goods That Need Care.

Great care has to be exercised in the handling of many lines of summer goods that they may be retained in the best condition for sale. A Brantford, Ont., dealer gives some pointers that will offset loss from spoiling on certain lines. "Where bulk pickles and olives are carried, the matter of keeping the brine in condition is an important one. The brine preserves the product and if it is not in proper condition, it cannot do its duty as a preservative.

"Cheese will sometimes swell in the summer from the effects of the heat. Put a cheese that shows signs of puffing as a result of the hot weather in cold storage, and the effect of the heat will be overcome completely.

"Measures," he said, "Should be taken to keep rats and mice out of flour. Wormy, mouldy flour will result from a storage that is not dry, clean and in every way sanitary."

A Distinctive Calendar.

E. C. Matthews, a Parliament Street. Toronto, grocer, gave to customers at Christmas time one of the handsomest calendars one would want to hang up. Besides being pretty, it is useful. It will serve as a brush holder for instance, and part of its construction is a thermometer. The entire calendar represents an exterior view of a house with its balconies. windows, slate roof, etc. The card-board used is of a heavy design, in beautiful gray, green and gold colors, the stone construction of the house being shofn by blocking off the cardboard with indentations. The thermometer is attached to a white background, which it itself the large front window of the house.

While these calendars cost considerable money, Mr. Matthews states they created a mild sensation around Parliament Street. Everybody was after them and of course the demand could not be supplied, as only about 250 were secured. In Mr. Matthews' opinion they were a splendid advertisement. When you get a calendar get a good one, is the advice of this dealer.

History of Food Legislation in Canada

First Adulteration Act Passed in 1874— Not Much Interest Taken Then — Amendments Made in 1884 in Force To-day—Food Standards Already Prepared and Those in Course of Construction.

By W. S. Greening.

It must be confessed that in Canada the Dominion Parliament has given very little attention to the subject of safeguarding the people of this country from fraud and adulteration in the matter of food and drugs. The amount of time and thought given to this question is distressingly small, and although we have an adulteration act on the statute book, it was so carelessly drawn and its provisions for enforcement are so vague that it may be said to be practically non-operative.

Canada Thirty Years Behind

Of course a good many excuses can be urged in palliation. Canada is young. We have a small population in the midst of a vast country. The first aim has always been to provide facilities for the proper development of this great territory. Thus we see Parliament has had to spend most of each session discussing railroads, canals, the organization of new provinces, agricultural problems and kindred subjects. Purely social legislation has had to await its turn and usually the turn never comes. When a subject like purity in foods becomes too pressing to be ignored, the Government takes the matter up grudingly—gives it as little attention as possible—and then returns to the all important subject of the development of natural resources.

There can be only one result. In the matter of food legislation, Canada is about thirty years behind the rest of the civilized world.

The Initial Move.

Our first Adulteration Act was passed in 1874. The activities of the English Parliament had been reflected in various American states, notably Massachusetts, and Canada could not ignore a movement of such importance. Certain provisions concerning the adulteration of foods were tacked on to the Inland Revenue Act in 1868 as an amendment to that Act, and passed without a division. There may have been some discussion in the House. Hansard was not in existence at that time so it is impossible to say for certain; but it created so little public interest that the matter was not even mentioned in the "Globe" of that year.

As this was the foundation of all subsequent acts, a summary of the provisions may be interesting. Analysts were appointed in Halifax, Montreal, London, St. John, Toronto and Quebec. The Inland Revenue officers were to collect samples of goods suspected to be adulterated, and submit them to the analysts. On receiving a certificate that these suspicions were well founded, they were to seize and destroy the goods. The analysts were to report quarterly to the Minister of Inland Revenue at Ottawa, who was to present the results to Parliament annually. The dealers were obliged to give samples whenever requested, and the penalty for selling adulterated food was $100 for the first conviction, and $200 for a subsequent offence. A manufacturer was to be fined $100 for a first offence, and if caught a second time, was liable to six months' imprisonment.

Too Many Loopholes.

It will be seen that this is rather vague, especially as the definition of adulteration in the Act was faulty and left ample loopholes for a clever lawyer to find a weakness. The enforcement was entirely in the hands of local analysts and Inland Revenue officers who were busy men, and naturally, did not relish any additional duties. The penalties were really far too heavy, and convictions were almost impossible even when the officers of the law showed a reasonable zeal. The Act was practically a dead letter for ten years, when in 1884 the matter was again given a hearing at Ottawa.

Following a resolution by Mr. Costigan, the House of Commons debated the proposed amendments to the Act in March of that year. Conditions were really very bad and the subject deserved careful consideration, but it was a busy time and the Government attempted to force the new amendments through as quickly as possible. They were only partially successful, as Hon. Edward Blake, who was then leader of the Opposition, insisted on some light being thrown on the subject. The result was a very pretty passage at arms between the Liberal leader and Sir John A. Macdonald. Most of the discussion was very far from the point at issue, but some of it is illuminating and will no doubt serve as a guide when the subject is again brought before Parliament.

A Jurisdiction Dispute.

Mr. Blake first raised the objection that the matter was out of the jurisdiction of the Dominion House, and properly belonged to the individual provinces. Any action would, therefore, be an encroachment on provincial rights. This was disputed on the ground that although the provinces, and indeed municipalities, could pass laws regulating foods and drugs, yet the Dominion could regulate inter-provincial shipments as well as foreign trade. Sir John A. Macdonald pointed out that the various provinces had failed to enact any legislation on the subject, and as it was of undoubted importance to the nation as a whole, the duty of the Federal House was clear. This point has been finally settled in favor of the Dominion, which is good sense as well as sound law. If each province were to pass a different food law, we would have the same difficulty that has hampered the United States.

The debate was interesting from the point of view of parliamentary oratory, but as very few of the members had any real knowledge of the subject most of the speeches had only a very remote connection with the point of issue. A few trifling amendments to the text were made, after which the Bill was passed without a division.

Get Copy of the Act.

The Adulteration Act of 1884 is in force to-day. It was amended in 1888, 1890, 1896, and 1900, but these changes are comparatively unimportant, being mostly definitions. The whole Act is in chapter 133 in the Revised Statutes of 1906, and every dealer in food products should make it his business to secure a copy (which may be had free of charge on application to Ottawa) and carefully study its provisions. He would be well repaid.

The new Act provided for the appointment of a chief analyst who was to be attached to the staff of the Inland Revenue Department at Ottawa. He was to be a final arbitrator whenever any question was raised as to the correctness of any analyses made by a local analyst. He was to generally supervise the work of the laboratory of Inland Revenue and prepare from time to time bulletins setting forth the results of the collection of samples. These were to be issued to the public and contain the names of the vendors from whom the inspectors obtained samples, as well as names of manufacturers when possible. The exact condition of each article examined was to be shown, together with the opinion of the analyst regarding its purity and fitness for the purpose for which it was sold. In all, 231 of these buletins have been issued in twenty-seven years. They cover a wide range of articles and are really the most valuable work the Government has done along the lines of pure food.

When Adulteration is Found.

The procedure is similar to the English practice. The Minister of Inland Revenue, acting on information, may order a collection of the articles suspected to be adulterated, and these samples are bought and paid for in the usual way by the Inspectors of Inland Revenue. If they are found to be adulterated under the meaning of the Act, the seller is obliged to pay a sum varying from $8 to $14 to cover the cost of the analysis. This is not a fine, and has to be paid in any event. The fact being thus established, the Government may bring an action in the ordinary courts of the district in which the adulterated goods were sold.

If the action is successful the fine varies from $5 to $200 for a first offence, and a fine or imprisonment, or both, for a subsequent conviction. In 1898 an amendment provided the retail dealer with an additional safeguard in the form of a warranty of purity from the manufacturer. If the vendor can produce this the action is shifted to the giver of the waranty, but the warranty does not relieve the retailer from the necessity of paying the cost of analysis. A clause provides for the fixing of standards of purity. These may be established by the Governor-General in Council at any time, and have the force of law at the expiration of 30 days after publication in the Canada Gazette.

Lack of Enforcing Facilities.

To enforce this law (which is wide enough in all conscience) the magnificent sum of $15,000 was provided by an optimistic government. Some effort was made to put the new law into operation but the Department was terribly handicapped in two ways. The amount of money at their disposal was too small to make the work of collecting samples and analyzing them at all thorough. The laboratory was so small that several months had to elapse between the collection of samples and the final determination of their purity; then when the Department had a case ready and proceeded against an offender it was found almost impossible to get a conviction in the courts owing to a lack of proper standards of purity. In a few cases of actual conviction the judge imposed the smallest possible fine. After a few experiments of this kind the Department practically gave up the unequal struggle and the law became as nearly a dead letter as any law can be. Thus matters drifted on until 1908..

Canada as a Dumping Ground.

The American Food and Drugs Act attracted a great deal of attention in Canada, and it was found that in many instances foods condemned by our neighbors were being shipped into this country. Naturally, Canadians were indignant. Some of the newspapers had strong editorials on the subject, and demanded an explanation of how this was possible, but nothing could be done to stop it as our law did not cover the matter. Still, it had a good effect in arousing public opinion, and it was felt that it was only a question of time before a new stringent law would be passed.

Standards of Purity Needed.

A. McGill had just succeeded to the office of Chief Analyst. He is a chemist with a world-wide reputation, and was thoroughly familiar with the whole question. No man had a clearer idea of the defects of the Adulteration Act of 1884, of which the principal weakness is the lack of proper standards of purity. To remedy this, Mr. McGill prepared a complete set of provisional standards and submitted them to the manufacturers and importers for criticism and approval. Some of these have since become law by an order of the Governor-General in Council; they cover milk and milk products (1910), meats (1910), grain products (1911), and beverages (1911).

Some Expected Standards.

Others covering baking powder, flavoring extracts, jams and cream of tartar are in course of preparation and may be expected shortly. Mr. McGill has endeavored to avoid the difficulties and mistakes which have occurred in the United States, and has therefore proceeded with caution in order not to upset trade conditions more than is absolutely necessary. He has so far given the manufacturers every consideration, and there is no fear that any legitimate interest will suffer at his hands.

In spite of these standards the law is still imperfect, and in our next paper we will go more fully into this weakness and try to arrive at some principles on which an effective adulteration act should be based.

Woman Gets Outside Orders for Brandon Firm

Sutherland & Robertson Only In Business Since 1910 and Have Already Built Up Good Business — Specialize on Nova Scotia and Ontario Apples.

No matter how crowded a business or profession may be there is always room for ability and push. This fact is exemplified in the advances of the young firm of Sutherland & Robertson, Brandon, Man.

They commenced business in November, 1910, in a good stand on 10th St., and from the first made the busisess go ahead. The partners had both been clerks in grocery store in the city for three years previous to beginning on their own account. This, together with their former experiences in Scotland, from which country they emigrated to seek their fortune in the Great West, made them familiar with the trade. The firm handle high grade and fancy groceries, and make a specialty of fruit, keeping in stock large quantities of Nova Scotia and Ontario apples, and other fruits.

One feature of their business is that they have a bright, business young woman on their staff who takes orders in the city, and has been quite successful. The members of the firm believe in making use of modern appliances and use the telephone freely to keep their city and country customers informed of the arrival of new and attractive goods.

They also use the cash register and have installed an account register, of the benefits of which they are quite enthusiastic.

It is seedless to say that the store is neat, clean and inviting in appearance, while their attractive windows are a subject of remark.

Their staff consists of, besides themselves, two salesmen, two deliveries and an office clerk.

Price Maintained in Barrel of Herring Sale

Human Nature Story of a Farmer Attempting to Get Dealer to Cut His Price—The Various Tacks Used and How Each Proved Unsuccessful—"Didn't Have Enough Money" Was One Exploded Reason.

A farmer, his wife and infant in arms called into the store one rather chilly evening and with no ceremony whatever dropped into the chairs that surrounded the cheery coal fire.

Mr. Hutchings, evidently knowing their characteristics, said nothing, but went on with the duties to which he had been attending. Presently both husband and wife went for a stroll about the store and stopped at the provision counter. They exchanged a few inaudible comments and went back to the stove. In a minute or two, when the grocer thought they might be in a position to know what they wanted, courteously asked if they had seen anything they would like.

Began on Salt Pork.

A student of human nature can learn no better lessons than those that come by serving behind a counter in a village or country town store.

All characters of individuals come under one's view. Customers from the country who have their own ideas of business and who so frequently endeavor to get goods as cheaply as possible are a study in themselves.

Farmer and Wife Visit Store.

This is well exemplified in a herring sale which was recently made in Charles Hutchings' store at Port Hope, Ont.

"What is the price of that piece of salt pork?" the man asked.

"Seventeen cents per pound," replied Mr. Hutchings.

"The next piece to it?" was the next question.

"That is 18 cents."

"How much do you charge for a barrel of herrings?"

"They are $3.75 a barrel," said the grocer.

"Three dollars and seventy-five cents!" exclaimed the man, feigning surprise. "Why I can get them for $3.50."

The Place to Go.

"Well," said Mr. Hutchings, "I guess that would be the place to go for them. Mine are No. 1 Labrador herrings and I cannot afford to sell them cheaper. You had better get them wherever you can for $3.50"

The grocer was literally coaxed to accept $3.50.

"Come on now," coaxed the farmer, "you can give me them for $3.50—that's all the money I got."

"I can't help it," was the firm reply, "those herrings cost me practically that much and I cannot sell them for less than my price."

To Provide the Extra Quarter.

"You had better take the $3.50 now," was the next tack, "and I'll bring you in some turnips next time I come to make up the balance. Won't you trust me to do that?"

But Mr. Hutchings was not to be taken off his guard.

"You pay me $3.75 and I'll pay for the turnips when you bring them in."

"But $3.50 is all I've got," and turning to his wife, "have you any money with you?" he asked.

The wife had none. His ruse was to make the dealer think he would lose the sale if he didn't accept the offer.

Wanted to See Them.

At this point Mr. Hutchings turned away and attended to some other work, leaving the farmer and his wife to talk the matter over. Finally he asked to have a look at the herrings which were stored in the warehouse. The request was readily granted and dealer and farmer departed from view.

In a few minutes they came back and the $3.75 was counted out from among a great deal more money and the sale was made. Thereupon the customers left the store.

"I knew that fellow would never come back with the quarter or anything else," remarked Mr. Hutchings. "I was sure he had the money and I couldn't afford to sell the fish any cheaper."

All of which shows the value of a dealer knowing something about human nature and enough to maintain his margin of profit.

To Stop Dead Beats.

In Port Hope as well as in every other town grocers have trouble with poor pays. One dealer there suggests a closer relationship among the various grocers to watch more colsely those who make it a point to run accounts and to get out of paying their debts, if at all possible.

"It would pay the merchants of every town," he said, to have definite arrangements regarding a policy to deal with newcomers and such people who move from one section to another. We ought to be united enough not to be done by these dead beats. If when someone ask for credit whom we do not know, we should find out all about the family, where they came from, with whom they dealt last, whether they paid promptly, what the husband does, how the people live and anything else that would assist us in keeping out of debt.

"If for no other reason I think it would pay us to get together on this point. The only difficulty is that new dealers starting in business are often anxious to take trade away from others and will frequently give credit indiscriminately. If the trade were united and knew definitely what the other fellow was going to do in such a case so that there would be no misunderstandings, it would be better for all of us."

Loss of a $39 Debt.

An instance was cited by one merchant where a woman had run up a bill of $70 with him. It became a rather serious matter and he finally had to take steps to collect. He got members of the family to work for him for a time and reduced the bill from $70 to $50 and then down to $39. Just at that time the husband, who had been out of work, left the town for Kingston or some other city and his family soon followed.

"What chance is there now of me ever getting that money back?" asked the dealer.

EFFECT OF APPEARANCES.

Appearances play an important part in modern business. The firm which appears progressive is the one which receives a good share of business. People decline to deal with the listless and inaggressive dealer. They pass him by to go to his neighbor who puts on an appearance of business.

The listless dealer leans against the counter in a dreamy fashion and munches peanuts. His window is a jumble of goods scarcely discernible through glass that needs cleaning badly. A customer comes along. She views the dirty and unattractive window. She sees the dealer resting on the counter. He appears so listless that she fears to disturb him. She passes on to the next store, where behind clean and attractive windows, the grocer is busily engaged in arranging a display. He appears ready for business. She enters and buys.

It behooves the grocer to look busy. The dealer who looks busy attracts business to his store. There are so many things which he can do in his spare moments to improve the store's appearance, that he has no excuse for standing around with apparently nothing to do.

A Mentor, Ohio, potato grower has discovered a new way to make money out of potatoes. He carefully washes each one, wraps it in an individual wrapper on which his name is prominently displayed an charges double prices for them. They have been jocularly termed "massaged" potatoes from their appearance. A brief history of each potato is given on the wrappers.

Dealer Built Up Condensed Milk Trade

Took Advantage of Admission of One of His Customers — For Long Time Was Sore on Salesman Who Got Him to Stock a Dozen Tins—Now Sells About Case Per Week.

The dealer who makes use of the experiences of one customer to sell more goods to another is the one who is destined to be successful.

This condensed milk story will serve to illustrate the point more clearly. More than a year ago a salesman of a certain condensed milk company was calling on the retail dealers in St. Catharines, Ont., to get them interested in his line and explain to them its advantages.

In one particular store the retailer, who had never handled the line, was skeptic as to its merits and selling power. He steadfastly refused to buy, but the persistent salesman stayed with him and finally practically "forced" a dozen on his hands, knowing he could easily get rid of that number anyway.

A Year Afterwards.

About a year later the same salesman was in St. Catharines, and called on this dealer again. He was somewhat surprised to see a shelf well filled up with the condensed milk, and was curious to know the reason.

"When I was around here a year ago," he said, "you would scarcely buy a dozen of milk; now you have a shelf full—how's that?"

The dealer after a moment's hesitation recalled the circumstance.

"So you're the man," he replied, "that I was sore on for six months after you forced that dozen on me. Do you know that for half a year that lay on my shelf and I didn't sell a can. Then one day a woman purchased a 5-cent can, and every day after that came back for more.

It was Against His Will That he Bought the First Dozen.

Selling Case Each Week.

"I asked her what she did with it, and found that she used it for tea, coffee, etc., and for all baking purposes. Milk in St. Catharines was 8 cents a quart at the time, so she was saving 3 cents every day. I told others about this, and in a short time I had a first-class trade."

This retailer is now turning over a case per week.

It is a fact that trade in condensed and evaporated milk is extending rapidly. The writer knows of one wholesaler distributing as much as 25 cases three times in two weeks, whereas but a short time ago he sold no more than 10 or 15 cases in a month. It is produced in clean, sanitary factories, and can be depended upon as a thoroughly reliable and completely sterilized food.

Customer Enlightens Him on Cheapness of Condensed Milk.

Care After Opening Can.

A point that dealers might make in selling this milk is in reference to the length of time it will keep if proper care is taken when holes are punched in the top of the tin. If the can is shaken the milk will fill up the holes and thus prevent the air from getting in. A still further precaution is to place a small piece of paper over the holes as well. Condensed milk has been known to keep for six weeks in a warm room when both these precautions were attended to.

Not only can the grocer use such selling talk as described above, but every time a customer says she liked a certain article he can use the knowledge with splendid results.

"Here is something I wish you would try," was recently heard in a store. "Mrs. So-and-So got some the other day and she was well pleased with it. She said it made the finest jelly she has ever had." This had the effect of making an extra sale, and no doubt many similar sales were made not known to the writer. If every dealer watched carefully for this sort of selling talk no end of extra sales would be made throughout the year.

One Year After—The Shelves were Well Filled as Large Demand Had Been Created.

HOW PARTIALITY LOSES TRADE.

If a dealer wishes to retain customers, he must use everyone the same. He must give all equal service and must sell goods to each one at the same price. In all well regulated stores there are no premiums, discounts or cuts in price that may not be shared in by all. One customer buys a bag of flour and is charged $3. Another customer comes in and you sell her a bag for $2.90. You may think you are winning over a customer for good by giving her a reduction of ten cents, while at the same time you may be losing another. It's wonderful how these things leak out, but it is often the case that the first customer finds out you have charged her ten cents more than another. You will quite likely lose that customer, although you may never know the reason.

But it does not stop there always. Perhaps this woman acquaints her neighbor with the fact that you charged her 10 cents more than another. The story goes the rounds among your customers and they will look on you with a certain amount of suspicion in future deals. You have lost their confidence in you which is the worst thing that can happen to any dealer. That little cut in price has, like the germ of some dreaded disease, slowly and gradually, all unknown to you, been tearing down the confidence which customers would have otherwise shown in your integrity.

British Columbia Empire Day Window

Dressed Appropriately For The Occasion It Attracted School Children and Parents—Map of British Empire Shown With Products From Different Parts of The Empire Connected by Red, White and Blue Ribbon—An Example of What Can Be Done On Other Special Occasions.

Window displays appropriate for particular seasons, special occasions and patriotic holidays are always advisable. The mind of the passer-by is already inclined towards the spirit of the time and anything associated with the occasion all the more easily attracts.

Besides selling goods, such displays create a most favorable impression and give to the store a reputation it did not not have before.

An Empire Day Window.

A splendid example of this "special occasion" display comes from South Hill, British Columbia, a reproduction of the window being shown herewith.

Display Arranged Especially for Empire Day, Showing Where Certain Products in the Grocery Store Come From. Articles in the Window are Attached to Country of Origin on the Map by Means of Ribbon.

The idea is a product of the mind of F. J. Rolston. Empire Day of last year was the reason for the display and it was certainly arranged most appropriately.

In the first place a large flag formed the background. Spread out in front of this was a map of the world with the British Empire standing out in red. Different points on the map can be seen joined by ribbons to certain foodstuffs in the window. These ribbons were in appropriate red, white and blue colors and the various products shown were those of British origin.

Products From All Over The World.

For instance, there was lime juice from the Island of Malta limes; nutmegs from Sierra Leone in Africa; molasses from the Barbadoes; tea from the Solomon Islands; and butter from New Zealand. Coming nearer home there were salmon and fruit from British Columbia factories, and the Homeland was not overlooked with its oatmeal and English vinegar.

School Children Attracted.

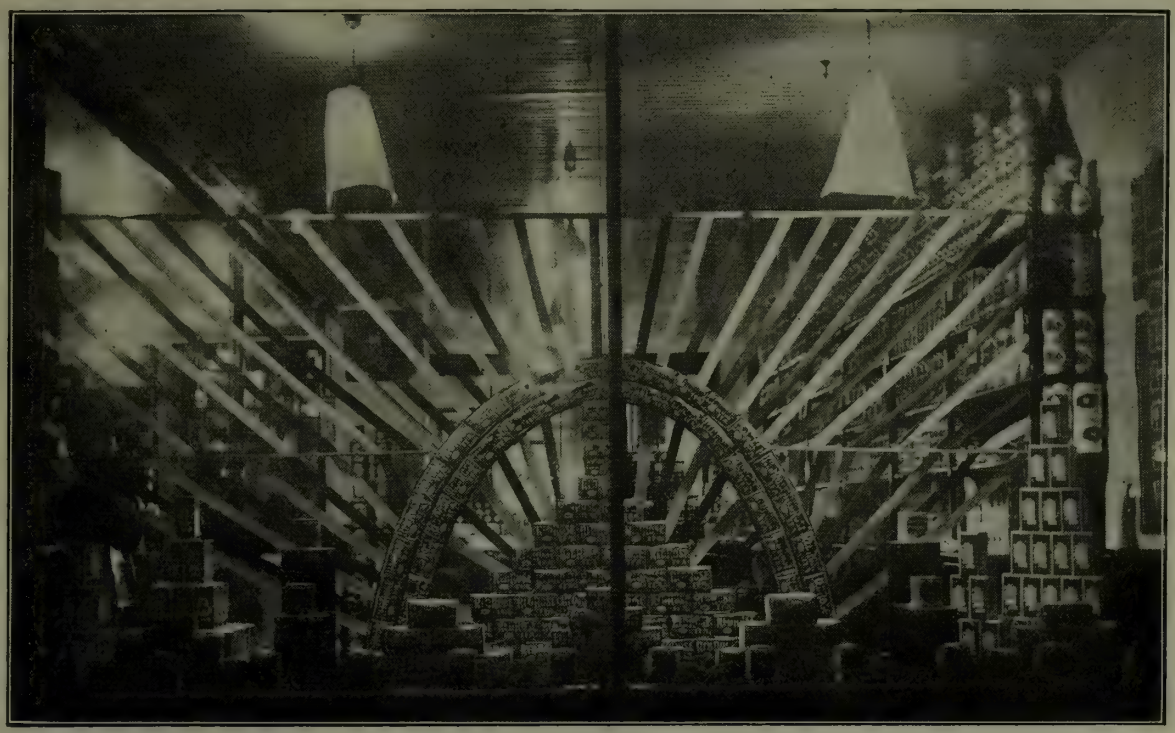
This was a highly educative window. It not only attracted the attention and interest of the school children who traced the manufactured product on the ribbons to their place of origin, but it got the attention of the older folk who did the same. It proved highly educative and apart from its novelty, assisted in spreading the reputation of the Rolston store.

As one who saw it remarked. "a grocery store is perhaps one of the most prosaic of institutions, but the romance in the ordinary things of life is well shown in that window."

Equal opportunities are presented for other holiday occasions. There is the 24th of May, Dominion Day, Labor Day, Thanksgiving, etc., all of which can be made most useful in selling extra goods and spreading the reputation of the store.

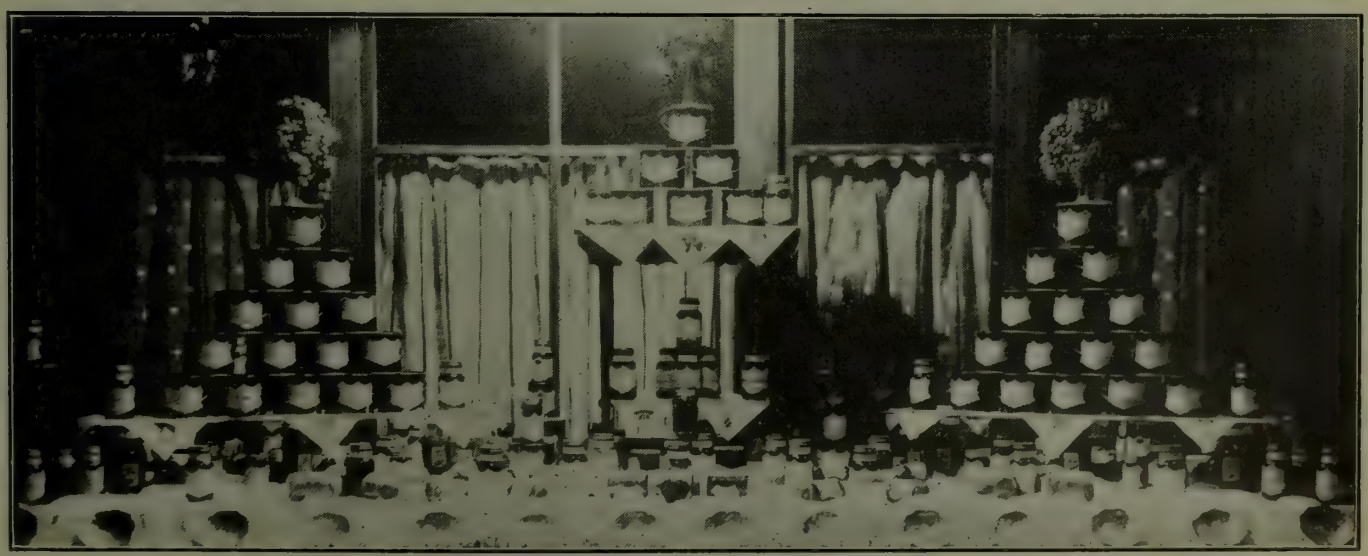
Bring Out The Original.

Every dealer or some of his clerks have some original streak about them, and this should be developed. Get your mind working like Mr. Rolston. The home town paper will only be too pleased to make reference to any worthy display—as it did in this case—and here again comes in some extra advertising. Try it for yourself and get the benefit of the reputation, the advertising and the extra sales.



A STATE OF MAINE TEA WINDOW.

This window was dressed by A. H. Dickison, of Hopkins Bros., Fairfield, Me. The tea packages used in the arch are the original filled packages. It is a display which presents a good appearance and can be arranged with little difficulty.



JAM AND PRESERVE DISPLAY.

A neatly and simply arranged window from Cranbrook, B.C. In the centre is a small table with pails of jam on top and preserves in glass beneath. On either side are steps of jam pails topped by bouquets of grapes. Floor of window is covered with white cloth. Cleanliness is a feature.

A "Time to Brighten Up" Polish Display

Window Suggestion Showing How Box Stove, Furniture, Metal and Silverware Polishes Can Be Impressed Upon Minds of Probable Customers—Business in These Lines Now Going to Other Trades, Which Grocer and General Merchant Can Secure.

All grocers and general merchants do not give to polishes the attention which they rightly deserve. There is a big trade transacted in these lines, so much so that it makes it worth while for the grocer to put some selling effort behind them.

In many towns and districts we find a good deal of this trade going to other dealers such as the hardwareman, the shoeman, jeweler and druggist. They are getting a big share of this trade in some cases, because they make a bid for this business.

Grocery Store is Best Medium.

Where the grocer and general merchant have also made their bid for this business, they are generally doing the larger proportion—which is only natural. The housewife is the person who mostly buys these lines and the grocer has many opportunities of interesting her in them.

We have quite a list of polishes which comes within the scope of the grocer. Besides shoe and stove polish, lines which he should carry are furniture, silverware and metal polishes.

Require Attention to be Moved.

Not only should he stock these lines, but he should put his salesmanship behind them. While they are lying in a drawer or underneath the counter without a clerk or even a showcard to say a word in their favor, customers are not likely to get very enthusiastic. They are likely, indeed, to forget entirely about polishes until they go in to the store of some other dealer and find them on display, and the clerks explaining their good points. There they are likely to buy.

Display Will Mean Much.

It behooves the grocer to be the first to interest customers. These lines should be displayed prominently on counter and shelf at all times. A window should be devoted to these associated lines at least twice a year, and more often, if possible. Now is about the best time to display these lines in the show window. The reason is that housecleaning is now general and furniture, pots, pans, stoves and silverware are all receiving their share of attention in the general clean-up—surely an ideal time to bring furniture, metal, silverware and stove polish to the housewife's attention. Explain to her their uses and how they are used.

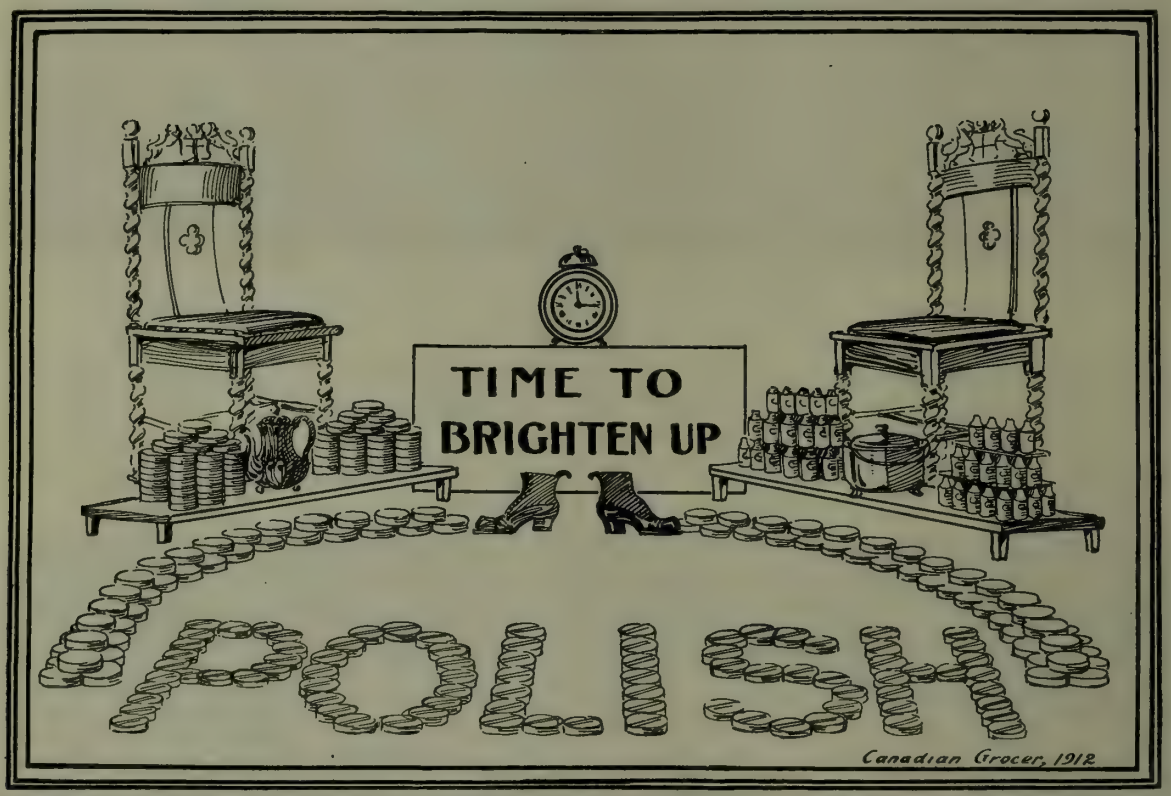
Get After Shoe Polish Trade.

With the snow once more a thing of the past and with streets becoming dried up, people will be discarding their rubbers and giving some attention to the appearance of their shoes. For this reason shoe polish should be brought to the fore.

Herewith is a suggestion for a window display of the different kinds of polishes. The word "polish" is worked out in the foreground with cans of stove polish. A half circle of tins of shoe polish is broken at the back by a space where two shoes are shown. These shoes show the shining quality of the polish. One is left dull and dirty, while the other is shined up in the best possible style.

Two chairs are shown, one on either side. Here the good work of the furniture polish is shown, again by contrast, one chair being polished and the other not.

The work of the metal polish is shown by the pot on the right hand side, one half of which is polished, and the balance left dull. On the left the work of the silver polish is shown. "Time to brighten up" is the inscription on the show card, while the clock carries out the "time" idea.



Every dealer should have a few displays of various polishes during the year. The above is a suggestion described in accompanying article.

People Partial to Polishes Now.

Such a window should attract considerable attention. It is something out of the ordinary. At this time of year people are interested in these lines. The contrast between the polished and unpolished exhibits should drive home the arguments that you wish to impress upon customers.

Polishes are of sufficient importance to well warrant this selling attention to be given them. Results should well pay for the effort, especially at this time of the year.

Grocery Window Within a Grocery Window

Original Display Shown by Goodwins, Limited, of Montreal—Course of Pure Foods From Store to Home—Incidents in Everyday Life Pictured—Much Time Spent on Arrangement.

In many of the large Canadian grocery stores, window dressing is gone into on an elaborate scale. The business that these stores get from their windows justifies the time spent on them and the cost of their construction. Smaller stores, while they may not have the facilities for arranging any elaborate design, may carry out the same idea on a smaller scale and reap the advantages.

An Attractive Design.

The accompanying illustration is that of a window shown recently by the grocery department of Goodwins, Limited, Montreal. A glance will give a good idea of the time and labor spent on it to make it attractive. The aim of the artist was to make it realistic—to present in the window itself an everyday occurrence in real life.

On the right is the representation of a Pure Food grocery store. There is the front of the store with its awning, the door, the window itself—making a window within a window—special announcement boards on the outside, and a well-laden miniature delivery wagon. To the right of the store itself is a tree which makes the setting all the more attractive.

From Store to House.

Connected with this store is a miniature home on the left, the idea of "From Pure Food Store to a Bright, Particular Home," being effectively conveyed. The front and one side of the home may be seen with its screen door and table showing through, its window with curtains attractively drawn, baby carriage in front, the collie dog, the foliage, and the young housewife receiving the groceries from the delivery man.

The central portion of the window is used to advertise a line of soups and a special sale in oranges. The store and the home were designed to attract customers, and on being attracted the soup and orange displays creat a special demand.

Impresses Purity on Customers.

The effect of this display is important. Since at the present time there is much talk of impure, inferior, adulterated goods sold in Canada, those stores which handle and sell only the best should impress the point emphatically on prospective customers. The Pure Food display shown in the window will help to do this. It illustrates a particular housewife dealing at a store where quality goods can be purchased, and it must therefore be considered a splendid assistant in creating new business.

FOR FRUIT ADVERTISING.

Grapefruit is an unsurpassed delicious tonic. You should use it.

You can't get a better insurance policy against illness than oranges. Drink and eat them, and save doctor bills.

Lesson 14---Complete Course in Card Writing

Lettering That Has the Good Points of Roman, but With More Speed — The Ribbon as a Decoration — Getting an Easy Swing in Writing.

By J. C. Edwards, Copyright 1911.

AT the first glance one might say that this lettering is the same as the Roman slant or Italic style; but upon examination the difference is quite marked. In the first place, all spurs are eliminated and in every way possible the letters are formed with the object of promoting speed and giving a continuous or writing effect.

Speedier Than Roman Italic.

Considerable time is wasted in executing the Roman Italic, because of the spurs and the abrupt stops as in the "K," "W" and "V."

This style of letter is easily and quickly made and when properly written, each letter will be joined, giving the effect of continuous writing, and yet it is quite legible.

How the brush is held.

Getting the Easy Swing.

There is some knack in getting that most desirable free and easy motion in writing brush script. The brush must be held at the same angle always, and when the stroke is ended at the bottom line the brush should be quickly returned to the top ready to commence the next down stroke.

Practice will give you an automatic motion—almost mechanical. This is desirable, as it gives speed and confidence. which is readily seen in the finished work.

Continuous Stroke Letters.

There are several letters in this alphabet which, in making, there is no necessity to lift the brush off the card until the letter is completed. Such letters as "W" and "V" come under this head, also the "Z" if made as the small shaded letter without adding stroke four, as shown in the larger "Z."

Practical Pen Lettering.

This style of lettering lends itself readily to pen work. The broad flat-pointed ("Soennechen") pens are used in various sizes according to the size of lettering you desire. For small tickets, a No. 2½ pen makes a very neat sized letter, while for larger card work a No. 1 or 1½ is not too broad. A great deal of practice is necessary to use these pens well, but when it is accomplished the result is very pleasing.

The Decorative Ribbon.

In making decorative cards the ribbon in a great many forms may be used to advantage. The simplest forms are easily made and are quite as effective as the more elaborate styles. The one illustrated in the card here shown is perhaps a little complicated, but is quite decorative and adds tone to the card.

Though Effective—Avoid.

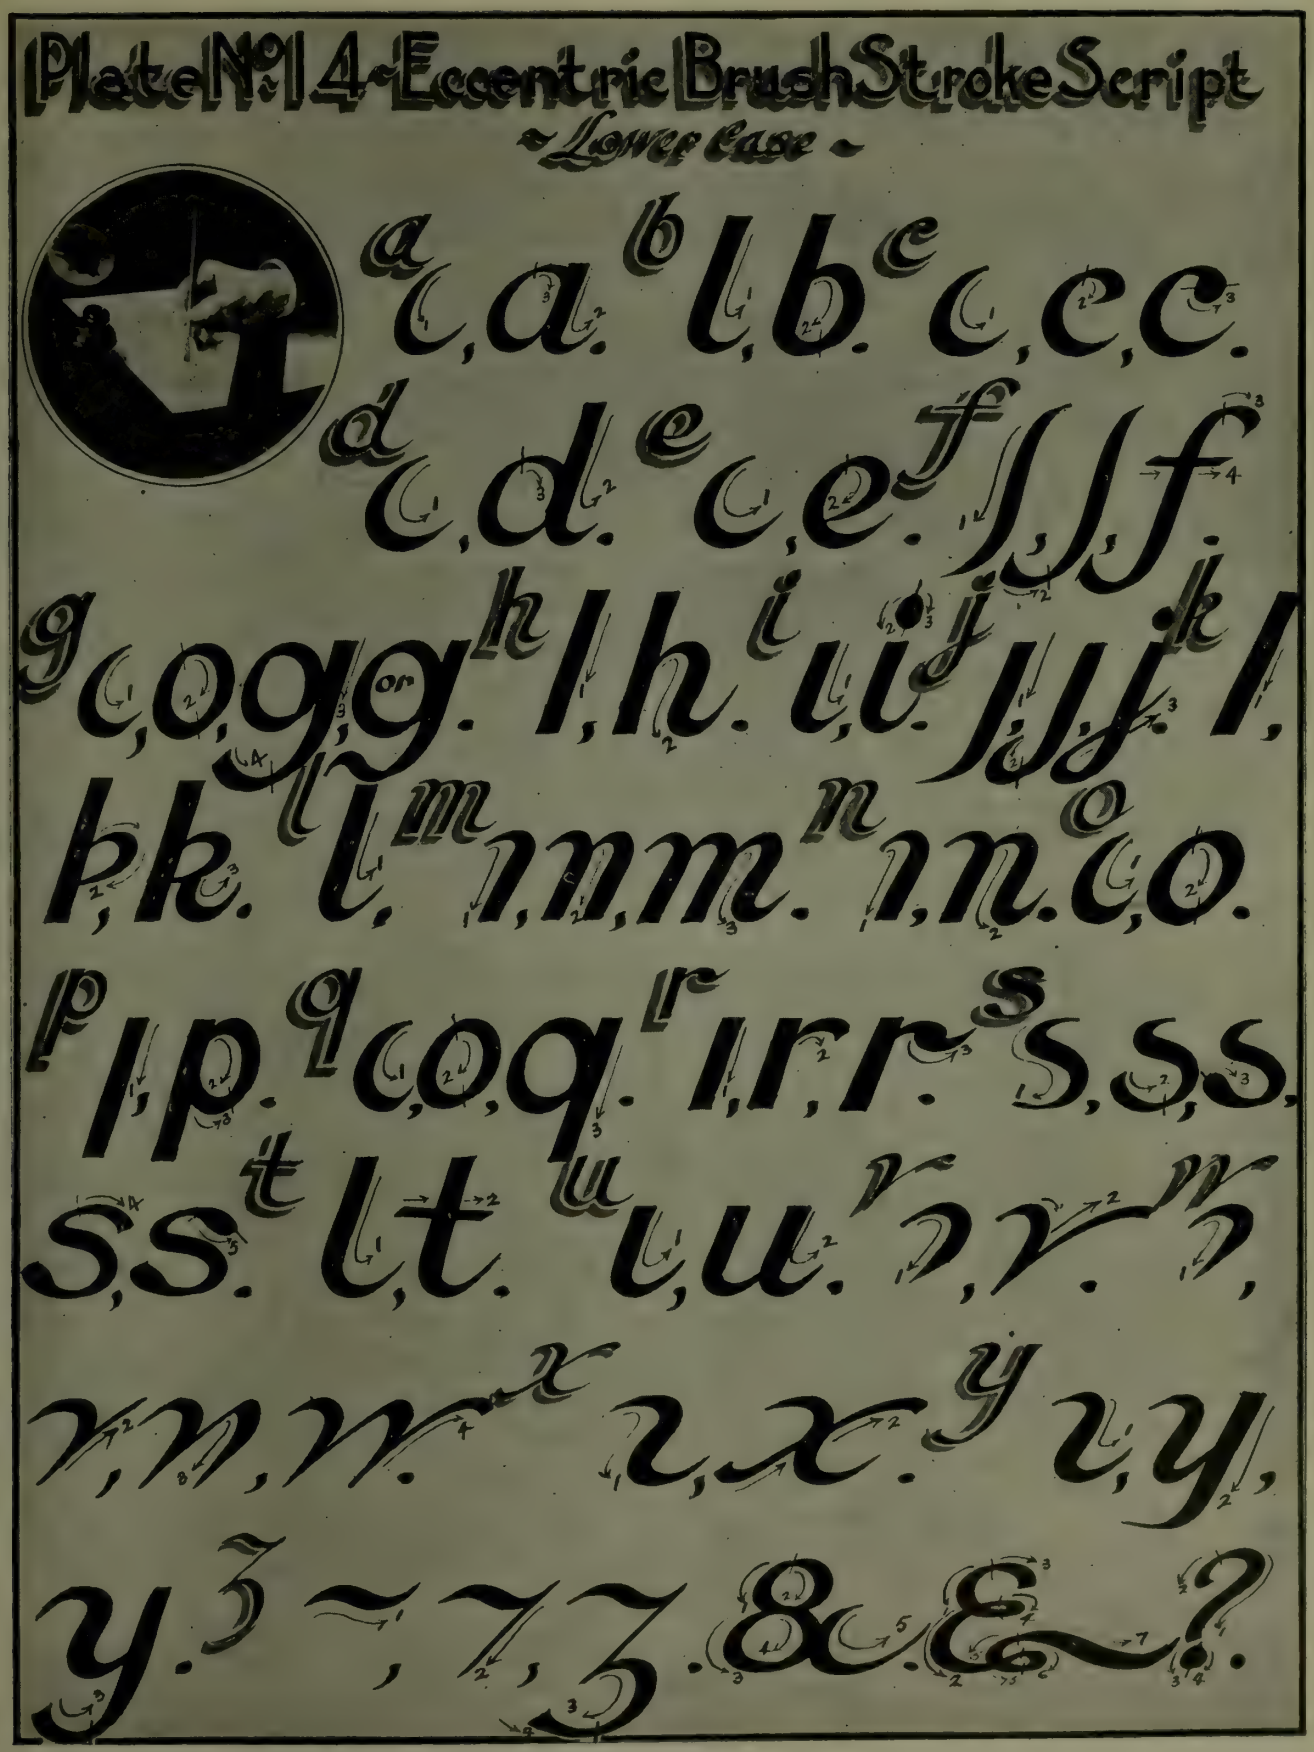
You will notice that the lettering in this card overlaps the ribbon decoration and is practically lost, thus breaking the sense of the reading matter. This should never be seen in any card used on a display of merchandise. The ribbon may be made in a flat color or may be made in white shaded with some dainty tint and bearing the heading or the important inscription plainly lettered or shaded.

The Ribbon
The Ribbon makes a very effective decoration for the show-card and may be made and treated in hundreds of different ways carrying out relief suggestions as the above or flat effects in various colorings which add life and attractiveness to the work.

Card showing application of ribbon design and the brush stroke script.

Many forms of relief are resorted to in show card work. The card here shown gives one idea which is used to advantage behind a ribbon or panel. It is a grey silhouette, but may be made in black or, in fact, any flat opaque color.

Put this into practice, along with other ideas which you may see or think of. and note the various effects you can achieve with very little effort and which adds greatly to a fancy card.



This plate is descriptive of a letter that can be effectively applied to many uses.

Woman's Tongue Helps Boom Olive Oil Sale

How One Dealer Sells Forty Gallons of New Brand in One Season—Asks Feminine Judge to Give Him Recommendation—Value of Using Information to Assist in Creating Demand—Dealer Frequently Asked to Choose—Interesting Story in Account Collecting.

EVERY good dealer has his own methods of using information that will create new business. Many of these are reported in other articles in this issue and they go to show the advantages — the monetary advantages—to the retail grocer of putting his salesmanship abilities into practice and of selling goods above the actual, routine, every-day demand. There is no question that if any dealer looks about him, takes in information he hears or reads about, and applies it to his own business his progress will be much more rapid.

Selling New Brand of Olive Oil.

Herewith is an instance where a Cobourg, Ont., retailer increased his sales of a certain brand of olive oil to a marked extent. On getting in the new brand he decided to make a test of its quality by using the tongue of a good judge of olive oil and if found satisfactory by adopting the success of the test to his own business.

The dealer in question is Mr. Hooey, of Hooey & Son, grocers in that Lake Ontario town. To begin with Cobourg is a spot visited in summer by a large number of United States visitors. It is convenient to Yankee cities across the lake and many families—usually minus their husbands—spend the hotter months there.

"I got in a shipment of a new brand of olive oil," said Mr. Hooey, in relating the circumstances, "and began figuring how I could sell it. There was an American woman whom I knew was a lover of good olive oil so decided to get her recommendation if the article warranted it.

Just in Her Line.

"If I'm a judge of anything in the world it's olive oil," she told me when I broached the subject.

"I asked her to take home some and try it and if she didn't like it she could return it.

" 'You can recommend that olive oil to anybody,' she said next time she came into the store. 'It is splendid stuff and you had better put another one away for me.'

Knowledge Used with Results.

"So naturally we used her recommendation and last summer worked up a trade of 40 gallons simply because we coulo state for a fact it was capable of bearing out all we could say in favor of it."

In the Hooey store it frequently occurs that women use the knowledge of the grocer in selecting their goods. They often ask for advice on what to buy and it is up to the dealer to decide which brand should be recommended. In such cases of course the customer has confidence in her grocer since he knows or should know more about the goods he has for sale than anybody else.

Tobacco and Cigar Show Case.

Much attention is given to tobaccos, cigars and pipes in this store. Hooey & Son have a long counter show case just inside the door and in this is always a neat display.

That there are some peculiar characters in this world was exemplified one time by Mr. Hooey in selling a pipe.

The customer looked over the assortment and gradually got his choice down to two. Both were the same price but one was a little better than the other, although the prospective purchaser didn't know it. He was not a judge of pipes.

"Now which one would you advise me to buy?" the customer asked, whereupon the better one was naturally pointed out by Mr. Hooey.

"I'll take the other,' he immediately said, put the pipe in his mouth and paid for it."

The man had evidently made up his mind that the grocer wanted to get rid of the worst. Such are the peculiarities of some people.

Farmers' Methods Changed.

An interesting question has been raised by Mr. Hooey on the change in methods of farmers from those they followed in the past. He points out that whereas in years gone by, farmers used to spend their money in the towns now they deal at the cross-road store. Then there was little mixed farming; not it is all mixed and the farmer hasn't the same amount of grain to move as before. He takes his produce to the nearest store and gets his groceries.

"Farmers come here on Saturdays in the winter time merely to meet one another," he said. "They do little purchasing and they cannot trust their wives in summer with horses when they have to come any distance. They prefer going over in the evening, once or twice a week, to the country store and once they get in the way of doing this they continue throughout the year. It means that country towns have lost a lot of business in this way."

Those Tough Luck Stories.

Cobourg dealers are interested in account collecting. They are as familiar with the hard luck tales as are the grocers in any other town.

In advising merchants to go slowly and carefully with those who sometimes are unable to pay yet who do not intend to be dishonest, one dealer tells an interesting story.

"One man a few years ago used to get from me," he said, "a few items now and again on credit until finally it got up to some $4 or $5. I asked him for something as I didn't want to see the account get beyond him. He was hard up at the time and couldn't pay it so I diplomatically showed him how I couldn't let him have any more goods on credit unless he settled.

Was Not Offended.

"This had the desired effect so he began paying cash for everything without clearing off the book debt. Since that time he has been dealing with me on a cash basis, his business amounting to $80 or $90 a year. Ocassionally he gets hard up and wants credit but I have always the outstanding debt to refer to. I say 'just as soon as you clear that off then we'll begin all over again.' The result is he continues to pay the cash.

"Had I been harsh with him in the first place I would no doubt have lost not only the $4.50 but his cash business ever since. I believe in being fair and reasonable with a man but I maintain that we should closely watch our books to prevent bad debts."

A Change Suggested.

Railway employes are paid once a month, but Mr. Hooey above referred to, believes this should be changed to weekly. Factories, he thinks, should be on the same basis. Then a merchant, says Mr. Hooey, is in a position to watch a customer more closely and keep him within bounds. One could then put a weekly limit on a doubtful pay and if he should get behind two or three dollars in that time, he can be checked up before he is in debt to the extent of eight or ten dollars. If this policy were in force there would, he maintains, be less likelihood of any lengthy poor book accounts.

The food value of walnuts is high. They are rich in fat, containing as much as 63 per cent., while the proteins amount to nearly 16 per cent. It has been calculated that 30 large walnut kernels contain as much fat as 2¾ pounds of lean beef, and yet the walnut is used as a supplement to a square meal.

Plan of British Columbia General Store

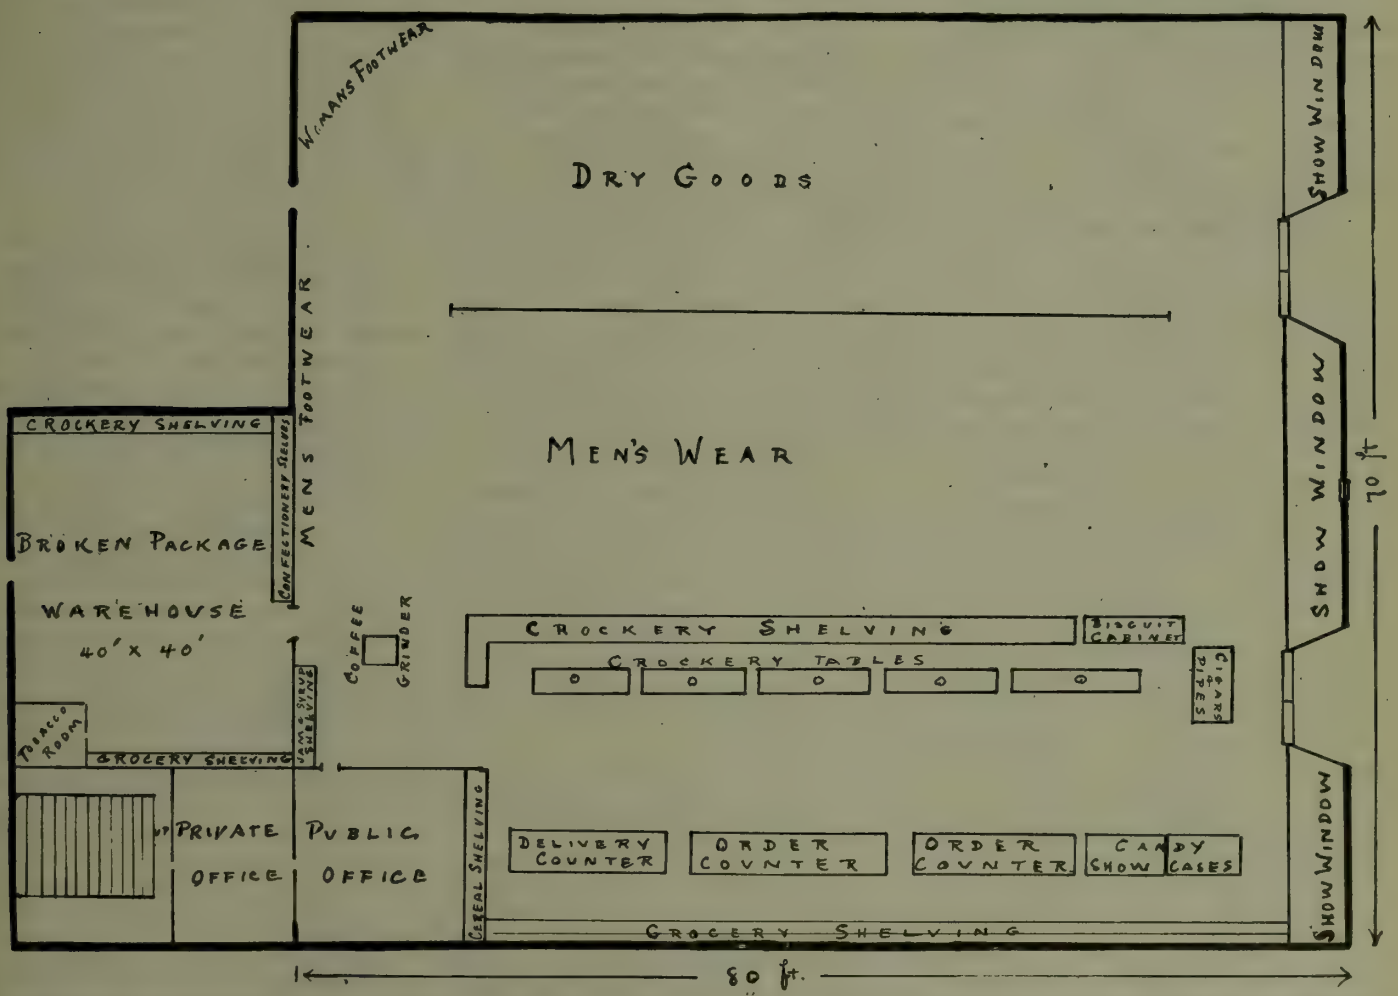
How the Various Departments are Arranged—Groceries and Crockery Close Together—Cigar Show Case Near Front Door —Modern Display Fixtures Used Throughout — Frost-proof Warehouse for Vegetables.

Planning a general store to give the best facilities for handling customers is no easy problem. It requires careful consideration in the location of departments and sections of departments, if convenience in service is to be realized.

The Lawson Limited, Kelowna, B.C., have a large general store 80 feet wide by 70 feet frontage in dimensions. In addition to groceries and crockery, dry goods, boots and shoes, men's wear and footwear are sold. There are three show windows in front of the store separated by two doors. One windw is devoted to groceries. As will be noticed from the plan shown herewith crockery and chinaware are arranged near the grocery department, as these goods are more associated with that department than with any other.

Near the front door leading into the grocery department is a cigar and pipe show case. This is a good idea as it catches the eye of the masculine sex from both the men's wear and grocery departments as well as from the door itself.

It will be noted from the plan that this store has a special delivery counter where goods for delivery are placed. Phone orders are taken from the buyers' desk in the office, but there is also another phone behind the counter, in case there is no person at the desk.



Ground Plan of the Thos. Lawson Limited, General Store in Kelowna, B.C. Modern Bin Fixtures are Installed in Every Department.

Display Fixtures Throughout.

The grocery shelving and counters are fitted with modern display receptacles that keep out dust and dirt. The biscuit cabinet, the crockery counters and shelving, and in fact the entire store, including the office is fitted in a similar up-to-date way.

To the rear of the store is two-storey cement warehouse 40 by 80 feet. This is fireproof and includes two rooms in the rear, each 20 by 20 feet which are frost-proof as well. Apples, potatoes and other vegetables are stored there without any danger of being frost-bitten.

Shelving for Surplus Goods.

In the Broken Package Warehouse may be seen surplus shelving for groceries, confectionery and crockery as well as a special corner for tobaccos.

If at all possible it might be advisable to place the office in a central position where a view of the entire store could be obtained. The office in a store often suggests the payment of an account, and if it is a benefactor in this respect, naturally it should be where everyone can see it.

The balance of the store is well portioned off into men's wear and men's footwear in the centre with dry goods and ladies' footwear at the opposite side.

In the construction of any general store, as intimated above, special attention should be given to convenience in serving and in the arrangement of departments according to their associations with one another.

Dealer Creates Demand for Brand of Tea

By His Own Efforts he Sells 1,800 Pounds in 1911—Was Confident of Its Value and Used His Selling Strength to Introduce it to Customers—How He Sells Fruits, Fish, Pork Products, etc.

CREATING demand for a good article where none existed before is undoubtedly one of the most commendable features of retail selling.

A good illustration of what can be accomplished in this respect comes from Bowmanville, Ont. T. H. Knight of that town does not simply supply actual demand, but works up good trade in goods which eventually are among his best sellers, whereas originally his customers never inquired for them.

"Two years ago," Mr. Knight recently stated, "there was scarcely a pound of —— tea sold in Bowmanville," naming a brand of package tea.

$640 Worth Sold in 1911.

"When I was persuaded to buy it, I investigated the proposition and found it good value for the money. After trying it myself I urged customer after customer to try it, knowing they would be pleased. They were, too, and the realization that it was good value spread from one family to another so that in 1911 my sales of it alone were about 1,800 pounds, or about $640 worth."

It will therefore be seen that Mr. Knight sold on an average about six pounds per day. He created that demand himself as prior to the time he took hold of it scarcely a customer asked for it and very few if any people in Bowmanville used it.

"But to sell any line of goods," he added, "one must have confidence in it. I couldn't recommend an article about which I know nothing and I know if I did I would make a failure of it. You have got to have confidence in the lines you are pushing and know they will give satisfaction."

If he were to recommend an inferior article to any one it would only react on himself—that person would not have the confidence in him again and he therefore would simply have to supply her actual wants henceforth and possibly lose her trade.

Can Sell What He Wishes.

Mr. Knight is, however, thoroughly acquainted with his goods. He believes in getting behind goods of quality which bear a fair margin of profit and he strongly maintains he can sell what he likes.

"There is nothing under heaven I couldn't do without," he stated in his own emphatic way in this connection.

The selling power of display is given much attention in this store. One of his windows is frequently given up to fruit and vegetables. These displays are made exceedingly attractive and according to Mr. Knight and his salesman they "certainly sell the goods." They are original in design and succeed in attracting many besides regular customers. Often they assemble crowds.

Now Sell More Confectionery.

In this store bulk confectionery used to be shown in a counter glass case. A new method which has created more business is the display of them in a stand made especially for this line. It is built on the same principle as the individual biscuit show cases, somewhat in form of steps. Each display box is divided into compartments with glass covers. The different varieties of candy may therefore be easily seen and as there is a small scale on a little shelf which is a part of the stand, it takes little time to wait on cusomers.

This method of displaying the candy has increased sales extensively. The features of it are that the various kinds can be seen at a glance from any part of the store and the glass tops prevent pilfering. If thought advisable, such articles as prunes, dried peaches or apricots can be displayed in these receptacles and thus kept free from dust. On top of this display stand, candy such as horehound, acid drops, etc., are displayed in bottles.

Sells Fish All Summer.

Demand is created for fish, as well as confectionery, throughout the year. During the summer a white enamel receptacle is placed in one window. This is the exact shape of the window, having been made to order, and is about six inches deep. Fresh fish can be kept in ice. There is also an opening to drain off the water so that the fish are kept in first class shape.

"It sells lots of fish," declares Mr. Knight. "People passing see the inviting display and come in to buy."

Creates Ham and Bacon Sales.

There is also a special arrangement for displaying and selling pork and products.

In the windows are a number of thick glass shelves supported by nickel T-shaped posts. These shelves are in the form of steps, one higher than the other, and since they are made of glass can be kept clean easily. The nickel posts are replated in the spring.

A nice piece of cold ham or a side of bacon can be shown to best advantage and sales result.

It will be noticed from the above that this store places much dependence in the windows.

"They are the best aid to business I have," remarked Mr. Knight, "the best advertisement a grocer can use."

Work For Profit.

As before intimated, Mr. Knight maintains a dealer should not use his selling power in creating sales for goods on which the profit is small.

"If the margin of profit is not good enough, we make no attempt to sell an article," he states, "and if every grocer were like us manufacturers who don't allow a fair profit would soon go out of business whether they advertised or not."

The above facts serve as a good illustration of what can be done in the way of creating sales, if vim is placed behind the methods.

PHONE FROM STORE TO HOUSE.

Methods for Arranging a Home-made Line Which May be Useful.

Following are a couple of methods for constructing a home-made telephone which some might find useful in conversing from store to dwelling, etc.:

Take an empty tomato can, melt the bottom therefrom, over one end draw a piece of rawhide and tie tightly so it will act as a drum head. Make a hole in the middle of the rawhide large enough to insert a waxed string, which is fastened by putting a knot or button at the end of the string. This constitutes your trasmitter and receiver for one end of the telephone. Do likewise on the other and draw the waxed string tight from one end of the line to the other and you will find that a conversation can be carried on very distinctly. To call, merely drum on the rawhide and it will be heard very distinctly at the other end of the line.

Another and possibly a more permanent telephone is made as follows:

Take a box about a foot square, attach it to the wall, remove the bottom from the box and draw a piece of rawhide or sheepskin tightly over same and tack securely so the end is tight like a drum head. Run a piece of wire through the centre of the rawhide and attach a button to the wire to hold it there—do likewise at the other end of the line. Draw the wire tight from one box to the other and your telephone is in working order. This type of simple home-made telephone has been known to give good service for several hundred feet, saving time and labor at practically no cost. It's worth trying.

A Store of Things That Shouldn't Be

Tea Mixed with Dirty Hands—Cat on the Counter—No Methods for Introducing New Goods or Selling Stickers—Best Part of Bookkeeping System Not Put Into Practice—Open Pails of Lard and Dust Covered Prunes. —

THE majority of the reading matter pages in this issue tell of practical methods Canadian retail dealers are using to develop their selling power and increase their business.

This article will illustrate the negative side of the question. It deals with an actual store in a small but thriving Ontario town and what is stated here are absolute facts which came under the writer's observations during a recent visit there.

In the first place the grocer in question has been in business almost 20 years. The trouble has been, in the writer's opinion, that while times changed and at the same time retail conditions, yet he did not advance with the times. He belongs to the old school and present up-to-date systems of retailing have left him so hopelessly behind that he will not likely reach the front rank again.

The appearance of the grocer was against trade with particular people. Whether his face and hands had seen the wash-basin that day is a question, but one can bank on it that soap did not assist in the morning's ablutions.

Tea Mixed With Dirty Hands.

Such negligence would not, of course, make much difference if the dealer handed out only canned and package goods. But a woman customer arrived on the scene at the time and asked for tea. The grocer took a couple of scoopfulls from two tins and dropped then on a piece of wrapping paper on the counter. Then with his dirty hands he mixed the teas in front of his customer and emptied the blend into a paper bag. Fancy drinking it yourself!!!

Such slovenly methods are not conducive to business building and are bound to repel rather than attract trade.

While the tea was being weighed out a cat was having a nap on the counter not two feet away. Another was on the floor beside an old dirty stove that had not recently seen polish, and immediately in front of an open pail of lard which also occupied a space on the floor. Behind this again was a row of soap boxes piled three high, which should have occupied a space in the back warehouse.

They were, however, in keeping with the general appearance of the remainder of the store and the apparent loose methods of its proprietor.

On the counter was an open box of prunes which were literally covered with dust and dirt. If they were ever sold it would be highly interesting to know what class of people were the purchasers.

Although it was 10 o'clock in the morning the floor had not been swept. It was littered with string and paper, broken boxes, crumbs from the counter and other unsightly refuse.

Bookkeeping System Abortive.

Strange to say the dealer had established one of the recent methods for bookkeeping. He had a cabinet with a counter-check book for each customer, these books being arranged in alphabetical order in pigeon holes.

But he didn't get the use of the best feature of the system. There was a space for "past account" on each leaf which, had it been used, would not have necessitated at the end of each month the totalling up of all the charge accounts. He knew, he said, it would dispense with a lot of work but didn't just do it—that was all. "It's the proper way to bring the accounts forward," he understood, "but we don't do it here." This was his only reason.

Could Suggest Nothing.

There was much trouble with bad debts and deadbeats in that town. He realized that much money was lost each year on account of this, but had he any suggestion to offer to eliminate this feature?

No. "We simply have to take our chances," he replied.

Neither had he any method for introducing new goods or selling off stickers. There were two show windows but from their appearance they were not used with a view to making sales. He confided the opinion that "we have to depend on the people coming here for goods."

The Interior Display.

In one-half of the store much space is given up to crockery, chinaware, etc. These goods are to be found on the counter and shelves. But mixed indiscriminately with them were canned goods, cereals, baking powder, soda, etc., which should have been only on the grocery side of the store in their proper place.

Many privileges are allowed cats in this store.

The crockery, he said, was dead stock. Anyone would expect it to be in such a store with such a manager.

He knew the Garnishee Law was unfair but could not suggest any improvement.

Gave Away 10 Cents.

While the customer above referred to was in the store he walked over to a fruit box, picked up three oranges and gave them to her as a present. That meant ten cents which at that rate per day would amount to more than $30 in a year.

For examples of things that shouldn't be, this store will hold the record until something worse is produced.

CHEESE AND CRACKER DISPLAY.

Wm. C. Miller, a Yonge Street, Toronto, grocer, recently had a display of cheese that without doubt aroused a great deal of interest in this line. The display was not large but quite an assortment of different kinds was shown. The display was made on a large flat of plate glass raised slightly above the level of the counter, the associated line, crackers, being shown underneath the glass.

Besides the ordinary domestic cheese, the display contained Pimento, Swiss, Roquefort, Gorgonzola, Limburger, Stilton, cream cheese, as well as peanut butter.

Such a display of the various lines could not help but interest customers, and if sales did not follow at the moment, it would at least acquaint customers with the fact that all these kinds of cheese might be had at this store.

Advises Studying the Selling Points

Unless Grocer and Clerks Know These Talking Points Best Results Cannot Be Secured, Says Quebec City Dealer—Man Who Simply Hands Out Goods Asked For, Classed As Slot Machine—Salesmanship Overcomes Price Cutting.

A Quebec city grocer whose success is indicated by the possession of a growing business recently in an interview emphasized the importance of knowing all there is to know about the goods.

"Where a good many clerks fall down," he remarked, "is in failing to master the selling points of each article. I find that it pays in every sense of the word to study the goods I handle, and I do study them at every opportunity.

The Work of a Slot Machine.

"Of course, there are lots of people who purchase things they want. A slot machine could wait on such customers. But there are others—the vast majority, in my experience—who in buying will visit two or three different stores. To cinch the business of such customers we have to convince them ours is the best value for the money.

"And I find that the statement that an article is 'positively the best' isn't usually convincing. The salesman has to appeal to the customer's intelligence in a subtler fashion than that. For instance, if I want to emphasize the value of our coffee, I don't use a lot of superlative adjectives. No, the best course I find is to tell the customer why the stuff we sell him will make him the best coffee he ever drank—and I can give him directions for making it, too, that will ensure the product being up to the mark. It's just the same all along the line.

Know the Selling Points.

"And there's more to this than just helping sales. Studying the selling points will educate the clerk to the selling of better goods. I find that quite often a clerk will push an article at a popular price because it sells easily, while better lines at higher prices and better profits remain on the shelves. The clerk himself doesn't understand just where the difference lies which would justify the higher price; and, because he can't explain the differense, he's actually afraid to introduce the higher priced goods. Now, when he knows just what the difference is, he can push the quality article and at the same time avoid knocking the cheaper line of stuff.

"Salesmanship of this sort is the most effective way of meeting price cutting. It's my experience that it pays a grocer to understand the selling points of his goods, and when he has a few minutes to spare it's a real good investment to talk over this article or that with the 'boys,' too."

Backbone Needed to Prevent Price Cutting

If Every Dealer Succumbed to "I Can Get it at Blank's for That" Threat, Retail Business Would be in Quite a Turmoil—Instance of Where Woman Was Wrong—Should Have Been Potatoes, but She Said Tomatoes.

"Half the failures in business, I honestly believe, are due to lack of courage on the part of merchants," declared a prominent Calgary grocer. "Merchants are afraid to strike out on their own initiative. Each man is watching what the other fellow is doing.

"That's the cause of a lot of foolish price-cutting, with consequent business disaster. One man sees the fellow next door making a cut on a certain line, selling a cent or two less; and forthwith he, too, must cut. It may be that the man next door has purchased to a little better advantage and doesn't know that he is retailing at a lower price than his competitor. But each grocer seems to think that if he doesn't meet his competitor's price, he'll have to drop right behind in the race, put up the shutters and go out of business.

Believes in Maintaining Profit.

"Now, that view of things is perfectly foolish. It's absolutely impossible to have exact uniformity of prices, unless there is an understanding with a view to fixing prices. There must be some difference in prices between one store and another. But because one man sells a certain article a cent or two lower, is no reason why every other grocer should chop his price accordingly. I find it pays to hold up the price to a decent level. People buy from me just the same; and I make as much on a single sale, in some cases, as the other fellow makes on two.

"This foolish business of always meeting the other fellow's price is responsible for a lot of failures and a great deal of hard feeling that shouldn't exist at all. Just because someone comes in and tells him that a rival is selling say, sweet potatoes at eight pounds for 25c., a grocer thinks that he should sell his sweet potatoes at the identical price, where he has been selling six for a quarter. He doesn't stop to point out the difference in quality, or to give the customer some enlightening informaeion with regard to the different varieties. And it's the same with a lot of other lines. If I cut whenever I heard that a rival was cutting, or went by everything that was told me, I'd be cutting prices all the time.

A Tomato Sale.

"Last spring a typical instance occurred. It was when the first tomatoes came in. We had been selling at ten cents for a small basket. A lady asked for a peck of tomatoes, and offered 25c. I explained that the price was ten cents a quart.

"But they were selling on the market at 25c. a peck,' she rejoined. 'Mrs. So-and-So said they were that price on the market and in the stores."

" 'Well,' I told her, (for I knew pretty well what tomatoes were worth) 'if you can buy any in the city at 25c. a peck, I'll make you a present of all the tomatoes I've got in stock right now.'

Potatoes and Not Tomatoes.

"She was about to start out, when she thought of something. 'Can I telephone Mrs. Blank?' she asked. 'Of course,' I rejoined. She telephoned, and a minute later she came back and bought a quart of tomatoes at ten cents. I didn't like to enquire too closely; but before she went she explained that when Mrs. Blank was talking to her before she, herself hadn't been listening very closely, and what Mrs. Blank really told her was that she'd bought POTATOES at 25c. a peck."

Good Advertising

Bargain Idea Making Way for Service

Advertising of Marshall Field & Company Emphasizes Growing Importance of Honest Goods at Reasonable Prices with Adequate Service—Service is that Which Effects Genuine Economy.

Modern retail business builders are more and more coming to the conclusion that Service rather than Bargains is the dominant feature in getting new business that proves profitable. Every reader knows about the great Marshall Field & Co. store in Chicago. Being a departmental store one would naturally suppose it would cater to a large extent to the bargain hunter. That is not so. The ideals of this institution so far as Service is concerned are lofty. This will be observed from the following business editorial which appeared some time ago in their advertisement in Chicago newspapers:

"THE SERVICE AND SPIRIT OF A GREAT STORE.

"'Profits are legitimate only when they come from service.'—Woodrow Wilson.

"The Passing of the Bargain Idea.

"Look into any retail business, large or small, and it will be found that it is governed by either one or the other of two basic ideas:

"First—The bargain Idea.

"Second—The Idea of Service.

"The Bargain Idea is put first because it is so old historically. It goes back to dim centuries when the merchant was a peddler, selling from a pack at markets and fairs. His profits depended largely on the gaudiness and apparent cheapness of his goods and his skill at double-dealing. Of course, his methods were such that nothing but improvement was possible. Yet the merchant of to-day who is wedded to his Bargain Idea still underrates public intelligence. He assumes that penny-saving is the chief object of people purchasing goods. He centers effort on buying merchandise that will be tempting by reason of the bare prices he can mark upon it. Value and quality are taken into account last of all—sometimes never. This sort of merchant offers the public a disconnected string of 'price sensations.' Yesterday it was marked-down ribbons, to-day bargain shoes, to-morrow a terrific slaughter in clothespins. Everything is haphazard, and stocks have little relation to the wide needs of the modern family.

Takes Broader Aspect.

"But a merchant guided by The Service Idea on the other hand, has a broad conception of the public's intelligence, sees his community needs as a whole, and understands his own function in it. He knows that customers weigh points of value as well as prices—purity, durability, appearance, convenience, originality. He searches the world for the latest and most beautiful products. Even though he has but a small establishment, his stocks will be complete, representative, adequate to meet the whole demand in his line of the average family, and they will be maintained with a view to progress in that line. Shopping is made agreeable. Growth and reputation come from customers' satisfaction after goods are in use and price forgotten.

From its foundation the business of Marshall Field & Company has been governed by this Service Idea. The public's discrimination, intelligence and appreciation of true values have not only been understood, but have been the chief force in shaping this business.

Bargain Idea is Wrong.

"The old Bargain Idea * * * is a subtle commercial fallacy, difficult to keep out even where a business is rigidly held to principles of Service. Ideals may be clear, yet doubts arise. Some rival, appealing to the public on cheapness alone, may seem to be gaining an advantage. In a given case there may be a feeling that the public cannot be trusted to distinguish value. There is always the temptation to rest the case on cheapness just this once, let value take care of itself, and cater to the desire for crowds. That tendency has to be fought constantly, consistently and vigorously.

"But the Bargain Idea in its general acceptation is certainly passing away. If an article said to be worth a dollar is offered at seventy cents, there is exactly thirty cents in value missing somewhere. Haphazard bargain-hunting is steadily giving way to intelligent, constructive, economical buying for the needs of the home.

Sound Value, Reasonable Prices.

"As understood by Marshall Field & Company, that only is service which effects genuine economies for the customer and facilitates the work of shopping. Selections in every section of this store are ample, representative. Stock is so arranged that practically all requirements for man, woman, child, or home may be bought here with the least expenditure of time and energy. Sound values are so adjusted to reasonable prices that there is a saving of money, true value considered. The customer confining purchases to the establishment of Marshall Field & Company all the year around will be able to figure definite savings over anything that could be effected by indiscriminate bargain-hunting. At the same time, in the normal adjustment of their great stocks day by day, remainders of goods are constantly being sold at reduced prices, without resort to sensational methods.

"That is the Service Idea governing this store, and for nearly half a century the business has grown up on it."

Montana has a new law which makes it an offence to call eggs over seven days old "fresh eggs."

To remove a tight cover from a baking powder or similar tin, lay the tin on its side and roll it swiftly under the palm of the hand. This will loosen the cover.

Friendly Criticisms of Newspaper Copy

What Ad. Writers Should put Into Their Copy to insure it Being Read and Acted Upon—An Analysis of Eight Newspaper Ads. With Suggestions on How They Could be Improved—Absence of Rules Preferable.

By A. H. McKay.

Newspaper advertising is either an expense or an investment. It is an expense when it ISN'T read, or when IS read but DOESN'T bring results. To become an investment it MUST be read and the copy must be written so that when read it will not only create a DESIRE on the part of the reader to purchase but that that desire will be transferred into ACTION.

It is, therefore, plainly seen that the writer of ad-copy must arrange his copy so that it will ATTRACT readers and be read; and so that when read, the reader will ACT on the suggestion and purchase. That advertising has proven an investment to hundreds of Canadian dealers is beyond contradiction. That it is called an expense by others, is probably due to inefficiency in the writing of the copy.

Generalities Tabooed.

In the first place an ad-writer must have something definite to talk about. Then he must arrange it in plain, readable, business-like fashion, adding if possible an appropriate illustration.

The more direct the proposition is broached the more effective it will be. Businesslike terms cannot be improved upon for presenting a matter of business. The advertiser who indulges in windy persiflage or who crowds his space with an exaggerated lingo punctuated with superlative adjectives may carry readers to his last sentence, but he will fail to arouse their business interest. They may admire his aptness with words but they may at the same time suspect the sincerity of the proposition he has clothed in such ornate manner. And the object of an advertisement, do not forget, is not to win encomiums on the literary style of the writer. An advertiser is a man with something to sell, not a short story writer.

Did you ever hear or read this:

He who whispers down a well
About the things he has to sell,
Will never reach the golden dollars
Unless he climbs a tree and hollers.

Climb the Tree.

To make a large success in the retail business, a man must "climb a tree and holler." He must use advertising in its various phases. If he has a bright, clean, sanitary store he should tell it. If he keeps quality goods, let the people know and give them some straight definite information. The meek, mild waiting-for-business attitude is of little avail. A business-getter now-a-days must be a hustler who of his own accord creates business. He must be a Creative Salesman, not an order taker.

On the opposite page are several retail grocers' newspaper advertisements. Some are fairly well written and others are not. Some contain well written copy but the printer did not do the best work in setting them up.

Be Careful About Introduction.

The ad. of the Annadale Supply Co., New Westminster, B.C., is well balanced. It occupied a single column space in the newspaper. One criticism is the size of type used in setting the second paragraph beginning, "Several varieties, etc." This should have been smaller; as it is there is too much heavy type. The heading is neat—"Special Lines at Special Prices,"—and should catch the attention of the reader. This ad. could have been improved by telling in a few words in each case something about the quality or the flavor of the goods advertised. For instance, "New Zealand Butter—fresh, wholesome, grass make—2 lbs. for 75 cents," should without doubt induce more people to buy. The same applies to the asparagus, herring, etc. The prices quoted should be a little heavier type than the rest of the line. Let them stand out prominently.

The Kind That Isn't Read.

The advertisement of C. A. Drake Co., Nelson, British Columbia, seems to have been written at the last minute to catch the press. Goods listed in this manner do not afford a possible buyer to form any opinion regarding them. Every grocer handles these fruits; therefore there should be some distinctive reason why they should be bought at Drake's. The accompanying suggestion on this page may form a suggestion for a better ad.

One of the Best.

The ad. of the West End Grocery Co., Victoria, B.C., is one of the best written, best laid out and best set of the eight. The heading is catchy and appropriate, the general talk convincing, and the items are neatly set, with prices in black type. Something about each item, as in the case of the former ads. referred to, would have been an improvement.

Good Opportunity Lost.

The copy in J. A. Irving & Co.'s advertisement would have been improved by the addition of something descriptive regarding Spring Cleaning. The heading is a good one. Had it been followed by "The time is close at hand when particular housewives will be cleansing the home. Let us name you some of the articles you should have, to chase away the dust and dirt that has assembled during the winter," it would have been more suggestive of the season. The prices ought to have been brought out nearer the margin and printed in heavier type.

Try for Appropriate Heading.

Whidden & Richardson, of Saskatoon, Sask., have not a bad ad. Instead of "Groceries," as a heading possibly "Grocery Buying Economy," would have been more effective, followed by, "The housekeeper can save on her weekly grocery bill by reading the prices below and visiting our store." The rules should be eliminated; they detract from the appearance of the ad.

Where Space is Wasted.

Henniger's advertisement is from a Sydney, Nova Scotia paper. In the first place it would have been better to have the name at the bottom. News about oranges is what the people want to know about and where they can get best value for the money. Then "Orange News," or "Oranges for every Purse," would have been a better heading. Too much space is consumed by the name. The surplus could well have been used by telling more about the quality of the fruit.

Yerxa, of Fredericton, New Brunswick, usually have well written advertisements. They are newsy, informative and offer something definite. The one must make an impression on the man who is thinking of his farm or garden. The selling talk is splendid. What the writer would have done would have been to confine the entire ad. to seeds, and instead of inserting the "Grocery Specials," named a list of garden seeds such as radish, beet, turnip, etc., and the prices. Once you begin talking seeds to a customer in the store you tell him all about them even the price, before switching off onto something else. The shown in the group is no exception. The setting is its worst feature, and here again the printer must be blamed. There are too many rules altogether. They almost give one the impression that several advertisements are there instead of one and they hamper the reader.

O'KEEFE & MARTIN
The Grocers

Group of Ads. Run by Canadian Retail Dealers in Their Home Town Newspapers. Criticisms Appear in the Accompanying Article.

The last one of the group—O'Keefe & Martin—another British Columbia ad., is one of the best looking of the eight. The heading "Get Ready for Planting," is set in just about the right type and same applies to the writing of an ad. The printer has made a nice appearing ad and that is often half the battle.

If, therefore, a retail advertiser hasn't been getting the results expected, it might be advisable to study more closely the copy being run. Better copy may solve the problem.

EASY STREET.

It's fine to be on Easy Street; it is a pleasant place;
But the road that leads to Easy Street is a long, hard road.
Don't mind the burden that you bear; be true of hand and heart;
Whether you reach the goal or not, don't play a loafer's part.
Don't waste time in envy, and never say you're beat
For if you take things easy, you won't reach Easy Street.

Actual Results from Retail Advertising

Country Town Merchant Relates Number of Experiences Where He has Secured Direct Returns—Printers' Error Showed that Ads. Were Read—Introduced Meat Sauce and Peanut Butter Through Newspaper.

By J. W. Bryans.

We have never regarded advertising as charity to the printer, nor yet altogether as an expense. Rather have we considered it an investment and one that pays, when properly conducted, a substantial dividend.

Situated in a small town, we have had ample opportunity to test the value of the local paper as an advertising medium for the country merchant. Put to the test it has proved in our opinion quite profitable, as also has circular advertising at intervals when conducted in unison and assisted by the regular space in the local paper.

The Tracing of Results.

Perhaps one of the reasons that the grocer has been rather uncertain as to the value of advertising is that he is unable to trace what amount of business is the direct result of that advertising. It is therefore impossible to measure exactly the value of an ad. or a series of ads. The dealer, knowing of few instances in which an ad. has directly brought business,, may be inclined rather to doubt its value although that same ad. may have paid for itself many times over, but unknown to the grocer.

It is true that direct results are not always traceable, but nevertheless we have had instances enough to prove that they really warrant the expenditure.

Error Proved Ad. Was Read.

That the ads. in the local paper are read we have ample proof. A mistake which recently occurred in setting up an ad. proved this to be true. One item in the copy which we sent to the printer read: "Prunes—a good food—special offer, 90's to 100 for 10c. pound."

Mistakes are liable to occur even in the best regulated printshops and when our ad. appeared it read: "Prunes—a good food—special offer, 90c. to $1.00 for 10 pounds." The printer evidently didn't understand prune sizes.

This was certainly cheap for prunes and the enquiries which we had showed just how closely our ads. are followed. We explained that it was a mistake in printing and although it meant some loss, we followed out the reading of our ad. and sold the prunes at the lower figure quoted.

Some time ago another mistake in which "clothes pins, 3 dozen for 5c." had been changed around to "5 dozen for 3c." brought sufficient inquiries to prove that people read the ads. This brings up the question of whether a dealer should make good a mistake in an ad. We believe that if it will not mean too big a loss it is well that he should do so. By explaining it to customers, it gives them a favorable opinion of the store and its methods.

An Inquiry From a Farmer.

Another instance which I can recall is when we advertised a brand of flour we had just begun to handle. In the copy the quality of the flour and its good bread making qualities were dwelt upon.

The paper came out on Thursday morning; Thursday afternoon a farmer came in and asked the price of it. "I just came in to-day to get the mail and some flour. I see in the paper that you have somehting new which you think pretty good."

We soon convinced him enough to induce him to try a sack. It proved satisfactory and he is still buying flour from us. He had only purchased small quantities of goods at intervals before this, but now each time he comes in for flour, we generally manage to interest him in something else. We expect to make him a regular customer before long.

We also had some other inquiries from that ad. One farmer's wife said she had been using that particular flour for some time, going to another neighboring town for it. Our town being closer she began purchasing from us.

Combine Newspaper With Circular.

About a year ago we issued a circular to the trade, quoting prices on a number of lines. We pointed out that we would take butter and eggs in exchange for goods. We announced in our space in the local paper that we were sending out these circulars and that every reader should see they got one.

Now, ordinarily, we could not tell just exactly what business such advertising brought us, if any. We always figured that they at least kept our name before customers, which is a good thing. These circulars, however, we sent also to people in outlying districts. The number from a distance who responded and who had never dealt with us, and in fact who rarely ever came to our town, proved the value of advertising. Especially did we have a lot of people bring us butter and eggs in exchange for goods—as we had solicited in our advertising.

Created Sales for Meat Sauce.

One manner in which a person may judge whether an ad. is really read and whether it is such as to create real interest in the goods is in introducing a new line through the paper.

Not long ago we stocked a new line of meat sauce, advertising it in the local paper. Now meat sauces are not a particularly fast selling line at any time in our town, but the inquiries that came for that particular sauce following the advertisement were qnite gratifying, considering the space that was devoted to it.

Ad. Sold Peanut Butter.

Some few years ago peanut butter was quite sparsely used in our town. We got in a shipment and announced the line in the local paper, giving some particulars about it. The ad. brought around several people who had already used the article as well as others who had been interested when they read about it. As a result peanut butter began to move quite freely with us.

We believe that continued and regular advertising, even in a small space, ultimately brings better results than spasmodic efforts in a larger space. Some firms will boom forth sensationally in large space for a couple of weeks and then discontinue altogether. We believe that the same amount of money spent in a smaller space and regularly will in the end create more business. It is keeping everlastingly at it—keeping the firm's name continuously before the public—that counts.

Conducted properly, advertising to the country merchant at least is profitable. There is no doubt in our minds that the business traceable to advertising, if it were possible to really trace it all, would show that advertising is not an expense but an investment.

HOW CHICORY GROWS.

Something About Its History and Its Uses.

Some people have the idea that chicory grows on trees, the same as coffee. More than one person has had that idea. Such is far from being the case as chicory is a vegetable which grows like a carrot, looks like a parsnip and has a top like a sugar beet. It grows in many parts of the world but principally in Europe. Belgium produces a good quality chicory as the cool, damp summers of that climate are conducive to slow growth, developing little fibre and a greater percentage of essence.

When dug up, the root is washed, cut into small pieces and dried in a kiln until shrivelled up to about a quarter its original weight. It is afterwards roasted with a little oil or fat to prevent it burning, and ground into powder.

Some medical authorities describe chicory as a mild tonic without being an irritant.

What Good Fixtures and Equipment Mean

Montreal Store Interior Where High Class Trade is Gone After—Fixtures Include Electric Cash Register and Coffee Mill, Vegetable Display Fountain, Display Refrigerator, Silent Salesmen, Meat Slicer, Biscuit Display Rack and Spice and Cereal Receptacles.

General interior appearance has much to do with the class of customers who come into the store. A bright, clean, inviting interior is bound to attract new custom, and custom which is particular where its purchasing is done. This is the kind that is profitable to the grocer because it can afford to buy high grade goods and plenty of them.

men in business should take full advantage of it if at all possible and surroundings justify the expenditure.

Creates New Business.

The Fraser Viger Company, of Montreal, have long since realized the value of attractiveness of store interior as a business getter and business builder. Their new store erected last year on store-floors are littered with barrels and cases among which customers sometimes have to wend their way with difficulty.

Store Has Many Modern Fixtures.

To the right and left of the entrance are handsome silent salesmen, in and on which goods are always displayed to good advantage. On the left also is an electric coffee grinder, a modern meat slicing machine and a small floor biscuit display rack.

In the centre near the rear may be seen a vegetable display fountain on which vegetables can be kept fresh and inviting by a continuous stream of water.

Along the rear end is a large display refrigerator. Cheese, butter and pro-

An interior of a well appointed Montreal Grocery Store. Silent salesmen, cash register, coffee grinder, meat slicer, display refrigerator and vegetable display fountain are among the fixtures.

The equipment, fixtures and decorations of any store make it attractive or otherwise. An interior where no care is taken in keeping the walls, ceiling and lighting fixtures clean is not conducive to bringing in new customers. People, it must be remembered—and women in particular— like to congregate and show themselves in bright and beautiful surroundings. It is a failing, if you like, to which we all are heirs, and because of ehis hereditory characteristic of the human race—in this country at least—

Laurier Ave., to which The Grocer has previously made reference, was constructed with the idea in view that an appeal to the eye was often the means of getting a new customer. Backed by good service the customer would be held.

The illustration shown here is one view of this store with eight members of the staff. It will be noted that both ceiling and floors are bright and clean, the former being distinctive in its architecture and the latter conspicious for the amount of room allowed customers. Too many visions can be kept fresh, and still be within eyes' reach of a customer at the provision counter.

Just inside the archway to the other section of the store stands a large electrically driven cash register of modern design.

In the Fraser Viger store is also a fine system of bin fixtures behind the counters. They are attractive in appearance and provide for almost everything—cereals, rice, tapicoa, spices, nuts, etc. The shelving, too, is in accord with the general high-class appearance throughout. The fittings are all in quarter-cut oak, the counters being of the same material.

A store fitted up with such an attractive array of fixtures and equipment for convenience in serving customers must of necessity attract new business.

Such a store is a creative salesman itself.

Forced to Change from Credit to Cash

How a Country Merchant Was Practically Compelled to Start Cash Business—Competition Stepped in and Those Customers Who Owed Him Began to Deal With the New Man—Best for Business With Small Purchases He Says.

By C. Denike.

Circumstances play an important part in the career of a business and has done so in ours, as, only for a change in circumstances we would very likely still be conducting a credit business with our books loaded down with burdensome accounts and debts running into a large sum, while as it is at the present time, we are conducting a cash business with no accounts on the books and debts quite low.

This apparently ideal condition of affairs was brought about by the appearance of competition in our line of business. Generally when opposition steps in, it means to most business men a greater extension of credit and time that customers may be retained, but in our case it was just the opposite.

Always a Credit Town.

It was several years ago that we started business in a town of 1,200 population and as it was a "credit" town, we were obliged to fall in line with other business men and extend credit to customers. This went on for a number of years and while there was not any enormous amount on the books; still even after a continual hustling to keep the amount within reasonable bounds, we found it was increasing.

It was at this stage that opposition sprang up and we began to think that our troubles had really commenced. We would have to be more liberal than even before in extending credit, which would indeed be a bad state of affairs. We decided to keep close watch on the competitor and see how the business was affected.

During the first two months business dropped off a great deal and we were in a sad state of mind but decided not to give up. We analyzed affairs to see in just what way business was decreasing and in a short time solved the mystery.

Debtors Went to Opposition Store.

We found that nearly all customers who owed us would go to the other store to make their purchases as it is common for the debtor to try to evade the merchant he owes.

We came to the conclusion that if the credit system was affecting the business in this way that we would abolish it and at once started on the cash plan. When we began we made it a point to use the amount we had been losing each year in bad accounts in advertising and the results were good. During the first year under the cash system and with the opposition, sales showed only 10 per cent. decrease but even at that amount we considered we were making more money than the year before. After the first year business began to grow again as by continual advertising we created demand for many new lines.

Knows Where He is at.

Under the cash system a merchant knows when he locks the store at night just how much he has made during the day but we do not argue that it is the best system for all stores or in all cases. Our business—it is a drug business—consists chiefly of small purchases and for such a trade we consider the cash system is undoubtedly the best."

Value of Getting a Line on the Customer

Business Building Doesn't Simply Mean Handing Out Goods Inquired For—Dealer Believes in Securing and Using Information that Will Mean Extra Business Later On.

"I find that it pays to make a careful study of each individual customer," remarked a Chatham, Ontario, grocer the other day. "Pretty nearly anybody can wait upon a customer, give him something that he asks for, and ring up the payment on the cash register; but that doesn't constitute real business building. I try each time to pick up some information about the customer which, next time he comes into the store, will help me to do business.

"For one thing, I try to remember his name and street address. When he comes the next time, he'll feel more at home if he's greeted with 'Good morning, Mr. Jones,' than he would if it were just 'Good morning.'

Remember Customers' Likes.

"Then each individual has certain peculiarities, and particular likes and dislikes. The observant merchant or clerk in the regular course of business can pick up a lot of valuable information along this line. Now, just as an example, take coffee. Some clerks will serve a customer once a week all the year round, and each time will ask the same stereotyped question, 'Strong or mild, or just medium?' It creates a far better impression, I think, if the clerk, when coffee is called for, can remark with perfect accuracy, 'You prefer it strong, don't you?' And so on all down the line.

"I know from personal experience that this sort of thing helps business a lot. It brings people back, which is one of the great things in building a business. Some people seem to have a knack of storing away just such information where it can be drawn upon at the right moment. Others can't seemingly remember anything. I worked once with a clerk who apparently never forgot the name of a person who once gave him an order. That fellow was a genius for remembering things, and he worked his memory for all it was worth, too. It was largely his example started me on the same tack. I think the knack of remembering can be acquired, provided a clerk sets his mind to it, and it's worth while to him as well as to the business."

SUGGEST PROFITABLE GOODS.

"The clerks in our store," states a Regina, Sask., dealer, "are instructed to suggest and they do suggest to customers the purchase of profitable articles, goods which are not necessities, and it is these sales that bring the "velvet."

"We pride ourselves on having no dead stock on the shelves. Everything moves at least once in 30 days. Our turnover of goods is materially assisted by our window displays.

"Our store is well-lighted, the floors are oiled, and the store front and wagons are kept well-painted and varnished. We belive in having the best horses and modern, money-saving store fixtures.

"Our window displays and our fresh fruit and vegetable displays are kept up to date, and are money-makers for us. We try to have everything possible to attract attention to the quality of our goods and the service we render.

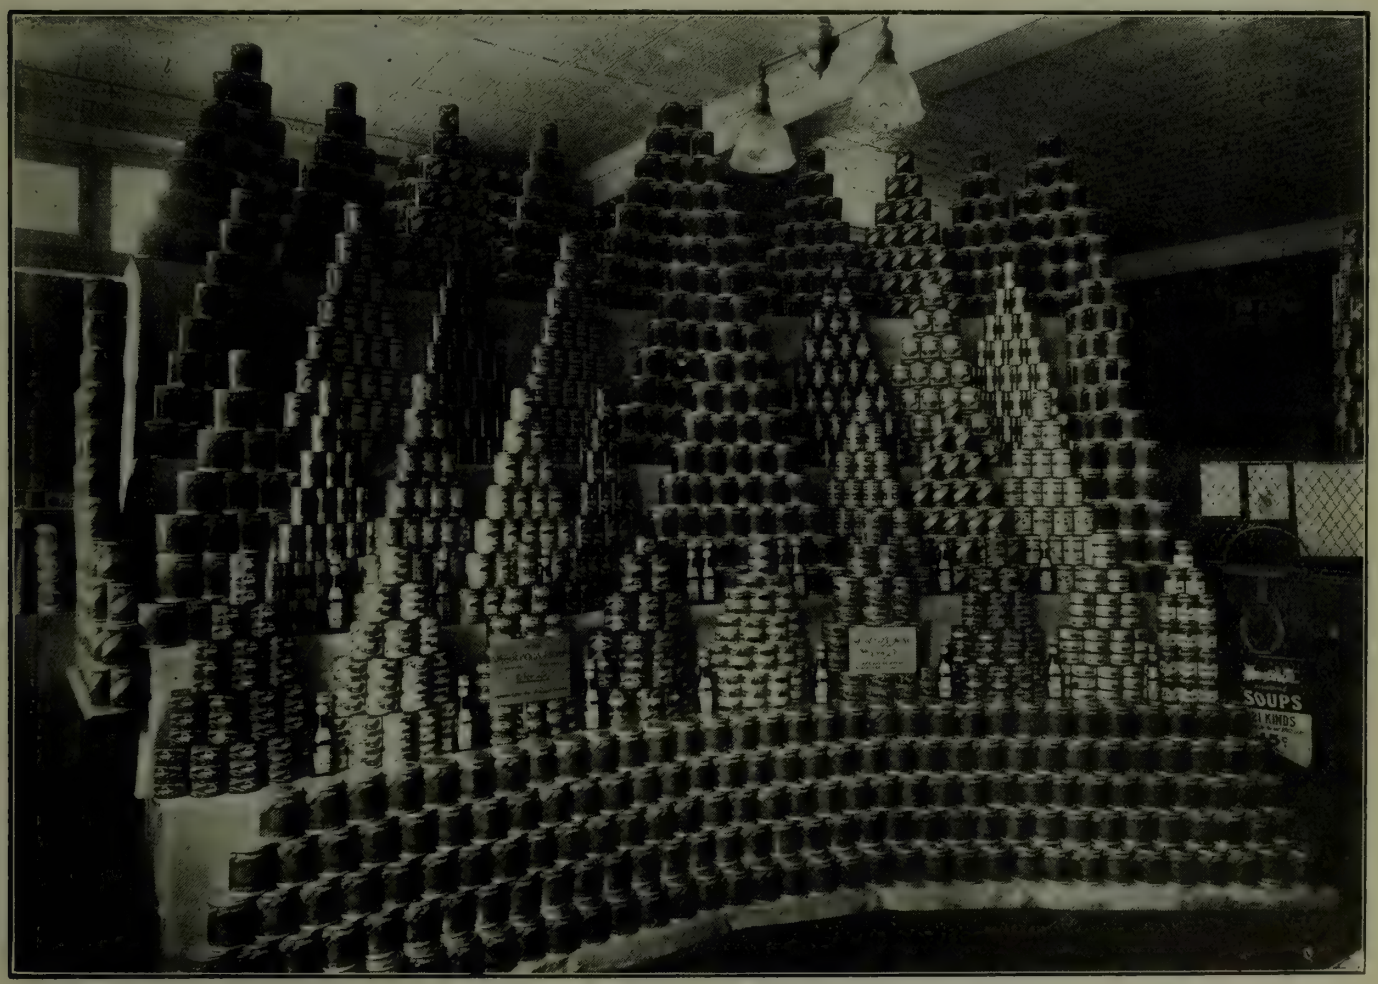
Interior Canned Food Display of 1,400 Tins

An Unusual Showing in a Retail Store—Took Salesman a Day and a Half to Arrange it—But it Created New Business—Exemplifies Importance of Having an Attractive Interior.

It isn't often one sees a display of canned goods in a retail store such as is exemplified by the illustration on this page. It appeared in the grocery store of B. S. McMurty, 1146 Yonge street, Toronto, having been arranged by one of Mr. McMurty's salesmen, G. F. Grinyer.

About 1,400 Cans.

In this canned goods display there are some 1,400 tins of canned food. Of this about 450 tins are tomatoes. These may be seen in the four rows at the bottom



A Display Showing Importanee Placed on Interior Arrangement. Contains About 1,400 Tins and Took Day and a Half to Build.

The display certainly emphasises the fact that in this store there are canned goods and all kinds of them for sale. The moment one enters, canned goods stare him in the face and there is no possible chance of them being overlooked if the customer has had any thought at all of purchasing. The display could be easily seen from the street and created a favorable impression as to the character of the store. It is a well-known fact that a customer who is at all particular will be impressed by appearances and an inviting interior will frequently result in the casual purchaser who is eventually evolved into a regular customer.

as well as up through the centre and at either end. In addition to tomatoes there are various brands of Canadian and French peas, corn, all sizes and brands of salmon, haddies, lobster, soup of different kinds, asparagus, and a few bottles of tomato catsup.

Mr. Grinyer spent about a day and a half arranging the display including the carpentering work on which the canned goods rest.

"But it has sold some goods," he states, and his work has, therefore, been justified.

The display is situated on the left as one enters the store. The counter is on the right from which the accompanying photograph was taken. The McMurty stores place a great deal of dependence on window displays as well as interior, one of them having won a $10 prize in the recent Quaker Oats contest.

Every grocer must eventually realize the importance of good displays in creating demand, introducing goods, raising standard of quality and therefore increasing business. This might be just as well realized now as later.

There is not nearly enough attention given to interior displays in some stores and considering that an attractively arranged interior is one of the best assets a merchant can have, more time should be spent on it. It has been frequently said that the grocer's window is an index of the class of merchant the grocer is. But even more so does the interior appearance reflect this character as a merchant and the character of the goods he handles. It not only creates business but confidence on the part of customers in the goods sold and the business methods of the dealer.

Clerks---The Good, Bad and Indifferent

Actual Notes Taken on Different Classes of Clerks in Retail Grocery Stores—The One Who Raises Standard of Quality and Sell Goods Not Asked for Typified—Evidences of the Young Man Who has no Apparent Interest in Serving a Customer.

A young man went into a store in an Ontario town to purchase a box of chocolates for a particular feminine friend. In the window he had seen a box he thought might do. It was marked. He made known his wants, remarking that something like that shown in the window would probably be alright. It was a girl behind the confectionery counter, and she demonstrated herself a real saleswoman. She might have sold him the $1 box, but she was anxious, wherever possible, to raise the standard of goods sold, because it meant larger sales, and more satisfied customers.

A Selling Talk That Sold.

She showed the $1 box, but also placed on the counter before him two other boxes, one worth $1.60 and the other, $1.75. "Here is something especially nice," she said, picking up the $1.60 box, "that I can recommend. This is a slightly larger box and everything about it is the very best. You can see for yourself that the box is very pretty, and when you see that seal," pointing to a seal which connected the ribbons and which bore a well-known name, "you can certainly depend on what is inside."

No more was necessary. The young man purchased the $1.60 box. The saleswoman had succeeded in raising the standard goods. She had increased her sales 60 cents over what they otherwise would have been.

Such is truly an example of a good clerk. All clerks cannot, however, be described as such. Some are apparently content to hand over the counter just those articles asked for without attempting to sell more goods or raise the standard of quality.

While the writer was in a store recently, talking to the proprietor, the clerk was arranging a shelf, or rather filling it up, as apparently he was making no attempt to make it attractive. He was standing on a chair, and as he picked up each package he blew the dust off. The dust, of course, would circle through the air and settle on show case, counter, and all the goods open on the counter.

When a customer entered, it was very slowly that he tore himself away from the shelf arranging. She ordered a couple of small articles, and inquired what salmon was worth.

"Twenty-five cents," replied the clerk, drumming on the scales with a pencil.

"It's awful dear, isn't it?"

"We have some at 20 cents," replied the clerk, still drumming.

"Is it good?"

Instead of pointing out the better quality of the dearer article, he replied, "Oh, yes," and sold her the cheaper one. She may possibly not like it, and will henceforth go elsewhere for her salmon.

Knew Nothing About New Goods.

Later the same clerk showed his inability or lack of ambition. A customer was observing a display of a new line which another clerk had made. A show card had been placed on it. "What is it like?" inquired the customer.

"I don't know," calmly replied the clerk, "some new stuff we got in."

Such information, or rather, lack of information, would certainly not interest the customer in that line.

"That's all, is it?" was the parting negative suggestion of the clerk.

Some Extra Sales Made.

How different were the selling efforts of another clerk who displayed real salesmanship ability in his work. He is drawing a good sized salary too, because he is able to sell goods. There was no waiting in his case when a customer came in. He was right there with a cheery "good morning." He took her order for a few staple lines.

"We have fresh lettuce and onions this morning," the clerk then suggested.

"No, I don't think I want any this morning."

"We have some nice washed celery. It would be very nice for Sunday dinner."

This interested her and she purchased two bunches. She then said she would like something for dessert.

"How about strawberries?" asked the clerk.

"They are a little too sweet for me," she replied.

"Well, here is something that is very nice, this canned pineapple. It is in the heavy syrup and can be had either whole or grated."

"I believe I will try a can for a change. I will take the grated."

"If you want something for pie, Mrs. Campbell, we have some excellent layer figs. They make nice pie and are easy on the sugar, you know."

"I like figs, but the last I had were not nice. They looked as if they were old."

"Well, I can guarantee these to be this year's stock. Just look at them." She purchased figs.

The Indifferent Clerk.

Then we have the clerk who seems indifferent, does not apparently care how sales go, whether he improves as a salesman or any of those other things in which he should be interested. Saturday, and his weekly pay, are about the only things that coax him onward.

This is the class of clerk who after a considerable time spent behind the counter will still be unacquainted with prices, goods carried, or any of the important details so essential to a good salesman. The writer ran across just such a clerk a short time ago.

A customer inquired for a line that might be called a grocery specialty. The clerk seemed a little hazy. Possibly he had some slight recollection of having seen it about the store at some time. It is quite evident that he had not been interested enough to glean any particulars about it.

Without speaking a word to the customer, he calmly leaned against the counter and surveyed the shelves. Then underneath the counter was given his attention. Finally he waddled down to the back of the store to ask the proprietor.

Back he came with the article, whistling lustily the latest "rag time," and depositing it before the customer, jerked out, "Is that it?" as if it were the customer's business to know, not his.

Didn't Know the Price.

"How much is it?" enquired the customer.

The clerk suddenly awakened to the fact that he had forgotten to ask the proprietor the price. It was rather too far to walk again so he made use of his strong bass vocal organs to inquire the price. It was transmitted back and given to the customer.

"Is this pretty good stuff?" asked the customer.

"Yep, I think it is," was the far from assuring answer of the clerk.

He Lost His Job.

It was learned about a month after that this clerk was no longer employed in that store. No one would be a bit surprised. A clerk with such a lack of ambition to learn the necessary things about the business at which he is working does not deserve to be retained by any proprietor. The clerk who is indifferent to his employer's business cannot hope to succeed.

New Cereal Introduced Over Counter

Belleville Dealer Places His Selling Power Behind It—Sixteen Packages Sold In Four Days—How He Gets Customers to Buy a Good Brand of Pastry Flour With Better Profit—Introducing Meat Sauces, Etc.—Methods to Prevent Bad Book Debts.

"No goods are pushed in this store unless they bear a fair margin of profit," is what A. J. McCrodan, Belleville, Ont., says about salesmanship.

"If there is profit backing a good article, then we make it a point to sell it; if not, we don't."

In the McCrodan's store they sell things, besides supplying actual demand. New goods, worthy of backing, are sold because energy is put into the work.

Selling a New Cereal.

"We just got in that new cereal last week," said Mr. McCrodan, "and are already selling it to our customers without any outside advertising assistance whatever. We placed it on the counter, and whenever a possible customer came in, we pointed to the fact that this cereal was something new—everybody usually likes to try new things—and in the first four days of this week sold sixteen packages. Not very much, but it's a start, and will lead to more business."

Mr. McCrodan is, therefore, entitled to the credit of all sales in future arising from these sixteen. He has created that demand by his own efforts, and every time one of those sixteen customers asks for that particular article again, he and his salesmen do not simply act as a machine in handing out the goods, but they are reaping the reward of the selling work previously done.

That introduction was merely the nucleus of a possible perpetual demand—the future demand, of course, depending on the quality, flavor, etc.—which would no doubt mean a good many extra dollars.

Display Sells New Lines.

Other goods are sold similarly in the McCrodan store. "If a new line of meat sauce, salad dressing, preserved fruit, etc., is secured, we show it on the counter, and talk it up at every possible opportunity.

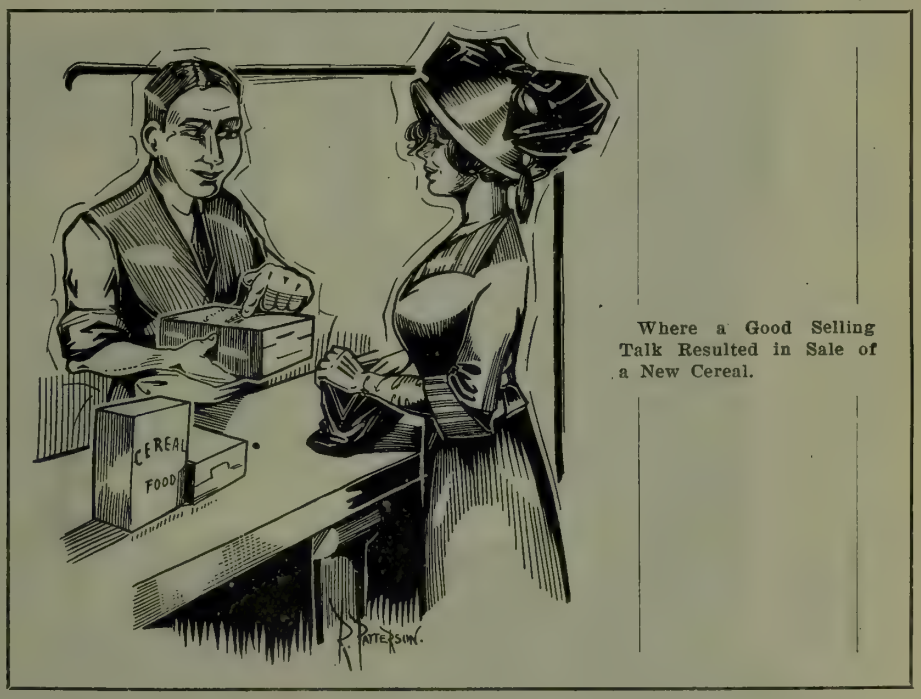
"Often, too, we place a new line like that in the window, where people see it. They come in to ask about it, which means the sale is already made. If they like it, they tell their friends, and very soon others are making inquiries. It works out that in a few months time we are selling a considerable quantity, and all from that one window display.

"We try to keep what the people ask for, but do not display prominently any line without a good profit.

Changed Brand of Pastry Flour.

"I have recently got many of my customers buying a pastry flour which I recommended. Many of them who were using another, are now convinced I am offering them better value as a pastry flour, the profit is a little better, and I am selling more flour."

Still another line is the McCrodan store pushing with success. A competitor dealing exclusively in this line sells the goods by giving something extra as a premium. Mr. McCrodan points out to customers who buy this line at the opposition store that he gives them better value for the money. He demonstrates this fact in his own store, and now this trade is coming back to him.



Where a Good Selling Talk Resulted in Sale of a New Cereal.

Opens Accounts With Good Pays.

Mr. McCrodan believes that an important part of any dealer's success is getting his money from credit customers. It is one of his policies, for instance, to open accounts only with conductors, brakemen, engineers and firemen on the railways These men receive anywhere from $85 to $125 per month, and, therefore, earn enough to pay their grocery bills Others have to pay cash Having been in business in Belleville for many years, he knows pretty nearly everybody, and is therefore in a good position to watch credits

"I haven't lost more than $200 in sixteen years," he said, referring to bad book debts "It is a man's own fault if he loses $3,000 or $4,000 in bad accounts"

In such a case, he claims a dealer has been too anxious to get trade, and is almost sure to sustain these losses. Neither does he believe in forcing a man under certain circumstances—illness, etc.

"Treat him right, and you will get your money back" is his motto. In his opinion, salesmanship is only to be commended when you get your money. Anybody can load up a dead-beat.

New men in the trade in a certain town in Mr. McCrodan's opinion, are not usually careful enough. Because of the fact that they do not know the people well, they should not allow their anxiety to attract new customers to run away with their good business judgment. "Bad debts have put many a man out of business," he states, and he is right.

Personal Attention to Railway Accounts.

His method of handling the "railway trade" is to look after it personally. He himself calls on the wives of the men every Monday and Friday for orders, and in this manner keeps closely in touch with them and their necessities. He believes railway men should be paid monthly, as at present.

Selling Methods of St. John, N.B., Dealer

A Store in Which Business is Not Waited for But Gone After—Interior Arrangement Attractive to Induce Public to Come in—Fixtures Installed That Aid in Service—Fish and Confectionery Departments Given Special Attention.

AFTER having conducted a grocery business for twenty years with each year bringing renewed and improved successes, it would hardly be exaggerating to say that F. E. Williams & Co., St. John, New Brunswick, are well experienced in grocery circles. The business was begun on a moderate scale and now occupies the whole of the three-storey brick building in which it was established.

Exterior View of F. E. Williams' Handsome Store in St. John, N.B. The Windows Are Dressed in Easter Lily Garb.

This firm is recognized as among the leading dealers in St. John, if not in the Maritime Provinces, and every article from the store bears the stamp of reliability; for unless the goods are of a nature which can be recommended to any customer, they will find no place in stock with F. E. Williams & Co.

Twenty-Year Customers.

In the centre of a fine residential district with an extensive territory to draw trade, the firm cater to a good class of customers, and many of the families with whom they first opened accounts twenty years ago, are still purchasing their household supplies from the shelves with the same degree of contentment. "Reliability" is their watchword and it is looked upon as one of the best to induce custom, for with reliable goods in store, the natural sequel is satisfied customers, and increased business. The firm keep closely in touch with latest methods and ideas in conducting a grocery store, so that while they may be old from the standpoint of inception, from the trade point of view they aim to be entirely modern and new.

Frank E. Williams is the real head of the business. "There have been many changes in the grocery business in St. John since I first started a score of years ago," he said recently, "but I have always made it a point to keep well abreast of the times, to retain my old customers and to attract new ones. To do this of course, experience has been an important factor, but selling methods have been material aids as well, and by this I do not mean 'forcing" or "superflously talking sales" so much as being attentive to detail, keeping a well furnished store, replenishing stock carefully, looking after the new ideas in fixtures,, lighting, etc., and installing the latest in patents for attracting attention from the general public on which we have to depend for trade."

A Store That Attracts.

Keeping in mind these suggestions, Mr. Williams has met with prosperity. On entering his store it is noticed that there is a general air of cleanliness which at once commands attention, that his goods appear fresh and tempting, and that his fixtures and methods in displaying the various lines are such as to do so to the best possible advantage. His store has two entrances, the one leading to the grocery department, the other to the meat and fish departments, and the whole is connected by a doorway in the interior so that customers may pass freely from one to the other. Hygenic methods are carefully attended to in the grocery store and in the meat and fish departments as well, and every article kept in bulk in the shop, is protected from dust, flies, or other menace to trade, by hermetically sealed covers of plate glass, so that the contents of the jar, box, or other receptacle for holding goods are easily visible and appealingly displayed to catch the eye of the prospective purchaser.

Believer in Price Tickets.

Fully ninety per-cent. of the goods carried in stock and displayed to attract attention bear price-tags and most of the lines when featured in a fairly large quantity have a short, snappy, catchy paragraph as well to further interest the customer. This is especially true in the matter of window displays. This latter is regarded as being of keen importance in creating custom by the firm, and frequent changes of display goods are made with the intention of attracting passing trade.

Fish Display Changed Daily.

In the grocery department the windows are changed quite frequently and made to appear as appealing as possible, while in the meat and fish stores there is not a night that the display of meats and fish is not changed and a different line featured.

There is considerable travel along the street on which the store has its greater frontage, and because of this, to draw attention to the windows, the goods, and the shop itself, the store is lighted every evening during the week so that those passing along must see what goods are displayed in the windows, in the silent salesmen inside, on the shelves and in fixtures and other places about the premises.

Clerks Have Specific Duties.

One reason given by the firm for the tidy, and attractive exterior and interior of the store is that they have departmentized to as great an extent as is possible, and each clerk is responsible for some certain sections wherein are offered or stored lines of goods which it is easy to group together and for one clerk to give his especial personal attention. It has been found that the results are much better and more productive than when it is left with the clerks in general to attend to the various details of the store arrangement.

For instance, one clerk is responsible for a particular counter and the goods in the fixtures beneath and behind, and the same is true as regards the rear store fixtures, the show cases and silent salesmen, but of course the departmentizing does not prevent a clerk who gives his personal attention to some particular lines, from attending to the wants of a customer in others.

These methods serve to keep the clerks well in touch with the store and the stock and do not permit of some lines becoming more stocked than others, while they also tend to familiarize the staff with the various goods kept for sale, and make the suggestive policy of selling the more easy.

Staff Tender Suggestions.

At all times of the year it is expected of the staff to report on what might prove to the advantage of the store in the way of suggestions for the selling of some one or other line, displaying some wares, or replenishing a low line of stock. Interest in the welfare of the firm is thus more keen and under such circumstances the answer to a customer's query which is sometimes, "Well, we are all out of that special line, Mrs. So-and-so," is never heard in F. E. Williams' store.

On entering the store a delightful and fragrant aroma of coffee greets the sense of smell, and on looking about there is seen an electric mill for the preparation of this drink. "Fresh ground coffee, a specialty," is one of the maxims of the store policy. And nearby in galvanized casings different blends of teas are kept, while inside glass panels in the fixtures adjoining are samples of the various grades of coffee and tea kept for sale.

The Confectionery Department.

Another manner in which to induce sales by creative methods outside of salesmenship is manifested in the tempting array of fancy cakes of all kinds shown in fixtures near the door of the grocery. These are featured in boxes alike in pattern and with oval fronts of glass so that the contents may easily be seen without having to open the cases. Beneath these cake fixtures are pails of candies with patent glass coverings and nearyby in show cases or silent salesmen are the fancier lines of chocolates and candies kept in store.

Above these suspended by chains from the ceiling are glass shelves on which repose the boxed goods which it is desired to feature, and there are also glass jars in which candies are kept.

A Mirrored Refrigerator.

To the rear of the meat and fish department is a large roomy refrigerator which is of material value in conducting this branch of the business. It is furnished with large mirrors inside so that the goods stored in it can be seen both from the front and rear and there are also several plate glass shelves on which cut roasts, steaks, or other maller meats are deposited before delivery.

Special Seasons Taken Advantage of.

At certain seasons of the year special efforts are made by the management to induce extra custom by the featuring of lines appropriate to the occasion, and this is a policy which has at all times worked advantageously. For instance at Christmas time special lines of goods are stocked which are not regularly on the order list and the clerks are given instructions to "boost" these as largely as possible, while at Easter the same policy is resorted to.

Few customers are allowed to leave the store without carrying with them or having given an order for the lines which are being pushed or some of them at least. This policy is not only adhered to in the grocery department, where extra lines of candies, fruits, nuts, and other articles are featured, but in the meat store as well, for here are displayed to advantage choice western beef, poultry, relishes, etc., and customers are always reminded that these have just been received for the Easter market.

No Special Ordering by Phone.

The idea of telephoning to customers and asking for an order at stated intervals during the week, for instance on a Thursday evening to get a Friday fish order was tried for a while with this firm, but eventually was abandoned. It was found that while some of the customers slightly favored the scheme the majority did not, particularly those who were not regular dealers with the store. It was found that the orders would come in for some thing or other just the same, and the policy was given up. Some people who had fairly large homes, would be in a distant part of their house when the 'phone would ring and they would have to leave something important in order to go to another portion of the house, or downstairs, perhaps, to answer it, and when they found what was wanted, they would be none too well pleased.

During Lent and Advent.

In the season of Lent and Advent extra endeavors are resorted to in order to work up and keep the fish trade and the best known means, the management say, is to always have in stock a full supply of all the lines of fish, have them nicely and attractively displayed and suggest to a dubious customer that perhaps a fish dinner would make a pleasing change from continual diets of meat, etc. Every other day in the Lenten season the display of fish in the fish window is changed and with pieces of ice and greenery it is made as attractive as possible.

Winnipeg Dealer's Success in Two Years

For Thirty Years Was Employed as Salesman with Hudson Bay Co.—Phenomenal Results From a Cheese Window Which Shows One Method For Introducing Goods—Winnipeg's Cosmopolitan Population Have Many Tastes.

AMONG the many successful grocers in Winnipeg, few have achieved more marked success than R. H. Graham—"Dolphy" Graham, as he is called, for the old sport nick-name sticks.

Mr. Graham was for thirty years an employe of the Hudson Bay Co. in the grocery department. Some two years ago he determined to start in business for himself, and it was not long until he was in the front rank and catering to a portion of the best trade in the city. In this he is a close competitor with his old-time employers, and it was while with them that no doubt he acquired that discriminating judgment that has ensured his success.

Strong Believer in the Window.

Speaking of his window, the dressing of which has become a fine art with him Mr. Graham said: "I consider my window as a most valuable if not the most valuable form of advertising to me. Day after day and every hour of the day, I see people stop to look at the window, and then walk in.

"I have secured many new customers by it, and if once we get a customer we generally manage to keep him.

Results From a Cheese Display.

"Perhaps I could give you a case in point to show what my window has accomplished for me. Now, during bonspiel week I had a cheese window—not a very promising subject, you would suppose, for display purposes—but we arranged our lines, and I was surprised myself at the number we carried. Canadian, American, English Stilton and Cheddar, Gorgonzola, Limburger, and a host of others were on view—and say, the people certainly did show interest.

"Well, our sales of Limburger previous to the display, averaged about 10 lbs. a week. During the bonspiel the entire stock went out in a couple of days.

Almost Half a Ton Went.

"We sold 800 to 1,000 lbs. of fancy high-priced cheeses during that week, and have averaged about that ever since.

"Scores of people told me that they did not know that such a one, their favorite cheese, could be got in Winnipeg until they saw it in my display. Seeing it, the old taste revived, and has had to be satisfied."

The Lines They Feature.

"We try, in our window display, to bring into prominence lines that are escaping attention often because people are ignorant that they are obtainable or ignorant of their existence. You will find people in this city to-day with most discriminating tastes and with money to gratify such whims. It is these people that we try to get after in our window display."

Many Varieties of Tastes.

In answer to a question as to the changes he had seen in the requirements of the city in the way of groceries, Mr. Graham stated that they were little short of revolutionary. Winnipeg to-day is a cosmopolitan city. It is also a wealthy and a hospitable city. It is necessary to carry goods to suit the Britisher, German, Frenchman, besides the Canadian and Yankee. All these people have their pet delicacies, and where they can get them they will also come for staple lines.

No grocer that is up to date, but carries many lines that were not dreamed of ten or fifteen years ago. "I never start a new line but what I carefully display it in my window. Ten to one it will catch me some customers. Once we get them to come in it is up to us to do the rest," said Mr. Graham.

Twenty Years in Business Celebrated

Towel With Customer's Initials Given as Souvenir—Credit Eliminated Altogether—Cash Business Now Being Done—A Large General Business With Turnover of $70,000.

The Earle Co. of Creemore, Ont., recently celebrated their twentieth year in business. It was in 1892 that Alex. Earle first established the business at Maple Valley, Ont. Later it was removed to Creemore where under the business methods adopted it has seen a gradual development. It was in 1895 that the firm was incorporated under the present style of The Earle Co.

Creemore is a small town on the Grand Trunk Railway between Toronto and Collingwood. Although it cannot boast of a large population, still the thickly populated and prosperous farming community surrounding it makes possible the extensive and up-to-date store which Mr. Earle has established.

For the size of the town, Mr. Earle has a large store and shows just what it is possible to do even in the smaller country towns. It is a general store but the grocery department is an important one and is given a good deal of prominence. The ground floor of the store is 75 feet wide by 214 feet deep, giving an extensive floor space which allows of liberal display of goods. The grocery department takes up 70 feet of one side, a big stock being carried.

Have Many Modern Fixtures.

Many of the latest improvements in the way of grocery fixtures are to be found in the store. Liberal use of silent salesman has been made in this department. Cash carriers are installed throughout the store. The second story of the building is devoted to house furnishings.

Four large show windows add much to the appearance of the store and are reponsible for a good deal of business. Displays are changed regularly every week. In window display, groceries are given a good deal of space. A well assorted stock of fancy groceries, ranking with some of the best in the larger cities is carried. The business which is done in fancy groceries would surprise many dealers in towns of the same size. The store now has eleven clerks in its employ.

Operates on Cash Basis.

For a number of years a credit business was done. The losses entailed made such a cut in profits that after a great deal of consideration, the business was established on a cash basis. That was three years ago. That the cash method in Mr. Earle's opinion, has proved successful is shown by the fact that last year the turnover of the firm amounted to $70,000. This was on a stock of $20,000. Absolutely no credit is given.

The firm are big advertisers, believing strongly in the value of printers' ink in attracting business and forestalling the encroachments of the mail order houses.

Their twentieth anniversary was made the basis of something special in this direction. On this occasion they gave a souvenir to each customer in the form of a towel with the customer's initials on it. Such a gift could not help but bring the store to the recipient's mind frequently.

In order to moisten cigars which have become dry, place half a moderate sized raw potato in the box for a few days. The same method will help to moisten any kind of tobacco.

A Business Founded on Sound Principles

Initial Announcement Two Years Ago Brought 102 Customers First Day—Evidences That The Dealer's Recommendations Go a Long Way—Instance Showing how a Satisfied Customer Advertises The Business—Little Chance For Dead Beat.

Guelph, Nov. 24, 1909.

Dear Madam,—

Having bought out the business of Peter Anderson, we have opened up with a full line of all kinds of groceries, fruits in season, and a fine display of crockery and china.

The firm consists of L. J. Hood, formerly of Toronto, and W. G. Hood, who has had over ten years' experience with Mr. Robt. Mitchell, and four years' with Messrs. Benson Bros. We have confidence that we are capable of serving you to your best interests. We shall give our personal attention to every detail of our business.

We kindly solicit a share of your patronage.

We are,

Yours respectfully,

HOOD BROS.

Phone 128. 10 Wyndham St.

The foregoing letter gotten out in neat and attractive form was the first announcement sent out by a Guelph, Ont., grocery firm which in a little over two years since its establishment, has made good progress. First established as Hood Bros., the name of the firm now is Hood & Bennallick, the partnership consisting of W. G. Hood, who had 14 years' experience behind the counter in Guelph before going into business for himself, and Arch. Bennallick, who also learned the business in the Classic City.

Made Sure of Good Mailing List.

Hundreds of the circulars were sent out through the city. Names of housewives who might become customers were secured from every available source, and this circular sent to them. It is a noteworthy fact that on the first Saturday after the doors were thrown open to the purchasing public, 102 persons visited the store and made purchases. This number established by actual count was encouraging indeed to the young firm.

How Increases Came.

During the first year in business over two and one-half times as much business was done as by the firm previously in this location. The second year showed a nine thousand dollar increase in sales over the first, while this year business has been increasing at the rate of $1,400 per month over last year. This proves that the years spent behind the counter as clerk gathering business ideas were of some avail.

The location has probably been somewhat of a factor in their success as they are situated in an excellent part of the city, and being on a corner, their store stands out prominently and has the advantage of show windows on two streets. The entrance to the store is exactly on the corner, inviting within, as it were, all passers-by, no matter from what direction they might come.

Specializes in Canned Goods.

The store makes a specialty of canned goods, and attempts to constantly have some special line to interest customers. Mr. Hood gives an instance showing the value of a special line. It meant the securing of six customers and all indirectly from the sale of one can of a particular brand of peas. Having purchased a case of this line, Mr. Hood succeeded in selling a tin to a certain customer. She liked it and came for more and, moreover, recommended it to her friends.

As a result of this free advertising done by a pleased customer, five others commenced to purchase this article. At first they purchased only this particular brand but gradually began to buy other articles, and several might now be considered as regular customers.

The chief method of introducing new goods in this store is by display on counter, shelf and in the window. "I do not believe in forcing new goods or any goods for that matter on customers," says Mr. Hood. "The man or woman who leaves your store feeling that something which they really did not want or need has been forced on them, are liable to avoid your store next time they are shopping."

Results From Newspapers.

The local paper is also used in introducing new goods and it is not an unusual thing to receive direct results from newspaper advertising of new lines. Mr. Hood has somewhat of a new idea man regarding advertising. "When we have a special bargain on any line we do not advertise it in the paper. We keep our newspaper advertising to general or new goods. A special price in our opinion is an ad. itself, so that heralding it forth in the paper is like doubling up and using space to little purpose.

"We try as much as possible to carry all lines which will be asked for, but we find that we can generally sell the brand we want to." For instance, they do not stock a certain brand of soap powder, one which is advertised to the consumer quite extensively. They have one, however, they consider of just as good quality and which they find customers will buy on their recommendation.

An Eye On The Slow Pay.

The prevention of the inroads of the dead-beat has proved an interesting feature of the business. This firm has been fortunate in this regard, having possibly not more than $300 worth of bad debts on their books after two years' business and a big turn-over. The explanation is the care with which they guard against this profit reducer of the grocery trade. Years in the business in this city has acquainted them with a large percentage of the good and bad pays. When a stranger seeks credit, he must furnish some particulars in order to establish his claim. One of the important questions is where the prospect previously dealt. The last dealer is communicated with and his or her honesty or lack of it ascertained.

The value of this is shown in a recent case. Two families applied at this store for credit. They were asked where they had previously dealt and both gave dealers' names in a neighboring and smaller town. The reports of these dealers were weighed and one was given credit and the other refused. That they were sized up correctly is shown by the fact that the one given credit is keeping well paid up. The one refused has since been in the courts for failing to call on pay days at the store that gave him credit.

That this method of sizing up a customer is not always a sure thing is shown by another instance. The woman in this case gave the name of a grocer who said she had always paid him. She had evidently kept this man paid up for a short time in order to establish a reputation, as she had left a wide balance with the man who had previously had the "pleasure" of serving her. This, unfortunately, was not found out until some credit had been extended. However, when she did not settle on the first pay day, she secured no more credit.

This store believes that enough is plenty, especially when it comes to credit.

Have Chinaware Department.

Hood & Bennallick handle chinaware as well as groceries. One side of the store has been, until now, devoted to chinaware, but arrangements have been made to transfer this department to the second floor while the whole bottom floor will be given over to groceries. Ample space will be devoted to chinaware on the second floor, the side being fitted with a glass front so that the chinaware display may be seen from the street.

A Day's Extra Sales in a Country Store

Amounts to $9.10, Which, if Carried on Throughout Year Would Mean Sales of $2,790 Above Actual Demand—How Corn Syrup and Flour were Introduced—Unprofitable Delivery Trip Turned Into Profitable One.

The merchants and his clerks have excellent opportunities presented them daily for selling goods over and above actual demand as well as for raising the quality of goods sold. The person who is content to hand over the counter merely those goods which customers may ask for is not a salesman. The real salesman brings salesmanship methods into play to create demand for goods which he has on his shelves. For this reason he is a more highly paid man than he who makes no attempt to sell goods other than those for which customers ask.

Opportunities for creating demand or displaying creative salesmanship are far from few in every store. It matters not whether the clerk may be dispensing groceries in the city or behind the counter of the country store. The possibilities are to be found in either place.

A Day in a Country Store.

The writer recently spent a day in a country store and there he had several objective lessons in creative salesmanship which impressed him why some grocers are more successful than others, and why some salesmen are drawing a larger pay envelope.

A Sale of Corn Syrup.

The day's business had not proceeded far when the first example was brought to light. A farmer had completed the purchase of a few odd groceries, when the enterprising clerk brought corn syrup to his notice. The farmer had had no notion of buying but when the clerk pointed out that the children liked it and that it was a great saving on butter, he became interested enough to enquire the price of the smaller pail.

"That one is worth 30 cents," replied the clerk, "but here we have one containing four times as much which we are selling at $1.10. It is cheaper to buy it this way, and besides you have a more serviceable pail when the syrup is used." By the time he had again emphasized its comparative cheapness, the farmer had decided to buy.

Made the Trip Pay.

Shortly before noon, a customer who lived about a half a mile from the village telephoned in a small order for groceries. The amount was so small that it would really mean a loss to the grocer in delivering it. Here the merchant came in with his creative salesmanship and turned the delivery into a profitable one. He telephoned a customer on the same route, informed her that he was delivering some goods her way, and inquired if there was anything she needed.

About the only thing she could think of was, "50 cents worth of granulated sugar.

"Anything in canned goods, tomatoes, peas or corn?" he inquired.

"No, I have plenty," he stated she had said.

Sold Some More Flour.

"How did you like that flour I sent up some time ago?"

"Very well. Say, I believe you might as well send me up another twenty-five pounds."

"Yes. And now we have some fresh lettuce in this morning at 10 cents a bunch. What about them?"

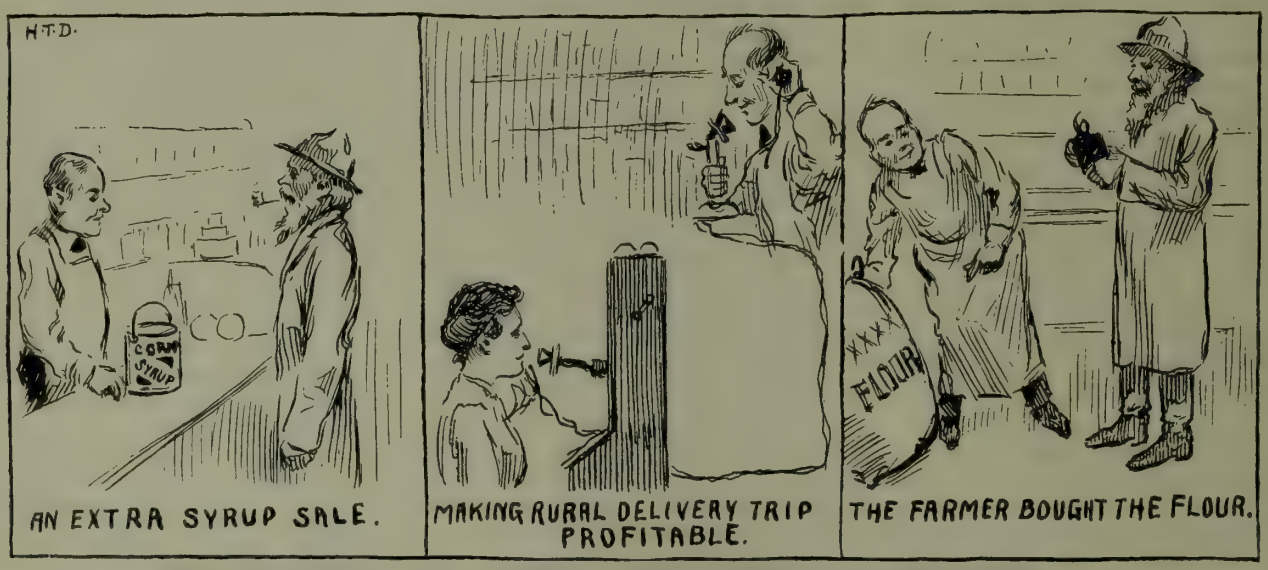
Two bunches were ordered, which with a bottle of vanilla completed the order. The delivery had however, by the salesmanship of the merchant been made profitable.

Clerk Introduces Syrup Again.

The grocer went to dinner. A woman customer came in. When she had given a small order, the clerk still remembering his success in selling syrup, introduced the same line to her.

"Are you using any corn syrup, Mrs. Customer? We are selling a lot of it just now. Not only do the children like it, but it is good for them."

"And it will save the butter, too," remarked the customer, herself. "I believe I will try one of the smaller pails."



Sales Above Actual Demand Amounted to $9.10 in One Day in This Country Store.

The clerk seemed to be getting interested in the salesmanship game. As the day advanced his enthusiasm to sell more goods than customers inquired for grew greater. Here and there, he secured the opportunity to attempt to interest customers in "something else." All his energies did not, of course, prove successful. His efforts to increase sales to one old woman proved particularly unsuccessful. She thought foods were all very dear. She referred to potatoes.

Beans Instead of Potatoes.

"Why don't you try beans," suggested the clerk. "They are a good food and not particularly high."

"How much are they?"

"Five cents a pound."

"My goodness you could buy them for half that a few years ago," she remarked. She decided, however, to look at them. She pointed out there were several broken ones among them, and all the efforts to sell her proved in vain. The clerk, however, was by no means disheartened at all this effort being expended without result. He still continued his salesmanship methods.

The Wife Wasn't Pleased.

The proprietor also did his share in promoting sales. A farmer came in for a plug of tobacco.

"What kind of flour are you using now?" inquired the merchant.

"The last I got was Blank's."

"How did you like it?"

"Not very well. It didn't please the wife at all."

Here the merchant a saw the possibility of a sale. "I have just received a shipment of ———— flour. I'm the first man to sell it here. I would like you to try a couple of cwt. By test, it is an excellent flour and makes good white bread."

"I'm a little wary about buying flour, We always found Blank's alright."

"Yes, Blank's is a good flour, but I think this is fully as good if not better. I got my wife to try it and she had great success with it. Probably your wife would also."

What it Would Mean During Year.

Thus the discussion continued, and when the farmer who had come for a plug of tobacco drove away from the store, he carried in the back of his sleigh, two cwt. of flour. The extra sales thus induced by the salesmanship of the merchant and his clerk amounted during that one day to $9.10. If this were continued during the 307 selling days of the year, it would mean total extra sales of $2,793.70. Think of it. The extra profit made would almost pay the wages of a clerk. Surely something worth striving for.

Such is Creative Salesmanship. Examples of it can be seen in many stores most any day of the week. In some stores the amount of business secured is much greater than in others. The merchant and clerks in such a store are better salesmen. On this selling power of the grocer depends to a large extent the success of the business from year ro year.

WHY RETAIL STORES FAIL.

Insufficient knowledge of the real value of merchandise.

No inborn trading instinct.

Extravagance, i.e., no natural gift of economy.

Reckless price cutting.

Poor advertising.

Inattentive, incompetent help.

Lack of neatness, order, and attractive display.

Failure to include all fixed charges in figuring the costs, such as freight, drayage, rent, insurance, salaries, operating expenses, etc.

To the reasons mentioned above must be added the failure of many retailers to turn over their stock quickly.

Need of a System in Every Grocery Store

Business Should be Conducted on Organized Basis—Goods Coming in Ought to be Closely Checked—Watching the Delivery—Arrangement of Goods on the Shelves.

By W. L.

Every retail dealer who wants to become successful must have System in the store.

A grocer may carry a splendid line of goods; he may be a first-class salesman —neat, courteous, painstaking and a hustler in every sense of the word; his store may be a model of cleanliness and his clerks everything they should be, but where is his business, where his profits, if he lacks a system? If he runs his store without a sound, organized method of conducting it?

The system by which the big successful houses and enterprises are conducted, the great care and study given to even the most minute and apparently unimportant details, would be a revelation to many a grocer.

Nothing is too small or unimportant to be given attention and therein alone lies the secret of their seemingly wonderful progress—this aetention to detail.

What System Means.

What is meant by system is a careful, intelligent, organized method of conducting your business—a well-regulated order in which to do things, from buying your goods to delivering them to your customer.

The systematic grocer, for instance, possesses a receiving book, in which he enters the receipt of all goods and the date received. Goods should be entered as soon as received and not two or three days later, when they are likely to be forgotten altogther.

Weights should be entered, and it is a good plan these days, when goods are packed so irregularly, to also note and enter contents of each case. These items should be promptly checked and added upon receipt of bills or invoices, thereby showing the correctness or incorrectness of same.

Too Much for Granted.

Too many grocers neglect this plan. They take too much for granted—that bills are right, weights and extensions correct, etc. The best of us make errors, but by this method the most trivial mistake can be detected and possibly a big leak stopped. It is simply applying a system to your business.

Again, as with receiving your goods, the same care should be taken in delivering them. Accuracy in checking out orders should be always maintained, and while, of course, mistakes cannot be entirely eliminated, by a careful system of checking these same errors can be greatly decreasd.

A Delivery System.

It might be a good plan to have regular hours for local deliveries and regular days for out-of-town deliveries. Let your customers be well acquainted with them. A good plan is to have them posted in a conspicuous place where they can be readily seen. Stick to them; don't favor such and such a customer to the sacrifice of another. Don't send your wagons over the same territory four, five or six times a day. It means time lost and no busy man can afford this. The public is too ready to impose on the easy grocer. Don't be him. But, of course, tact and courtesy are needed in this matter, and if used your trade will certainly not suffer.

Then with your work in your store. Have one man in charge of your provision department if it is large enough. He will be able to soon weigh butter right to the dot and you know that means money saved.

Have another man weigh your sugar for the same reason. Have regular days to do this and see that it is done upon those days. Study out your most profitable articles. Make displays of these and see that your clerks push the sale of them to the utmost.

Remember the Shelves.

Another important item is to have your shelves systematized. A grocer's shelves may be clean and orderly and yet without any systematic arrangement whatever. Don't put soap upon your front shelves next to pickles or olives or cereals. Don't put the items you sell most of on the top shelves or away to the rear of the store. Don't put your new goods in front of the old stock.

This sounds like too many don'ts, doesn't it, but how often one or two of these things are done, either through carelessness or thoughtlessness? Many and many a time. Systematize.

Dealer's Signature on Order Placed Ahead

Traveler Claims the Merchant Will Appreciate Such a System Once Accustomed to It—Experience With Dealer Who Was Asked to Do This—Also Maintains That Draft System is Preferable in Paying Accounts.

By F. R. McIntosh.

I was starting out to address you as "Mr. Retailer," but I won't address you that way, because what I have to say to you, does not apply to you distinctly as a retailer. I want to say something about a prejudice that exists among a great many merchants—there, I have it! Mr. Merchant—an undue prejudice against signing orders; and also with some, against accepting drafts or signing notes.

Most of us are more or less familiar with the man who "never accepted a draft in his life." This man does not consider that in refusing to do so, he is interfering with the best system ever devised for making settlements, as well as slighting a firm who, without security, are lending him hundreds of dollars from time to time, in the form of the goods they ship him. And he does not consider that when he says, "I do not accept drafts!" he implies—"I have no business system."

Dealer Took the Note.

I was in a country store once, while the merchant was trying to sell a fur coat to a young fellow. It was after the turn of the year, when most merchants are glad to give any terms to get furs out. After considerable dickering, the merchant said, "Well, take it now and pay for it next year." "I will," said the young fellow, "if you'll take my note for it." Take my note for it!

This seemed so out of the ordinary, that I asked the young fellow after, why he was so anxious to sign a note. "It's just this way, sir," he said, "that fellow sells more than one fur coat a year, and six months from now he might forget just what our terms were and ask me for the money. But I have his receipt for my note and there's no danger of any misunderstanding."

The Instructions Not Read.

A few days ago, one of my traveling friends let me in on a little incident which will show the inconsistency of some people in their business exactions. About a year ago he had been successful in landing a pretty fair order from an Ontario firm, who, in the ordinary course of their system, required him to leave and also take a copy of the order on their printed form. Good business this—so far. But my friend did not notice, and neither did his firm, a clause on that form which read, "we do not sign notes or accept drafts, but remit by cheque when due."

The goods were shipped and in the ordinary course a draft was drawn at three months; and then both my friend and his firm learned the importance of the eagle eye on business documents. The draft was refused and along came a letter with such phrases as "What do you suppose we print instructions for?" and "better have your bookkeeper take the wool off his eyes!"

The Epilogue.

"Of course," you will say, "the traveler should have noticed those instructions." Yes, certainly he should have; but that is no excuse for one business man to heap invective on another; and besides, this little narrative has an epilogue, and that is how I came to be let in on the particulars.

My friend had a letter from his firm, enclosing one from these people, asking them to accept a note at three months for a bill on which they had already had three months' open account. They said it would "greatly facilitiate them." Well, my friend advised his firm to accept it; travelers do try to do things for their customers. But don't you think he was just a little tempted to have his firm write and say—"we do not accept notes; we prefer to have accounts settled by cheque when due?" It is well when making regulations, to see that you are able to live up to your end of the contract.

Your Signature on Orders.

And now, Mr. Merchant, about signing orders. It is, of course, not very necessary to have copies of the sorting orders you give so often, the invoices of which are usually in your mail the second day after you have placed the order. But you place a lot of orders for future shipment, sometimes three or four months ahead, and when you are doing this kind of business it is absolutely necessary that you protect yourself by system.

There are several very good systems, but only one which will positively prevent misunderstandings; and that one is to have all "future" orders signed in duplicate. Each party to the transaction will then have an identical copy, and there will be no possibility of your getting goods that you "didn't think you ordered," or of you expecting goods "you thought you ordered." Your signature is your protection; it is not a means for the seller to hold you up. If you have good reason to cancel an order you will find the seller as ready to accommodate the man who signed as the one who "never signs."

A Case in Point.

A traveler for a grocery house, who had learned by experience that booking orders ahead without a signed copy was bad business, decided to take "future" orders in duplicate. One of his first experiences at such, pretty well illustrates the undue prejudice which exists among a great many merchants against signing orders. This was with a merchant whom (judging from his appearance and the general up-to-date look of his store; and also the fact that he was well up in church and fraternal circles) one would take to be the very one to fall into line with any good scheme. That is to say, his environment was not such that he should have been expected to act as he did. It was in August, 1909; the traveler had booked him for raisins, currants, etc., and after making out the order in duplicate, asked him to sign it.

The traveler was hardly prepared for such abuse as was meted out to him.

He was told he could "cancel the order, if the firm couldn't trust him after doing business for years they could do without his business; he wasn't going to run away." All this was thrown out to a traveler who had backbone enough to put up a system for the protection of his customer. I say for the protection of his customer, for I will show you that this customer needed protection.

Had Been Caught on Canned Goods.

The traveler got him cooled down and when he thought he had him in a proper humor again, tried to sell him canned goods for future. "No," said the customer, "I'll never buy canned goods ahead again from anybody. Year before last I got a double dose, and I still have them; tomatoes cost a dollar and a quarter, and I suppose you sell them now for eighty cents. I only gave one order, but Joe Peters said he was sure I gave him the order, and Fred. Pemberton said I had given it to him; they both said it was a good purchase, so I kept them."

Perhaps either Peters or Pemberton stuffed him, but he does not know which one. If he had made a practice of signing "future" orders in duplicate, he could have asked to see his siginature and ascertained just where and when he had placed the order. As it is, he holds a grudge against each of them. I know Peters and I know Pemberton, and I know something of their business methods, and I am inclined to believe both are innocent.

The loose system is to blame. If you wish to avoid trouble with your "future" orders, insist upon signing them in duplicate, and keep a copy.

Figuring Profits to Be on the Safe Side

The Error Shown of Building From Cost—Selling Price Must be Divided—A Change in Method from Years Gone By—Computing Margins in Stocks, Bonds and Real Estate—How the Jobber Figures.

*By Henry Johnson, jr.

To go back to my Vancouver friend. My object in so carefully defining Margin and Profit is to bring out a point never indicated, so far as I know, before I covered it about a year ago. That date, by the way, may serve to show my friend that others have disputed my method of calculation—yea, numbers have done so during the past nine or ten years.

The point I am talking about is, that Margin is used in my talks to cover the Process of making a Profit—or a Loss.

What Margin Is.

Think over that. The entire work done in your business during the time from January 1st to December 31st is Process; hence Margin is applied to all differences between laid-in Cost and Selling Prices during the entire year, or whatever period elapses between inventories in your business.

After the inventory is priced and figured up and the books are completely closed, except the needful "Balance" to even up the Loss and Gain Account, you are ready to state correctly and finally about Profit. You can then state what net Profit you have averaged from your sales and what percentage of net Profit you have earned on your invested Capital. Get that clearly in mind, for it is significant as you will see immediately below.

Take a grocery business of usual proportions. The total Capital employed is, say, $6,000. The sales have been $30,000. The net standing on the credit side of Loss and Gain is $1,800.

Finding the Net Earnings.

First, what has been the net earnings on business done? I am sure you will answer 6 per cent.—$1,800 on $30,000. How do you get that? By dividing the $1,800 by $30,000, decemially—or, if you have done much of this sort of thing, you will not have to "figger" at all; you will read the answer at a glance. But note, you will not divide that $1,800 by $24,000, the average cost. Nor should you, because never do you figure your expenses that way.

Next, you seek to learn what net Profit you have earned on the Capital employed. A glance will show that you have made 30 per cent. Now is the one time in your business that you compute your Profits on Invested Capital. Why? Because not until now have you completed a Process and reached a finished transaction. Inventory times are the only times when all the figures and reports are before us so that we can definitely tell just where we are, and these are the only times when we should use the word Profit, because only at these times can we accurately state just what our Profit is.

Experience in our daily business teaches us approximately what net Profit we must aim for and what we can probably realize; but until the final figures are in, all we really know definitely about is Margin. Hence my effort to carefully distinguish between the two.

* * * * * *

His Early Teaching.

Yes, if I remember rightly the little schooling I had before my eleventh year, when I went in behind the counter, we were taught to compute all margins or profits from cost. That kind of thing stands in the books to-day, I also believe. I do not think it will remain there for another generation, however, because light will gradually percolate into the brain of arimeticians. They will get this light from the surrounding illumination which is now breaking so brilliantly on the business world that it will force itself on the notice of the scholastic world, too.

In fact, I find that I have only to state to an arithmetician that merchants always compute their expenses on their Selling Price for him to see that then they must also compute margins from the same end of the problem. That is the only safe way.

The Bonds and Stocks Issue.

What I have said will dispose of the Real Estate, Bonds, Stocks, etc., to which my friend referred. Bonds and Stocks are commodities in which we invest without doing anything other than putting in our money. The work of every kind is done by somebody else and we get an absolutely net return, with nothing to come off, of certain interest or dividends. Real Estate is slightly different in that it has a considerable element of speculation in it; but after it is sold the Process is much the same as in our grocery business. We buy a vacancy for $5,000. We hold for four years and then we sell for $7,000. Is that $2,000 Profit or Margin? It is Margin, because it is subject to certain deductions before you can ascertain your Profit. Here are the deductions:

Taxes, four years	$ 80 00
Interest, 6%, four years	1,200 00
	$1,280 00

Which shows us a net Profit of $720, 14.40 per cent. on Invested Capital. Here you do not work on the selling price at all because it is so simple a transaction and is finished and complete in itself. This is just like your position at inventory time—the work is done and all factors are definitely before you.

Factories' Method of Figuring.

It is true that many factories have been run as my friend states. It is also true that numbers of them have gone broke that way. It is further true that many of those which have not gone broke have avoided disaster through an amendment of their method of figuring. One big one in a certain city found at the end of a year that its overhead expense, which we call general expense, was 30.30 per cent. of its sales. The following year those people added 30.30 per cent. to the cost of labor and materials directly charged against each machine, and thought they were O.K. But they suffered a considerable loss that year, and could not tell why. Expert advisors showed them that each machine sold was financially made up as follows:

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met.

Labor and materials	30.30%
Overhead	39.40%
Sales Cost and Profit	30.30%
Total	100%

Further computation showed that the overhead was 130 per cent. of the cost of Labor and Materials.

Our spreads are not so wide and our units are so small that we cannot keep accurate tab on all elements as they do in a factory. That is why we can go on for years working on a mistaken basis, just keeping our heads above water, wondering why we cannot make any money.

Computation altogether on the Selling End is safe and will always reveal the true state of your affairs; hence it is the method to use.

* * * * * *

The Jobber's Position.

The jobber? Yes; he is the fellow in our line of business who is conceded to make all the real money. He does this because he figures right. If any manufacturer goes to a jobber with such a proposition as is related by my friend, he will promptly be told to "come again" with his figures, as he is now only allowing the jobber 16 2-3 per cent.

The jobber buys 250 cases of breakfast food not on any basis of cost whatever, but "at list less 20 per cent., delivered, 2 per cent. for ten-day cash." Say the list is $3, the jobber's bill reads:—

250 cases at $3	$750.00
Less 20%	150.00
Net	$600.00

Freight allowed. 2 per cent. cash ten days.

If the jobber has taken the manufacturer's way of figuring, he would have paid the same bill, but then his margin would have been 20 per cent. on $600, or $120—difference, $30.00; or he would have paid $3 less 16 2-3 per cent.—$2.50 per case—$625.00 and had a prespective gross margin of $125.00—$25 less than he is careful to get.

A Slight Difference.

The jobber sometimes talks a good deal about "100 per cent. and more" to you, but he does not figure that way himself.

With him, the price he can get for the goods, the Selling Price, is 100 per cent. Part of that selling price is made up of cost, another part of expense, a final part of net margin; or there are only two parts—cost and gross margin.

We must figure as the jobber figures. Then we shall be safe and Right, and do a profitable business.

Chinaware Department on an Elevation

Placed To Rear of Grocery Section — People Who Come To Look At Chinaware Must Also See Grocery Displays—Methods Of Woodstock Grocers — Think Display Windows Worth Something—Goods For Delivery Leave By Rear Door.

The man who is satisfied with his present conditions and content to allow his store and his business to remain as they are, is not likely to progress much unless circumstances make it impossible for him to do otherwise.

turn-over of $85,000 last year—he is by no means satisfied with present attainments. He has greater ideals for the appearance of his store, his methods of doing business and the amount of business he wishes to do. He feels that Ground Plan of Poole & Co.'s Store at Woodstock, Ont., Showing Chinaware Department. Note Position of Hoist and Potato Chute Going Into Basement.

Peter Poole, proprietor of Poole & Co., Woodstock, Ont., is a man who has not reached his ideals yet. Although he has a large and quite attractive store and doing a good business—having a there is always room for improvement.

Thinks Windows Worth Something.

"One thing that I have done in the past that I do not think is right," says

Mr. Poole, "is allowing manufacturers to use my windows to display their goods alone without some remuneration. These companies have to pay high for street car and poster advertising and my window is certainly just as valuable as an advertising medium and they should pay for it."

Mr. Poole regards his windows as valuable space. He has two show windows, one on either side of the entrance, and while one is rather small, the other is good sized. When new goods are being introduced the window is made good use of, combined with advertising in the local paper. He believes that show cards are valuable in making sales even if no special price is given on the goods. Instances are by no means infrequent where sales have resulted directly from showing goods in the window with a price card.

"I believe it is well to vary window displays both in regard to goods and method of display. For instance, a display of one kind of goods is followed by something of an altogether different character, always aiming, however, to show seasonable lines. The windows are half the business, and I would certainly like to have more window space. I believe it would mean more money for me."

Employs Boy to Open Door.

A new idea which Mr. Poole has inaugurated and one which should be appreciated by customers is having a boy in attendance at the door on Saturdays, and when the staff is increased by two or three to handle the business. It is the duty of the door boy to open and close the door for customers, carry in baskets for them, inquire the wants of any one who may drive up, and otherwise make himself of assistance to the store's customers.

The cost of this boy on a Saturday is not much, and Mr. Poole believes him to be a good investment, as such service raises the store in the estimation of customers.

System Means Efficiency.

Mr. Poole believes in system in the the store. He believes it saves a great deal of time and time means money. He even carries it as far out as his barn where everything is arranged so that horses may be fed and cared for in the least possible time.

The store has a big storage space, both the cellar and second floor being devoted to this purpose. The surplus stock is so arranged that a hand may be placed on any article required at any moment. At the back of the store is a hoist that goods may be transported to and from cellar and second floor with rapidity. Another facility for saving time is a chute to carry potatoes from the back door to cellar, making it unnecessary to carry them down.

The store is 125 feet deep. The front 70 feet is devoted to groceries and the balance to crockery, chinaware and glassware. This department to the back is raised above the level of the grocery department, thus giving it greater prominence than it otherwise would have.

Chinaware and Glassware.

Only high class goods are handled in chinaware and glassware, but glass and other similar expensive goods form no small portion of the sales of this department. This means that a good many well-to-do customers are attracted to the store to purchase these goods and as they must pass 70 feet of grocery display on either side as well as the show windows, the assistance which this department is to the groceries can easily be seen.

A young woman is given special charge of this department, and is thus able to keep in intimate touch with the stock. These goods must be seen in order to sell, so that considerable attention is given to display. Wall shelves range along both sides. Two long tables the whole length of the department also show the goods up to advantage.

Show Case and Shelf Display.

Three silent salesmen extend along the front of the counter side of the grocery department. The shelves are not built up regularly. There are only two shelves above the bins at the bottom, and above this canned goods are built up in pyramid shape along the wall, in between smaller displays of other lines being made. This method of display is somewhat out of the ordinary. On the other side are two silent salesmen, two biscuit display racks and fruit display stands.

Goods Go Out Back Door.

The question was of whether it is best to take goods out the back or front door is one frequently asked. Mr. Poole and his assistant, J. R. McAllan, believe in the back dor route. "While it may be of some advertising value to load up a lot of goods where people cas see them." they argue, "the way you interfere with customers as well as the way it upsets the front part of the store makes it best to take goods out the rear door. The work can also be done with greater rapidity."

The store has worked up a good trade in cheese, giving special attention to securing the kind that will appeal to customers. They place in a stock of June and September cheese each year large enough to last them the entire season. The June make is for cutting during the winter, and the September during the spring. They find that these are the months' make that take well with customers.

THE FOLLY OF GUESSWORK.

It pays to be certain before acting in the grocery business. The grocer should not operate on guesswork. It may come out all right sometimes, but the times that it doesn't are too many to run chances. Recently a customer of a Winnipeg grocer ordered a twenty-five pound bag of flour.

She did not state the kind and as she had been buying both bread and pastry in this size, the grocer was uncertain as to which she wanted. Instead of phoning the customer's home to find out for certain, he took chances and sent pastry flour. It happened to be bread flour that was wanted and when she attempted to make bread, the result was that the grocer lost a customer, who could have been retained by a little special care.

Clerks should also be trained to take the same care in serving customers. The writer knows of a clerk who, by acting before being certain, caused a great deal of unpleasantness between a merchant and his customers. It was during the pickling season last autumn, and the clerk was filling up the spice cans from the surplus stock. He came to one bag of which he was uncertain, but he took chances and as a result, many customers received the wrong kind of spice. It certainly pays to proceed carefully in the grocery business.

FOR THE DELIVERY MAN.

Dr. W. J. Fowler, of the Ontario Veterinary College, gives the following rules for the care of the horse:—

See that your horse has a bed.

Watch your horse's teeth, and if he has any too long saw them off.

Water your horse before feeding him. Water, hay and oats is the order.

Feed a draught horse 15 pounds of hay a day or less. The majority of people feed too much hay.

Don't let your horse have much water when he is overheated.

In grooming, curry him every way.

Scrape off all bot-fly eggs with a knife.

Leave him his forelock, mane and tail, but trim them if necessary.

Dry your horse's feet at night; wash them in the morning.

See that no nails get in his feet.

In harnessing, keep the backband back from the withers.

Shoe your horse regularly, but do not allow the blacksmith to rasp off the outer edge of the hoof, which should act as varnish does on a pine knot.

To prevent the shoulders of a green horse from scalding, raise his collar periodically and thoroughly dry his shoulders.

Value of a Confectionery Department

Reasons Why It Should Be Given Prominence In Every Grocery Store — How Best Results Can Be Secured—Item of Display An Important One—Beware of Loss In Weighing—Be Careful Not To Overstock.

Weighing Must Be Attended To

By Harry McKinlay, Sydney, Nova Scotia.

Confectionery should be carried by every up-to-date grocer for the reason that it can be made a highly profitable branch of the business, and also increases our service to our customers.

No line in the grocery business shows a higher theoretical percentage of profit than confectionery, and by careful handling this profit can be made practical.

Loss in Careless Weighing.

The main cause of loss of profit in the confectionery business is by reason of carelessness in weighing on the part of the dealer or his clerks. Few grocers will be found who in weighing sugar throw in an extra scoopful to please the customer; yet they seem to forget the equal waste that is going on in their confectionery department all the time. Many of those who say that handling confectionery does not pay for the extra work and attention it demands will find on looking into the matter that they have been giving their candy away, not selling it.

Advises Computing Scale.

A computing scale that is made especially for the weighing of small amounts is a necessity to overcome the danger of giving overweight, and grocers will also find it profitable to get clear of the clerk with friends who ask particularly for him when they wish to purchase confectionery.

A silent salesman fitted with trays for the bottom to hold bulk goods, and using the shelves for package goods seems to be the best way to display confectionery to the best advantage. Confectionery lends itself to attractive display and occasional window displays neatly ticketed make a drawing card that no grocer would do well to overlook.

Fresh and Assorted.

The stock must be kept fresh and well assorted, taking care to have certain lines which are almost staple always in stock, and enough of the novelties to make people watch your display to see the latest.

Neatness and cleanliness are of paramount importance in the confectionery display as nothing seems so disgusting to a particular person—and your candy customer usually is particular — than to see the candy that you wish him to buy in dirty untidy piles, and perhaps even so badly looked after that the flies have been allowed to crawl over it.

Let Manufacturer Help.

Handling quality brands that are well known is best for it lightens the work of building a confectionery business to be able to offer your customers goods that they know about already.

To realize the part confectionery plays in the service of a store, it is just necessary to imagine a store that has been handling confectionery in an up-to-date manner and which for some reason has let the stock run completely out. It has come within my experience to work in such a store and there was only one way in which to please the disappointed customers, and that was to supply another stock of confectionery.

Accommodation For the Public

By A. J. Northmore, London, Ont.

A grocer to handle confectionery profitably should obtain a nice show case and place it in one of the most conspicious spots in the store, so that the customer cannot fail to see it on entering.

The case should be kept in such order as to attract the attention of the customer by its cleanliness and neatness. Each morning it should be cleaned and aired, the cakes of the previous day should be set aside and sold at cost price if necessary; if orders are properly regulated there will be very little of this to do.

Appreciate The Accommodation.

It is often a great accommodation to people, once they are acquainted with the fact, that their grocer handles nice fresh confectionery; it will also bring the dealer new trade, and as it falls to the lot of the woman of the house to attend to the table he often has them in his store when otherwise he would not. Every grocer realizes what a great benefit it is to have the customer come to the store, as he can often interest her in other lines and make extra sales. Confectionery frequently brings them.

Above all things orders sent by parents with children should be filled with the greatest care. Do not substitute unless you are sure they will be satisfied with your choice; be sure what you send is always fresh or you are accused immediately of taking advantage of the child, while you are at a loss to account for the reason why you lost a valuable customer.

Brings People Into the Store

By G. J. Jackson, Brandon, Man.

Every grocer should handle confectionery, because it brings people into the store that perhaps never would have entered the place of business if it hadn't been to purchase a few candies.

A good display of confectionery is a salesman in itself. A man or woman will come in for some candies, and in many cases not only buy some other article, but may next time bring along her weekly order if she has been impressed with the store and methods. The ultimate result may be a permanent customer.

There are three important principles in regard to the successful handling of confectionery. The first is the display. Candy can best be displayed in a show case where passersby could see it as well as customers who enter the store. The bottom of the case might be used for the display of fancy boxes. There could be a shelf half way up where trays of candy could be shown with good results.

The second is cleanliness. Cleanliness is one of the most important of the three. The glass should be spotless. The candy should all be kept under cover, where neither fly nor dust can come in contact with it. The grocer who has to shoo the flies away before weighing out candy isn't likely to give his customer a good impression not only of his confectionery department but of his store methods in general.

The third is in regard to stock. A dealer should sell the kind of candy that will appeal to his trade, as well as the passer-by. He should have a good assortment, something that will catch the eye and satisfy the buyer as to quality as well. Do not overstock, and work out the old stock. These are two very important points to remember. Also get your profit on every 5c. worth you sell. Those two or three extra ones so many dealers and clerks are in the habit of throwing in often represent his profit.

Salesmanship Chances in Confectionery

Grocer Can Get the Business Easier than Druggist if He Goes After it—Sugestion to Place Young Woman in Charge of Department—How Department Stores Secure the Trade.

By O. S. Johnston.

A Montreal grocer recently remarked, "I don't think there is much trade to be done in confectionery. The druggist and exclusive confectioner gets the business." This statement is not beyond contradiction and every wideawake dealer will agree that the grocer has quite as good a chance of doing a profitable candy business as either of the above mentioned.

Why does the druggist find it possible to sell a satisfactory amount of sweetmeats? Is it because the public look to him as a logical distributor? Not at all. It is because he realizes that the fittings in this store, etc., which must be spick and span, lend themselves admirably to good displays, and he further realizes that the customer, who generally has to wait for some little time for prescriptions or powders as the case may be, will notice the stock of chocolates and toffee and be impressed with the fact that he carries a good assortment. Such an impression counts for something, and a little tactful selling talk later results in sales.

Grocer Gets First Call.

The same thing applies to the grocery store; but the family grocer has mostly the first call on the consumer, and has, therefore, more frequent opportunities for sending the customer away with a small order of candies. The showcase containing neatly aranged goods naturally is a strong and potent factor in the disposal of goods, and dealers are practically all agreed that while it could be done without, that it nevertheless is a kind of magnet, and that the degree of magnetism depends entirely on original and artistic interior display, plus good position.

The showcase can be made more attractive—that is, the fair sized—by a card neatly printed with some catchy saying relative to sweets, placed directly over the display. This serves to further rivet attention. But the dealer finds his customers walking around frequently examining goods and so forth. Then he has an opportunity for directing their attention to his stock of sweets and without undue pressure he can frequently create a sale. Provided the goods are first class, and such they should always be, he can do further educational work, and thus in various ways build up a profitable business.

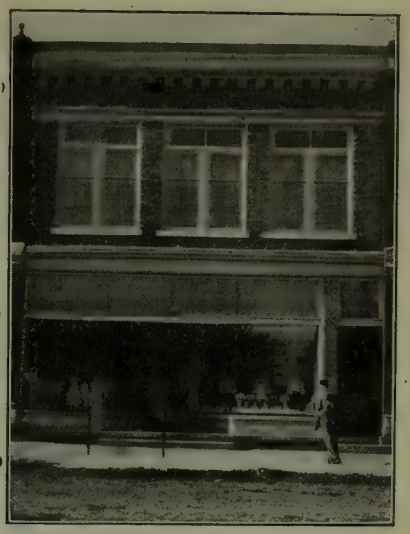
That there should be a show of cleanliness in every corner of the store there can be no reasonable doubt.

The demand for clean foodstuffs is insistent, and the more agreeably the dealer caters to his clientele the better will be the actual business done. "Why shouldn't it pay a grocer to open up a dainty candy department and entrust that portion of the store to a neatly dressed and attractive young girl?" recently remarked the manager of a large Canadian chocolate company. "She need only be paid a small wage and allowed a fair commission on all sales, so that there would be a strong incentive for her to dispose of a large quantity of goods."

Demonstrator Gets Attention.

In these statements there certainly rests a good hint as customers would regard such a move as highly aggressive, a reputation would be created, and the store would be invariably associated with cleanliness and freshness wherever mentioned. It is surprising how many people a neatly attired lady demonstrator attracts to her stand in the large departmental store, and figures indicating sales are always pretty gratifying whenever she is handling a line of approved quality. Why couldn't the same thing be done in the average grocery store, only on a modified scale? Wouldn't it pay a number of grocers with commodious stores to experiment along such lines with confectionery?

"Never venture never win." This is an old saying, but its truth is as apparent to-day as ever, and the dealer who never makes an attempt to boost confectionery sales has no right whatsoever to claim that there is nothing doing in the line as far as the grocery store is concerned. Would the north and south poles have ever been discovered if explorers had not set out in quest? Would aerial navigation be so far advanced as it is to-day if no one had made an attempt to emulate the bird? Not one bit of it. A beginning is essential to accomplishment. Moral: "Don't say you can't sell sweets till you give them a fair trial." Further, don't place them under the counter, and expect them to "move." Rather go in for displays and the combined efforts of yourself and your clerks, if directed in the proper way, will soon convince you that any quality line can be sold, even under adverse circumstances if pure salesmanship is brought into action.



A New Merlin Store

J. A. Halliday, of Merlin, Ont., has recently moved into a new store which is one of the finest in Western Ontario. It is a two-storey building and is fitted throughout with modern bin fixtures and silent salesmen, and is lit with electric light which adds greatly to the attractiveness of the store. The windows are large and roomy with front and side panes and are admirably adapted for window displays. The ground floor of the store is devoted to a complete and well assorted stock of groceries, as well as boots and shoes, to the selection of which Mr. Halliday brings a business experience extending over twenty years. The upper floor is given to chinaware and crockery of which he carries a large and well chosen stock.

A NEW PORT ARTHUR STORE.

The Kyro-Hellberg Co. have opened a large store in Port Arthur, Ont. The lines carried include groceries, provisions, fruit, crockery, dry goods, men's furnishings. The building is 35 feet by 90, and at the rear of the store is a two storey warehouse which, with the basement, is filled with goods. Two delivery rigs are in operation and the area of the district covered is from Current River to West Fort William, a large shipping trade with various lumber, tie and railroad camps being also done.

The store is of British Columbia fir and oak throughout, and is lit with powerful electric lamps.

Arthur Martin looks after the grocery department, and the Easter window is his handiwork and reflected credit upon him. Eggs were arranged in barnyard fashion on the floor, and live white rabbits were running here and there, feeding upon the lettuce placed for them.

FIVE YEAR PRICE COMPARISON

PRICE comparisons from year to year are always interesting. They bring the dealer more in touch with the value of his goods, show him what he had to pay in the past, and as sales have frequently a great deal to do with price, give him an idea of how much he will be able to sell, based on past prices and conditions.

On the opposite page is a chart of price comparisons supplementing our market reports. In it are presented comparisons of prices for the past five years on 28 of the more important articles handled in the grocery store. The prices are taken from our files, and are based on the Toronto market quotations of April 12 in each year.

From a study of these prices, many changes will be noticed from one year to another. For instance, in 1908, apples were plentiful, and not very high in price. The following year there was a scarcity, and prices went up to as high as $6.50 per barrel. In 1900 the crop was again large. Last year, as everyone will remember, there was another scarcity, and prices soared. Last fall's crop was better, and during the past winter apples have been fairly reasonable. According to these observations, next season's apple yield should show a slump.

High prices in provisions and the year 1910 will always be associated with one another. It was the time of the world shortage in hogs. Bacon and lard prices soared to record heights, as the chart indicates.

The high market in cheese, potatoes, sugar, canned tomatoes, beans, butter and eggs, as compared with the corresponding periods of the past four years, is also in evidence. The drought of last summer accounts chiefly for these. Cheese has not been so high in years. The potato crop in Ontario and Quebec last year was much short of a regular yield; so much so has this been the case that Irish potatoes have had to be imported, and New Brunswick stock has sold more extensively in Upper Canada during the winter than for many seasons.

Butter from far off New Zealand has been brought in to help meet the demand. The dry weather last year prevented the usual storage pack, and prices during the winter ascended to heights unknown before.

Sugar, it will be remembered, reached a point in 1910 higher than for 22 years back. It has recently been on the decline, but is still 80 cents above the price in April, 1911.

While rolled oats are high compared with the past three years, yet they are 75 cents below 1908. The only other item below the 1908 April price is Ontario flour.

This Spring Number should be kept on file, if for nothing else than to refer to this price chart, when occasion demands. These quotations are accurate, and can be depended upon. A close study will reveal some interesting features.

Latest Review of the Grocery Markets

Weak Tone of Sugar in Sympathy With Raw Market—Tendency in California Fruits is Easy—Figs and Dates Hold Steady—Beans are Higher—Canned Corn Quoted Lower in Montreal—Warmer Weather Helps Movement of House-cleaning Goods.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Canned Corn—Down.

Baked Beans—$1 per dozen.

Sugar—Weak.

Montreal, April 18.—Local dealers still report business of a satisfactory order, although no important changes have taken place this week. Weather has been favorable. Canned corn and baked beans have declined. Canned corn is now quoted at 95 to 97½—much lower than it has been for some time. Baked beans are now $1 per dozen.

SUGAR.—No particular features have developed in market this week. New York markets are on decline and dealers on this side of border are expecting a similar change to take place.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Weak.

California Fruits—Easier.

Figs and Dates—Steady.

Beans—Higher.

Barley—Pot quoted at $4 cwt.

Toronto, April 18.—Jobbers are looking forward to opening of navigation, which they anticipate will bring greater activity into groceries. Certain sections of retail trade are awaiting traffic on lakes and lower rates which accompany it. It will probably be end of month before season opens this year, being later than usual. For season, trade is regarded as fair, it being felt that trade in country districts has been considerably hampered of late by bad condition of roads.

Sugar exhibits a weak tone in sympathy with raw raw market. Under possibility of lower prices, demand for sugar continues on hand to mouth basis. Refined in Toronto to-day is $5.45 per cwt. compared with $4.70 on April 21 last year.

Warmer weather has brought annual spring housecleaning more into evidence, and this has worked for a little better movement of house-cleaning articles, although most retailers have been prepared for this business for some little time. Dealers who handle seeds are finding greater interest displayed by farmers and sorting orders should soon commence to arrive. Garden seeds have also commenced to move out.

SUGAR.—Same weak situation in sugar as reported last week continues. Raws have continued easy and New York refined has declined. Conditions affecting this market are not quite similar to New York but there is nevertheless a weak feeling and dealers would not be surprised if it developed into a decline. The same factors which have been depressing market for some time are still at work. Reports coming from Cuba indicate that estimated yield of 1,800,000 tons is quite probable.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.—Corn syrups are steady to firm at last week's advance of 15 cents per case. Rapid upward strides that corn has been making has put all corn products in strong position. Chicago market for corn eased somewhat at beginning of week because of shutting down of such industries as starch, glucose and syrup works that refused to purchase raw material at high price.

Corn syrups are still meeting with good demand, while maple product is now coming in for its full share of attentions. Amount of new make varies at different centres, as does also prices which depend on supply and demand. Even compound syrups are moving well. This is syrup time and wise dealers are seizing opportunity to push syrup.

DRIED FRUITS.—Prune prices continue to vary somewhat but general easiness still continues. As pointed out before it is difficult to get exact line on prices. One firm will have an over supply of one size and its price on that line will be lower than jobber who is not so well supplied. It is difficult to say just what sizes are most plentiful locally but jobbers were pretty heavy purchasers of larger sizes last fall, and they are said to be most plentiful. At the coast, prices continue to be materially cut, principally due to effort of holders to clean up.

In fact tendency in all California fruits is easier, including peaches and seeded raisins. Values on latter line have been shaded slightly on this market.

Dates and figs appear to be cleaned up to fairly close margin and tendency is accordingly one of steadiness. Half boxes of Hallowee dates have been practically cleaned up for some time, while full boxes are getting into smaller compass and are steadier. Same is true of figs.

TEA.—Here, at London auctions, as well as at primary points, tea values continue steady to firm. In the statistics of exports of tea from Southern India for last three years, it is interesting to note that there has been quite an increase in amount taken by North America. The exports to America in 1911 amounted to 5,551,740 pounds as compared with 4,368,304 in 1910 and 3,154,125 in 1909.

COFFEE.—Those dealers operating under stinted profits who have been watching the coffee horizon in hopes of some weakening in prices have failed to find the least trace of any marked easiness. A bull factor at the present time is that the Brazil crops of 1912-13 continue to indicate a light yield. The future is reflected in a New York report which says "while authorities may differ as to the cause and remedy, there is no gainsaying the fact that still higher prices must rule for coffees in the near future. It is being freely predicted in this market that Santos 4s. which to-day are selling at 20 cents will shortly be selling to the retailer at 24 cents."

Although there is no change in local quotations, situation still continues steady.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.—Rice trade is on fair scale, while same is true of tapioca, this being good season for sale of these lines. Rangoon holds fairly steady tone, while fancy varieties are well maintained.

International Agriculture Institute gives area in India under rice in provinces reported, which generally contain some 78 per cent. of total area under rice in British India as showing a decrease of 2.7 per cent. Estimated outturn from this area shows decrease of 6.4 per cent. These figures refer to Indian agriculture year 1911-12, but greater part of crop was harvested before expiration of calendar year 1911.

NUTS.—There is little in situation in nuts calling for attention. Nuts in shell are moving slowly. Advent of push-cart on the street will swell consumption of peanuts. There have been further arrivals of Brazils which are lower for May delivery.

BEANS.—Strength of beans has been pointed out before. Market is higher and still quite strong. Some dealers' ideas are even above present quotations. One dealer quoted $2.75 for prime and $3 for handpicked. Demand is reported good.

A report from a bean dealer at Chatham, Ont., says, "It is thought that balance of crop in growers' hands does not exceed 10 per cent. Demand is good from all directions and is taken as an indication that stocks are light at distributing centres. As new crop is not available until next October, it seems future will show a strong and higher market."

EVAPORATED APPLES.—Evaps. are moving slowly and exhibit just slightly easier tone, although quotations are unchanged. Stocks, however, are reported as not heavy for season.

BARLEY.—Prices on barley continue firm and higher. Pot is quoted at $4 per cwt. Pearl is generally $1 per cwt. higher, but being even scarcer than pot, there is little larger premium than usual on it.

CANNED GOODS.

Toronto.—In vegetables, beans are probably in shortest supply. Some houses are worse off than others in this respect. Tomatoes have been moving well considering high figure that is asked.

Peas and corn are probably most plentiful lines, that is compared with volume of demand. High price of peas has curtailed sales considerably this year and some houses are said to have just a little larger stock than they consider safe. Corn is quoted lower in Montreal, at least by some houses, but no change is announced by any Toronto houses in this line.

Soaked peas are quoted around $1 per dozen.

Canned pumpkin and apples are moving well just now as material for pies. Strawberries, raspberries and blueberries continue firm and scarce.

POINTERS—

Prunes—Lower.

Coffee—Steady.

Winnipeg, April 17.—Trade prospects generally are first rate. The weather on whole has been favorable, and operations on the land and on building in towns have had little to delay them since opening of spring.

California prunes are down 1½ cents, and may go lower, notwithstanding reported shortness of stocks.

Collections show some improvement but are still not considered as up to average of previous years.

Idle men in west are rare; every man able to work now drawing wages. With capital and immigration pouring into the country its future is assured.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, April 17.—Business with local grocers has fast asumed the proportions annually anticipated in the way of spring trade and from present indications next few months should see a decidedly brisk period and increased trade with practically every dealer. Despite this fact, there have been no changes in price lists, although the present week may see some alterations in the quoting on many lines because of reported weak markets in some commodities. During last two or three weeks flour market has remained steady and the little fluctuation which took place in Chicago wheat market had no effect on price of flour. The high price which has ruled for last month and a half on mill feed is easily maintained at present, and local dealers declare that it is quite difficult to procure sufficient feed to fill orders, so general is the scarsity.

FRUIT AUCTION CO. FORMED.

The Toronto Fruit Auction Co., Ltd., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $40,000. This is a combination of twelve of Toronto's wholesale fruit and produce houses to market goods by auction. Previously White & Co., Ltd., and McWilliam & Everist conducted separate auctions, but these two firms have merged their auction interests with the new concern.

The officers of the new company are:

President—H. W. Thorpe.

Vive-president—H. Peters.

2nd Vice-president—W. H. Despard.

Directors—Chas. Simpson and A. McBride.

The fruit firms composing the new concern and who have taken stock in it are:—

White & Co., McWilliam & Everist, H. Peters, Clemes Bros., H. J. Ash, Chas. Simpson, McBride Bros., Stronach & Sons, Chas. Kimpton, D. Spence, Jos. Bamford and Dawson Elliott Co.

TO WRITE GUILD PRESIDENT.

In Matter of Wholesalers Selling Direct —Regular Meeting of Toronto R. G. A.

The monthly meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association on Monday night was marked by a large attendance.

Neil Carmichael reported on communications which have been carried on with the Medical Health Officer relative to displaying of goods outside. It was decided advisable to carry the matter still farther, and it will be pointed out to Dr. Hastings that push-cart peddlers in summer frequently carry berries and that these should be covered.

Wm. Miller gave an account of what the Legislative Committee have done regarding peddler nuisance. They are to meet the Legislative Committee of city council in the near future regarding this matter.

Mr. Miller also reported what had been done re Provincial Grocers' Association. A vote of endorsation of the proceedings was passed.

D. W. Clark, president of the newly formed Provincial Association, referred to the honor that had been conferred on the Toronto association by having three of its members elected as officers.

"I am prepared to do my best to further the retail grocery trade of the province," stated Mr. Clark. "We feel that under the new Provincial organization a great deal can be accomplished. Since our organization meeting we have received numerous letters from the trade throughout the province endorsing our work. This year will be taken up mainly in organization. In near future there will be a meeting of the executive, when the policy of the association will be outlined. We feel that properly organized we can do much to further our own interests."

The question of wholesalers selling to consumers was again taken up and instances given where this is being done.

A motion was passed that the executive, on obtaining reliable information regarding wholesalers selling direct, write the President of the Wholesale Grocers' Guild asking him to bring the matter before the Guild, and get their support in having retailers' rights observed.

An old suggestion, that association establish an employment bureau for clerks, was revived by S. W. Hall. The committee previously appointed for the purpose will take the matter up.

If the time taken up in discussing it, is a gauge of the success of annual excursion this year, it should be a record one. It will probably be held to Grimsby Beach on July 24. W. C. Miller, D. Bell and N. Carmichael were appointed to complete negotiations.

The new members proposed were:—Geo. Arnold, King St. E.; E. W. Pearen, King St. E.; Stennet Bros., Queen E.; W. Black, Queen E.; J. E. Cardy, Broadview; J. Muir, Danforth and Logan; J. A. Powell, Danforth Road; D. S. Waldron, Pape Ave.; J. S. Scott, Pape Ave.; N. Mitchell, Pape Ave.; E. L. Chapman, Pape Ave.; Forster & Swift, Pape Ave.; D. Cameron, Main St.; W. Blaylock, Danforth Road; Paterson Bros., Danforth; A. Pickles, Woodbine Ave.; J. S. Eakin, Woodbine Ave.; J. C. Doyle, Avenue Road; W. A. Halton, Earlscourt; W. C. Cork, Bathurst St.

FROM FRONT OR REAR DOOR.

Difference of opinion exist among merchants as to whether it is best to load up the delivery wagon in front of the store or at the rear. While groceries may be loaded at the back without causing so much dirt in the store, still there is another side to the question. Undoubtedly, the loading up of a big lot of groceries at the front, creates a good impression on customers, as they take particular notice of a store when it presents a busy appearance.

"It is up to the merchant," says a Regina, Sask. dealer, "to decide for himself between the two ways. If he considers that the dirt caused by using the front is more inconvenience than would make up for the impression on the customers, he will use the rear; and if he considers that the good impression is better, he will use the front."

Manitoba Flour Up 10 Cents per Barrel

Following Stronger Tone Noted Last Week —Winter Wheat Flour Also Quoted Higher by Ontario Millers—Crop Scare News Causes Big Fluctuation in United States Wheat Prices—Cornmeal is Firmer and Higher—Exporters Report Scarcity of Ocean Space.

Stronger front to Manitoba flour market reported last week developed into an advance of 10 cents per barrel this week. Change was announced by some firms on Monday, while others followed as week advanced. Week has been marked by big bulge in wheat values across the border and this and rather substantial gains in good milling wheat in Canada of late, has worked for upward movement in price. Even at advance, a fairly firm tone is reported in market.

Winter wheat flours are also on the upward trend, offerings being small. Some Ontario millers have advanced prices on blended flour 25 cents per barrel in sympathy with higher values on Ontario wheat which continues in scanty supply.

Cornmeal is firm and higher again, following movement of raw material which holds strong position both here and across line. Rolled oats are steady at last week's advance, a fair trade for season being in evidence.

Crop damage reports are once more being trotted out into the wheat arena by bull factors and during past week have been responsible for no little fluctuation in wheat values. A wild buying rush on Saturday last in Chicago wheat pit sent prices up 4½ cents. Remarkable advance was due to increased alarm about crop damage, a flood of adverse reports sweeping in from various sections of the country. There was another wild orgy in Chicago wheat pit on Monday, violent fluctuations in prices following further crop scare news.

Canadian wheat prices at various centres have felt the effect of the bulge across the border, although Winnipeg market has continued rather conservative in its movement. While United States' wheat supply showed a decrease of 1,807,000 bushels last week, Canadian visible increased 428,000 bushels.

Grain and flour exporters are experiencing some difficulty in obtaining steamship accommodation. Under clamorous demand for ocean space, rates have been moving upward.

As compared with nine cents, the highest price asked at the opening of navigation in Montreal last year, Atlantic steamship companies are now charging an average of seventeen cents per hundred pounds of flour and eighteen cents per hundred-weight of wheat for the opening of navigation this year. The first boat of the season is expected to leave Montreal during the firse week in May.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—Flour has been unusually active this week. Demand both locally and out of town increased considerably and this, combined with scarcity of raw material and poor shipments, caused prices on Manitobas to advance 10 cents per barrel.

CEREALS.—There has been an active demand for all cereals. Stocks are limited and raw material is offering more difficulty to millers in supplying demand. If this continues it can be expected to result in an advance before long. For the week bolted cornmeal is quoted 10 cents higher.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—Strong feeling noted in Manitoba flour last week has developed into an advance of 10 cents per barrel, bringing first patents in car lots up to $5.70 per barrel. Premium on good milling wheat has been on increase of late and even at advance there is a fairly firm tone reported to flour market.

Ontario wheat has been marching upward in sympathy with general trend of prices, and has now reached the high water mark, 98 cents to $1. being quoted. In sympathy with higher raw material, several Ontario millers have advanced winter wheat blends 25 cents per barrel. By reason of different percentages of wheat used by millers it is somewhat difficult to get an exact line on prices, but range appears to be $4.75 to $5.25 per barrel. One firm quotes 90 per cent. winter patents at $5.05 per barrel in sacks.

Selling Flour for Bread-Making Purposes

How the Grocer Can Get Some of the Trade Now Going to the Baker—Is Bread-Making Becoming Lost Art? — Case Where Manitoba Dealer Sold Car Load of Best Flour at Good Profit While Competitor Was Losing Money on Poorer Grade at Cut Price.

IS bread-making becoming a lost art to the housewife of to-day? Is the baker gradually winning supremacy along this line of endeavor?

These are questions which the grocer would do well to consider, because if the baker is selling his customers their bread, the grocer is certainly not selling them flour for bread making.

While the baker is far from being supreme in some towns and localities, there is no denying the fact that he has gradually been attaining this end in many sections. City, town and village housewives who not many years ago would have scorned the idea of not making their own bread are now regular customers of the baker. To-day we even find many farmers buying their bread, an almost unheard of thing but a few years ago. How far is this dependence upon the baker and loss of trade in flour by the grocer going to drift?

In seeking a remedy, we are told that it is well for us first to ascertain the cause. In this case we will not do so. Far be it from anyone to suggest that the housewife of to-day is any less industrious than when our mothers and grandmothers held sway in the kitchen. To suggest such a thing to our woman customers instead of having the desired effect, is likely to, in the language of the street, "getting us in wrong."

That Home Made Bread.

The love of the home made bread still lingers. This gives us reason to believe that there is still hope to swing a multitude of Canadian housewives back into the old habit of bread making. To help along this love of the home made bread, the grocer has some strong arguments to give customers why it is in their interests to bake their own bread. Appeal to both their pride and judgment. Point out that not only can they make better bread but they can save money. Most women are economically inclined, and if you can show them explicitly where they may save money on their household expenses, you certainly have them interested. This is the work of the retail grocer, and there is a good harvest to be reaped in most every locality by the dealer who follows this line of endeavor.

Combine the Selling Forces.

When customers are purchasing their usual groceries is the time that the subject can be introduced to them. Dwell upon its economical side. The same thing done in your advertising in the local poper should also be productive of good results.

Good bread cannot be made of poor flour, and unless the bread is good the housewife will soon abandon her bread making. This is the first rule to be learned by the grocer who hopes to revive bread making among his customers. He must stock good flour. Neither can he hope to retain the trade of the regular baker unless the flour he handles is of good quality.

Manitoba Dealer's Experience.

Price is not of a great deal of consequence to the purchasers of flour. They want good flour and are generally willing to pay the price. This is illustrated by an incident reported to the writer by a dealer in a Manitoba town.

"My competitor," he said, "not long ago began to advertise the flour of a certain milling company at $2.85 per cwt. I was selling the best flour of that firm at $3.15. I began to inquire into the situation and found that it was the second grade he was selling, that he had purchased a car load and was going to make a spread with it.

"When I discovered what he was doing I at once ordered a car from the same company, but I ordered their best grade, getting ten bags of the lower grade that my competitor was selling. I advertised it at $2.75—that is the lower grade, for I still continued to sell the best grade at $3.15.

Further Cut in Price.

"Soon he had cut the price to $2.65 which was just about the cost to him. At the end of two weeks he had sold about half his car at just about cost, while I had sold the whole of my car of the better article.

"When a customer came in I told her I had the second grade article at the low price but always recommended her to take the best. She generally did, at $3.15 too, and by the time I had sold out my whole car I still had five bags of the ten lower grade left."

This merchant showed himself a salesman and capable of recognizing the best course to take in a situation like this. It also shows that people want good flour. Another merchant would probably have gotten in a car of the low grade flour and began a price cutting war that would have lost both money and customers to him.

Methods of Extending Sales.

The three main methods which the grocer has at hand for promoting the sale of flour are window display, advertising and personal salesmanship. They all have their valuable features, and wherever possible should be combined, if the best results are to be obtained.

The window catches the eye of the passing customer, and if the display is strong enough, interest enough may be aroused to bring inquiry. When an inquiry is made, the salesman has his opportunity to present his proper arguments and create sales.

Reach Them in the Home.

Not all customers visit your store, nor yet pass it. How are they to be interested? This is where your advertising comes in and good strong copy in the local paper should be of valuable assistance in building up interest in the line.

LONDON RETAILERS MEET.

Reports on Hamilton Meeting—Complaints Against the Selling Direct Habit.

The Retail Grocers' Association, of London, Ont., held their regular meeting last Tuesday evening, and it was a busy session. President John Diprose, Treasurer Thos. Shaw and E. J. Ryan gave reports of the Hamilton meeting re Ontario Retail Grocers' Association, and an interesting discussion took place on same, Ex-President Norman McLeod, Vice-President J. A. McFarlane and Jas. Fountaine and others taking part in it. It was decided to go ahead and raise the necessary funds for the Ontario Association and to strengthen their hands in every way possible.

Complaints were laid against a local manufacturer also a local wholesale house for selling to boarding houses and restaurants. It was decided to take every possible means to stop this practice; also that the secretary write the firms complained of, and that the secretary of the local Wholesale Grocers' Guild be asked to bring the matter up at the next meeting.

A committee was named to wait on No. 3 Committee of the City Council with regard to pedlars' licenses, that said pedlars be obliged to wear badges so that the public could tell at a glance whether they were licensed or not. As it is at present one cannot tell. The police claim they have not time to look after these men.

Dealer Changes Demand for Pastry Flour

Opposition Store Cut Prices of Line He Had Been Selling—Got No Redress From Manufacturer and So Changed Brand Himself—Will Not Be Forced to Stock Any Line But is Willing to Consider Any Apparent Good Proposition.

The retailer's power to change demand for one article to a more profitable, similar brand is well exemplified by the experience of a dealer in a large Canadian city in connection with his flour department.

Formerly he used to sell a certain pastry flour which all his customers had been trained to ask for. He had worked up a good business in it and felt he could not get along very well without it.

Price Cutting Begins.

He was quite satisfied until a price-cutting opponent established himself across the way, stocked the same brand of flour, and cut the price from 13 cents to 10 cents on the smallest size, and a similar degree on the larger packages. At 13 cents there had been a fair profit; at 10 cents there was a bare margin. His profit in handling flour threatened to be wiped out altogether after cost of doing business was taken into consideration.

The next time a representative of the firm who sold the flour called for his usual order, he told him the circumstances, and asked if he could not have this price cutting stopped, or refuse to sell the man who was destroying the trade it had taken years to build up.

No Redress Coming.

The answer the dealer received was "So-and-so buys his flour and pays cash for it the same as you do. He has got the right to sell it at any price he likes."

The grocer in question refused the traveler another order for that flour. He thought over the situation and decided on a course of action. What he did was this. He stocked another brand for which he paid from 10 cents to 20 cents a hundred more, but which he sold at the same price as he had formerly been charging for the original flour.

Customers, of course, came again as customers will—if they don't owe much—and asked for the flour with which the grocer had built up his trade. But instead of complying with their requests he introduced his new brand. "Here is ——," he would say, "it is recognized as one of the leading pastry flours on the market. I can recommend it and if you don't find it better, I'll charge you nothing for it."

Took the Grocer's Advice.

His customers accepted the flour, not one of them brought it back, and now they all ask for it whenever pastry flour is needed.

This dealer is selling practically nothing else but the new flour for which he created his own demand. He stocks only a small lot of the former brand because it is put up in a size that the other firm does not supply.

Take What He Recommends.

Discussing with this merchant the the question of customers insisting on brands of goods which have been generally advertised in the newspapers, he stated that some few of his customers demanded certain lines, and would not take anything else, and some occasionally asked for new articles which were being placed on the market, through general advertising. Possibly twenty per cent. of his customers specified the particular brand of thing which they wanted. The other eighty per cent. took what he recommended. His best accounts, that is his order accounts, almost invariably accept what he recommends, and of course he does not recommend what he cannot stand behind, because these are his most valuable accounts.

Will Not Be Forced.

He was always open to be convinced by traveling salesmen that it would be profitable and good business for him to handle their lines. Many travelers, he said, urged him to purchase lines because of the general advertising the firm was putting behind them. These propositions are always considered fully and usually favorably, but when a salesman insists that he has to stock a certain line, that the firm's advertising campaign to the public compels him to do so, sometimes adding "or go out of business," it immediately arouses his anger and his independence is displayed in no uncertain tones.

"I am always ready to be legitimately induced to handle a certain line, but no one is going to force me," he added.

GAS STRENGTH OF BAKING POWDER.

Fixed at Ten Per Cent.—Extract Standards to Be Discussed.

A committee of the Grocers' Section of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association were in Ottawa last Friday interviewing A. McGill, chief government analyst, on the question of baking powder standards. Those present were Messrs. Jas. Litster (chairman), of Toronto; Gorman, London; McLaren, Hamilton; Ewing and Leblanc, Montreal; Neighorn, Toronto and Cochrane, of Ottawa. The standard gas strength of baking powder was the chief question discussed and this was placed at 10 per cent. This standard will come into effect on July 1. This is higher than the standard previously considered. The question of baking powder ingredients was left in abeyance.

Mr. Litster has arranged another meeting with Mr. McGill for Wednesday, April 24, in Toronto, at which time the chief analyst will be there on other business. Extract standards will then be up for consideration.

OUR NEWFOUNDLAND LETTER.

Eggs Scarce During Winter But Prices Have Dropped—The Fishing Situation.

St. John's, Nfld., April 15—(Special).—With the advent of spring, better weather, the disappearance of snow, business is beginning to stir, and the trade generally feel the difference in their sales.

There has been a scarcity of eggs all winter, owing to the severe conditions, and the means of communication from the outports being shut off. They are coming along plentifully just now, and the price from 42c per doz. wholesale, has dropped to 28c per dozen, and will in all probability be 25c in a few days' time. There are no imported eggs in the market, and none coming, as the demand can now be satisfied locally.

Rabbits have been a scarce commodity this winter, and if they could have been forwarded when caught would have secured good prices. Some shipped in January arrived late in March, and were readily sold at 30c per pair. Now a second lot has come in a day or two ago and every grocer is over-stocked. Being so long killed and weather getting mild, prices will be slaughtered sooner than there be a total loss.

Many cases have been tinned this winter, and the demand is good, and price $7.25 per case of 4 dozen.

Reports from the West say that the codfishers on the south-west coast have done well. Bait is scarce, but most of them have small supplies of fish and herring.

Prices of fish and produce remained unchanged, and will be so until the new fish begins to come to market. Prices of provisions have not changed much since last report.

Small Supplies Hamper Fresh Fish Trade

Usual At This Time For Demand to Turn to Fresh Varieties, But Prevented at Present By Small Supplies—Heavy Ice On Lakes Delays Fishing—Some Lake Fish Are Offering—Receipts of Halibut On Increase.

The usual course for fish trade to take at this season is to gradually turn to fresh varieties. This is the case to some extent this year, but this natural trend is being somewhat prevented, at least at some centres, by reason of smallness of supplies.

Coast points have little to offer at present in way of fresh fish. Cod and haddock are available, but with addition of fresh halibut, that is about all offering. In lake fish, the heavy ice which formed during winter is taking some time to disappear, and fishing being hampered, supplies are smaller than usual.

Herrings from the large lakes have made their appearance, while pike and suckers are also on the market. An increase in number of varieties, as well as in quantity, can be expected with warmer weather and clearing of ice off inland bodies.

Supplies of fresh halibut are on increase, and tendency of prices is accordingly a little easier.

Nova Scotia still reports an excellent trade in smoked fish, demand for finnan haddie and kippers appearing to measure up well with all that dealers can prepare.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL. — A strong feeling features fish market this week. On strength of large shipments prices for some varieties dropped, while others tend to follow. A good supply of halibut arrived Tuesday, causing a decrease of 3 cents. Steak cod is offering a local shortage resulting in an advance. Pike, whitefish and shredded cod have declined this week.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO. — Although demand for fish is turning more to fresh varieties, there is still some little business being done in frozen and smoked kinds. Trade in fresh fish is hampered for the reason that supplies are small. There is not a great variety to be had from coast points, while tardiness with which heavy coating of ice is disappearing from the lakes is holding back fishing on inland waters. Lake Ontario and Lake Erie has given herrings to local supplies, while pike at 8 to 9 cents, and suckers at 5 cents, are recent additions to list of fresh fish.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN—James A. Belyea, secretary of the Charlotte County Weir Owners' and Fishermen's Association, has returned from St. George, where he was in attendance at a meeting of that body. The attendance, he said, was large, and much business was done. The price of fish was placed the same as last year, that is up to August 1st, $12, and after that to the end of the season, $6. These prices have been in force for the last two years.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—Fresh fish was in good supply on local market during past week. Weather conditions have improved along coast, and as a result fishermen are now able to get to the Banks. Quality of the cod and haddock marketed was excellent. Receipts of halibut were only fair, and the majority of fish were small. Lobsters are in better supply, and some larger fish were marketed during week. Demand was light, owing to high prices.

Selling Fresh Fish the Whole Year Round

Methods of One Firm Which Specializes in Fish and Fruit—Displays Made With Ice on Platters—Borders of Greens Add to Appearance—Automobile Delivery Prevents Complaints from Customers.

Some grocers attempt to sell fish only during the winter and some during only a portion of it. As soon as the first warm days come in Spring, and the snow begins to disappear from the hillside, they relinquish their selling efforts.

This is most certainly a mistake. By devoting proper time and attention to this department a good fish trade may be done during the whole spring and summer.

Fish are now regarded as a staple article of food and people are ready and willing to purchase them all the year round if they can be had and in proper condition. Is there any reason that can be put forward why people should not eat just as much fish during the summer as winter? The truth of the matter is they should eat more because fish are much more a hot weather food than many lines or fresh meat. This, and the fact that fish are comparatively cheap and therefore find easy sale, should convince the grocer that there is no reason why he should not maintain a good fish trade during spring and summer.

A Firm That Sells Year Round.

Gallagher & Co., retail fish and fruit dealers at 107 King Street East, Toronto, is one firm which maintains a good business in fish the whole year round. Here, efforts are not lessened with the approach of spring, for this firm recognizes the possibilities at hand during spring and summer.

This firm, established for 30 years, is under the management of Miss Gallagher and does a big business. The day previous to Good Friday three tons of fish were sent out. Only fresh fish are handled, even during the winter frozen lines not being touched. Of course at certain seasons of the year smoked varieties are sold. They aim to get goods to customers in best condition possible. The rapidity with which they move from water to consumer has much to do with the big trade, for they are always in a perfectly fresh condition when they reach the customer.

The Best Sellers.

Necessarily some extra care and attention is needed to be given to fish during spring and summer. Doing a big business they carry a wide variety at all times, but if anything trout and whitefish are the favorites during summer. Halibut is also a big seller. Lobsters are handled all the year.

When shipments are received they are placed in the refrigerators and from these refrigerators all stock to be sent out to customers is taken.

How Displays Are Made.

Fish are displayed in the windows during the whole summer. Of course during warmest weather only a small showing of special lines is made. Fish are displayed on porcelain platters and by use of ice in the window, the floor of which is of granite, they are kept at a low temperature and always look attractive. In order to improve the appearance of lines on display, they are set off with greens. Dealers who have never tried this should do so. The trimming of the platter display with lettuce or other greens adds materially to general appearance.

Goods are carefully wrapped so as to carry in good shape to customers and during the summer months a piece of ice is enclosed in each parcel to keep the contents cool.

Use Auto Delivery.

The quickness with which goods are transported from store to customers is no doubt something that attracts trade as it carries out the idea of getting goods out in first class shape.

This firm employs automobile delivery, having three cars now engaged in the work and express great satisfaction at this method. They purchased their first car three years ago, and were so pleased with results that two more have since been purchased.

Not only do they say the cost of automobile delivery is reasonable and a big saving over the horse and wagon method, but the promptness with which goods may be delivered and satisfaction which it affords customers, are strong points in its favor, especially is this true with fish and fruits, which should be delivered rapidly in warm weather.

No doubt this method has considerable advertising value, "but," they say, "it is an advertisement in the fact that it gives prompt delivery. That is as good an advertisement as any store can wish for."

An Encouraging Sign.

The success which this store has met with in maintaining fish business during the summer should be encouraging to other grocers. It shows them just what is possible. The fact that from now on not so many dealers are handling fish, thus affording more scope to those who do, should be encouraging as well.

Using Fish for Breakfast.

A fish dealer recently pointed to the increase in the use of fish as an article of diet at the breakfast table. "Not so long ago," he said, "I sold fish only for the mid-day meal, lately a great deal of my orders are for supplies for breakfast and the quantity is steadily increasing."

This is another pointer which may be made use of by the dealer—the idea of suggesting fish to customers for the first meal of the day.

CATALOGUES AND BOOKLETS.

The McCray Refrigerator Company, Kendallville, Ind., U.S.A., have just isuued an attractive catalogue of refrigerators for groceries. Besides explaining the principles of refrigeration, the catalogue contains views and descriptions of the different varieties of refrigerators, coolers and refrigerator display cases suitable for grocers' use. It also contains views of modern stores, showing how McCray refrigerators look when in use. The catalogue, which is a 50 page one, is an attractive production.

Chr. Bjelland & Co., Havanger, Norway, has issued a pamphlet dealing with the history of this firm since its inception. The cover design is attractive and appropriate. The illustration is entitled "The Silver Harvest of the Sea," representing a mermaid in the midst of the blue waters of the ocean and scattering small silver fish from her hands as she ascends to the surface. The interior illustrations consist of bright half-tone cuts of the members of the firm, their various plants, wharves, etc., and Norwegian fishing scenes. This firm has also sent out two unique postal cards, one which opens out showing the same pictures and scenes as contained in the booklet, and the other a reproduction of their Pilot Brand keppered herrings, which also opens out.

The total value of trade of the British West Indies, including British Guiana, as shown in the statistics for 1910-11 was £20,886,816, imports being £10,577,952 and exports £10,308,364.

The imports from Canada during that time amounted to £764,296, the exports to Canada during same period being £1,911,552 pounds.

The Medicinal Qualities of Vegetables

Information That Should Be Passed on to All Customers—Not Enough Vegetables and Fruits Eaten—Would be Better for Health if More Were Consumed—Show Cards and Advertising Effective.

The spring and summer seasons bring with them the larger use of vegetables in the household. While naturally people turn to these goods at this time, yet the dealer has the means within his power to greatly increase their sales.

Every grocer knows of the medicinal qualities of vegetables and fruits. It is a well know fact that if people ate more of them there would be much less opportunities for the drug stores and the medical profession making money.

Work for the Retailer.

Why cannot the retail grocer expound the curative values of the various fruits and vegetables he sells to splendid advantage? For instance, a show card on a display of grapefruit reading, "One of the best of tonics," or on a pile of oranges, "A preventive for rheumatism," should certainly sell considerable of these fruits.

There are scores of other lines that can be similarly treated. Probably good methods of emphasizing the medicinal qualities of these goods would be to use the space in the newspaper or send out a circular with a list of values of each line.

Some Valuable Information.

The following list of vegetables and fruits with their medicinal qualities has been compiled from observations made by medical men and could well be made use of:

Watercress is an excellent blood purifier.

Lettuce has a soothing effect on the nerves and is excellent for sufferers from insomnia.

Tomatoes are good for a torpid liver, but should be avoided by gouty people.

Spinach has great aperient qualities and is far better than medicine for sufferers from constipation. It is also excellent for kidney troubles.

Beet root is fattening and good for people who want to put on flesh. So are potatoes.

Parsnips possess the same virtues as sarsaparilla.

Apples, carrots and Brazil nuts are excellent for sufferers from constipation.

Apples and carrots also have a beneficial effect on gouty persons.

Raw carrots are good for indigestion. When cooked they help asthma.

Celery contains sulphur and helps to ward off rheumatism. It is also a nerve tonic.

Dates are exceedingly nourishing and also prevent constipation.

The juice of grapes is laxative but the skin and seeds are likely to cause constipation.

Bananas are beneficial to sufferers from chest complaints.

Onions furnish the most substantial cure for nervous prostration and all other nerve disorders; they have a soothing effect on consumptives and are excellent for colds, coughs and scurvy. They have been known to cure la grippe and pneumonia. Onions also are preventives of insomnia.

Cranberries serve as aids for malaria erysipelas.

Parsley is an excellent aid to digestion; when eaten with a hearty meal it will prevent dyspepsia.

Strawberries and onions produce a creamy whiteness to the complexion.

Benefits Not Known.

While the above results may not be found by everybody, yet it is an established fact that vegetables and fruits are beneficial to the system. People do not consume enough of them and the reason is they do not appreciate their value. If every customer could be impressed with the above characteristic undoubtedly much good would result, not only in the health of the people, but in the cash register of the grocer.

The obvious thing to do is to get this information to the customer. See that everybody is supplied with it, and there should be a rush on vegetables only equalled by that on a new patent medicine advertised as a panacea.

The Joke Column

And what does lovely woman do this lovely springtime season?
Ah, well, you well may ask us that, indeed, you have a reason.
She's got a towel round her head, a mop within her hand.
And she, we hear, is cleaning house to simply beat the band.

A very fat man who had just retired from the grocery trade was one day met on the street by a friend. The friend, wishing to chaff him, said:

"You are failing since you retired from business. You are so thin I hardly knew you."

"Probably I am," replied the ex-grocer. "I certainly don't weigh so much as I did when I was in the grocery business."

In a country store a young boy was under discussion by the cracker-barrel committee. Jones had just remarked, "That boy's a regular fool. He don't know nothing; he don't know enough to come in when it rains." Then he discovered the boy's father, who had overheard the remark, and wishing to appease him, he said, "Wall, Sam, 't ain't your fault. You learned him all you knew."

The problem of getting hens to lay twice a day has been solved, according to report, by Michael Seibert, village cobbler, of Glenoden, Pa., U.S.A., and his secret lies in the application of an alarm clock to the daily life of his feathered charges. For instance, a hen that lays an egg at 9 o'clock one morning, lays a second at 8 o'clock that evening.

Seibert's scheme succeeds in dissipating the impression of the hens that a day consists of twenty-four hours for them, just as it does for human-kind.

By setting the alarm to certain hours he has established twelve-hour habits in his flock and the unique idea, says a report, works like a charm and with exceeding profit.

A green-looking youth stepped into a village grocery where they keep something to drink as well as to eat, and after peering about a little, spied some ginger cakes. Said he to the grocer:

"Them's mighty fine cakes. What's the least you'll take for one of 'em?"

"Ten cents," replied the grocer.

"Well, I believe I'll take one, if you'll wrap it up right good."

The grocer wrapped up the cake and handed it to him. He looked thoughtfully at it awhile and said:

"I don't believe I want this cake after all. Won't you swap me a drink for it?"

"Yes," said the grocer, as he took back the cake and handed him a glass of something.

The young man swallowed the liquor and started off.

"Hold on!" cried the grocer, "you haven't paid me for my drink."

"I swapped you the cake for the drink."

" But you haven't paid me for the cake."

"You've got your cake."

This last retort so nonplussed the grocer that he stood and scratched his puzzled head, while the young man made good his retreat.

Better Weather Helps the Fruit Trade

Fruit Men are Hoping Spring Weather Will Settle Down in Earnest—Pineapple Season Opens—Orange Trade Now all in Navels—Importers Now Look for High Summer Lemon Market —Florida Celery Selling Well.

Fruit men's feelings are fluctuating these days like the spring thermometer. One day they begin to wear a happy smile by reason of better prospects on account of warmer weather, only to have their hopes rudely shattered the next by another dip back into semi-winter temperature. This week has been marked by more favorable climatic conditions which fruit men are hoping will continue. It has given added impetus to trade and spring weather only needs to settle down in earnest for fruit market to take on marked activity.

Pineapples are opening up and receiving more attention. The season has started off about two weeks earlier than usual this year. Most of supplies are coming from Havana with a certain quantity from Porto Rico, but latter crop is shorter than last year. Pineapple season will continue up to about middle of June.

Trade in oranges on Canadian markets is practically all in California navels. Florida stock have got too high for sale here, this fruit going mostly to big auction markets in United States. There may still be an odd car come along to some Canadian markets.

Lemon market remains steady but importers say that prospects are for a high summer market in this line as it now looks like a short yield of new crop. New crop Verdelli will commence to come along in June.

Egyptian onions are arriving in good shape, market holding about same. It looks as if prices might be somewhat easier as reports indicate a heavy crop. Home grown onions are done and Spanish stock fast nearing end of their tether.

Potatoes in Eastern Canada hold steady to firm, ideas of holders of New Brunswick stock being firm. On the other hand, Manitoba reports an easier feeling due to opening up of pits and larger supplies.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—An active market for week is reported in green fruits. Foreign imports are rapidly increasing and assisted by mild weather spring trade is displaying signs of unusual liveliness. Since last quoted, prices have not changed. Florida oranges are off the market, while the scarcity of pineapples has been relieved by arrival of Cuban stock. Values tend to drop.

GREEN FRUITS.— The arrival of warmer weather was indeed welcomed by wholesale fruit men. Trade under unfavorable weather has been lagging for some time and higher temperature gave added life.

Apples have been cleaning up more satisfactorily of late. Ben Davis and Russets compose major portion of offering at $3.50 to $4.50 per barrel. Northern Spies are scarce at $5 to $5.50.

Louisiana strawberries in pints have made their debut at 15 cents per box. Considerable trade is being done in them.

VEGETABLES. — Florida tomatoes are coming along quite freely and are selling well. They are quoted from $3.75 to $4.50. One firm quotes 120's and 14's at $4.50, 180's at $3.75 and 216's at $3.25. Florida celery is also plentiful. Early stuff is about done, although there are a few cars in storage here. The green top variety will be coming along in future. Egyptian onions are selling well at $4 to $4.25 per 110-lb. sack.

Lettuce at moment is a valuable table decoration, Boston head lettuce being 50 cents per dozen higher at $1.75. Boston cucumbers have moved in opposite direction, being $2.25 per dozen now.

Strong feeling in potatoes has made itself felt in higher quotations. New Brunswick stock have moved above the $2 mark, as high as $2.10 being asked. Holders are pretty firm in their ideas.

Watch the Color Scheme in Fruit Window

Many Attractive and Appetizing Trims Can be Made of These Goods—Suggestion for a Display of Vegetables and Fruits That Can be Arranged Easily—The Contrast in Colors.

There are certan lines of food handled by the grocer which, when properly displayed, appeal strongly to the appetite of the customer. Every grocer has seen a display of goods which appeared so appetizing that it fairly made the mouth water. Such displays are valuable by reason of their sales creating qualities.

Object of Fruit Display.

Fruits and vegetables are lines which can be easily arranged so as to be both mouth-watering and sales-creating. Especially during spring and summer a sufficient variety of these are available to make a good display possible. It would, therefore, be in the interests of the grocer to begin early every year to give a little extra attention to this department. By so doing he will soon be able to work up a considerable business in these lines. If possible a window should be devoted to them.

A Quebec grocer, known to the writer, a year ago had little trade in fruits and vegetables. He recognized that these goods could be made into appetizing displays so as to appeal to both eye and palate. He also recognized that if he could get people coming for these lines he would have an opportunity of selling them something else. He decided to give more attention to this line.

What the Window Did.

A show window was set apart and attractive displays were kept constantly arranged. He found that when trimmed properly they would bring good business, for people are constantly on the lookout for some of these "trimmings" to the usual staple lines of food found on the ordinary table. People began to watch the window for "appetizers," often going out of their way to see what he had to offer. He has found himself amply repaid for his efforts.

Three important things to observe in arranging a fruit and vegetable window is to have it neat, well balanced and containing a good color scheme. By trimming it with an eye to the color arrangement, the appearance of the window is greatly enhanced. Probably the same goods placed in the window without attention to this particular, would not be nearly as attractive. Food which is pleasing to the eye is also to the palate.

A Symmetrical Trim.

The accompanying window offers an excellent suggestion for a display. It will be noticed that it is well balanced. On the raised platform at the rear is a pyramid of grapefruit with a row of pineapples on either side faced by a row of oranges.

The lowest portion of display, the centre piece is radish, surrounded by a wreath of lettuce and that by cucumbers. The circles on each side are of cabbage, the centre being filled with ripe tomatoes. The squares farther out on each side are of radish, while the balance of the window is filled in with cucumbers.

In this, the color scheme is excellent. The red of the radish and of the tomatoes contrast beautifully with the green of the lettuce and the lighter leaf of the cabbage, while the darker green of the cucumbers sets the display off well Try it and see what results will accrue.

Fruit and vegetable display suggestion that should bring good results. Try it.

Finding Tobacco and Cigars Profitable

This Is Experience of Many Who Have Gone After the Business —Competition the Life of Trade—Ideas on How to Go After Prospects—Keeping Cigars in Good Condition — Show Cases Figure Largely in Selling.

ON returning from a recent trip to New York, a Montrealer, inter alia, stated: "There were many things I noticed there about retailers, but I was particularly impressed with the manner New York dealers look on competition. They seem to welcome it. I noticed four retail boot stores all in succession on a leading thoroughfare, and one was as busy as the other."

Where Many Dealers Demur.

Now, leather has got nothing to do with tobacco, even if the hides are smoked" somewhat during course of tanning, but this very statement serves the purpose of the writer admirably. How many grocers think that they cannot sell tobacco because there is a tobacconist close by? Quite a number. But how many dealers would there be in business to-day on the whole if each were to think that there was nothing for him because competitors have got the start of him? Woudn't the present number be reduced alarmingly?

Well, then, agreeing that competition is the life of trade, and further, that there is trade for every one if there are twenty grocery stores all in a row, let us see just the best way to build up a tobacco business.

Goods Must Be Seen.

Of course, a supply of leading brands of chewing and smoking plug, cigars and cigarettes is essential, but the sales depend entirely on the position the goods are given. A neat showcase placed in a prominent position with the goods carefully arranged inside and a damp sponge or glass of water within also to keep the leaf from drying up, will attract a certain amount of attention. But the dealer should buttonhole every man who comes into the store, of course not seem over-aggressive, and let him see that he is catering to his needs.

The majority of smokers who do enter the store are regular customers at any rate, and knowing them pretty well, it should not be hard for the grocer to persuade them to give his tobacco department a trial.

Ask a Few Questions.

The woman who realizes that the grocer or his clerks are anxious to please her takes a pleasure in visiting the store. The man also who finds that his interests are the grocer's interests, will also be a more regular caller. Play your cards well, then, Mr. Grocer; ask one or two a day what tobacco they smoke. They'll ask the reason for your enquiry and will be somewhat impressed when you tell them that you are starting a tobacco department and that you want to get their brand in stock in order to supply them. Later, a gentle reminder that you have got same will put them somewhat under an obligation and a little diplomacy will eventually mean a sound trade.

Saturday Business.

Chewing tobacco offers good opportunities, but there are some housewives who think it bad enough to see their husbands making chimneys of their mouths and are not at all in favor of their chewing, so it is not every woman to whom you can suggest a "good chew" for the husband. However, be that as it may, on Saturday evening a few plugs of chewing and smoking tobacco should be disposed of easily and this line is particularly profitable.

Handle Cigars Carefully.

Considerable care must be taken in the handling of cigars as they are liable to become as dry as straw, and further, to crumble. Every dealer knows that a dry cigar soon peels and that a man might as well try to smoke a hollow pipe shank as get a satisfactory "pull" from the former. Cigars sell well in any store where shown, but the large sale, the increasing sale, depend entirely upon you and your clerks. Again, we refer to the value of your own selling powers.

Dealer "Treated" Customer.

A Montreal dealer recently told the writer that he was at one time afraid he had made a mistake in investing in a good assortment of tobacco. He thought that it would be "begging" trade if he approached the men who dropped into the store on the matter, so he had to devise plans and one worked out successfully. When he had a favorable opportunity he called the man over to the tobacco case and invited him to have a smoke. He would then take out a cigar and offer it, free, of course. Now this scheme provided quite a pleasant introduction, made an impression, and resulted in frequent calls on the door of this show case and the good "coin of the realm" was afterwards always willingly produced by the customer.

There's nothing like originality. Little ideas are frequently worth thousands of dollars in the long run.

Keep an Eye on Your Business.

The success of many dealers has been the result of strict attention to their ows business. The man who cannot keep his eye off the other fellow and his store, cannot possibly have an eye to his own business. But the man who can counteract competition and originate ideas which create sales is the man worth while. Try your luck with tobacco. You can sell it if you try.

A Bright Looking Provision Department

It is Made a Money Getting Proposition by H. O. Kirkham, of Victoria, B.C.—Provisions Turned Over Twice a Month—Believe in Carrying Only Small Assortment of Staple Articles.

Victoria, B.C., has become the home of a host of eastern and north-west people; they have generally invested in real estate, besides their home sites. Property is continually changing hands and at increased prices, with the result that many retail businesses have been located on streets formerly outside the business zone.

H. O. Kirkham & Co., Limited, made their venture and started in large premises on Fort Street in December, 1910, as grocers, provisioners and wine and spirit merchants. Since then they have added a bakery and confectionery department. All bread, cakes and pastry are made on the premises. The provision business according to the firm is a good one to run in connection with a grocery, when properly handled, but it requires continual watching from early on Monday morning to nine on Saturday night.

To meet the requirements of some of the well-to-do customers and do a high class grocery trade, a large business is done in what might be termed fancy goods. Only the very best of everything is handled and at fair prices.

This firm believes in the wholesaler carrying the staple lines, and the retailer keeping only a small and well assorted stock; renewed supplies can be had on the shortest notice.

Polite and efficient service is always maintained; customers become friends and such friends are the best advertisers a firm can have. Live, attractive newspaper advertising is regularly attended to, not too much space, but room for a daily "menu" of the best seasonable articles.

An interior display of provisions and poultr y in Victoria, B.C. store.

Prompt delivery is a necessity, and regular district deliveries are in full running order; all horses are worked only half a day. The out of town trade —the shipping department—is growing rapidly. A catalogue was found effective last year and a new edition is on the press.

Provisions Turned Over Rapidly.

Some fancy imported lines in stock are only turned about twice a year, straight groceries once a month, but the meat and poultry, also fresh fruit, are turned almost twenty-four times a year.

The staff employed in office, stores and delivery is now thirty-seven, and steadily increasing. An adjoining store has recently been taken to provide for overflow business.

KEEP EVERLASTINGLY AT IT.

One swallow does not make a summer nor does one display of business-like methods by a merchant make his business a success.

There is a merchant who recognized the fact that it was good business to keep nuts before his customers not only at Christmas time but at all seasons of the year. He arranged a display and placed a show card on it. That was good business. His fund of business-like methods has since seemingly dwindled. He still displays nuts, but the fault is to be found in the fact that he still displays the same ones and in the same place. The nuts have long since become well coated with dust, and the same show card, discolored and faded still remains. Such a display is far from being able to create a desire for nuts in the person who views it.

There are many such examples of unprogressive methods on the part of grocers who should display greater ambition and more interest in the trade in which they are engaged.

One good window display, one good advertisement, one good idea carried out or one good day will not make a success of the business. It is essential that the business man keep everlastingly at the work of bringing out business methods in all departments if he would gain success.

Produce & Provisions

Quotable Easiness in Butter at Last

Has Been Apparent For Some Time, But This Week Marks Break In Prices—Supply Has Overtaken Demand—Tone of Egg Market Is Also One of Easiness — Dealers Looking For Lower Prices—Hogs and Hog Products Maintain Stiff Front.

Judging from signs in the air at present time, the consumer who has been attacking the butter dish sparingly for some time back, can prepare for a little thicker coating of this commodity. However, it would be well to caution him not to work up too voracious an appetite for butter is by no means cheap, nor can it be expected to be for some little time.

However, that easiness which dealers have been observing on the horizon for some little time has at last made itself apparent in quotable change. Values at many country points have been easing off under increased make of new goods, while there have been some slight breaks at several of the larger centres.

That the trend of butter is downward is shown by situation in eastern Quebec townships, where yield has been showing considerable increase. At Cowansville, Que., on Saturday last, butter sold down to 31⅝ cents, with 52 packages left unsold. The previous Saturday, on this same market, the price was 35½ to 36 cents. This may not be true reflection of general situation, even in the East, but gives hint that lower prices must come.

Eggs are also apparently pointed in the same direction as butter. Wholesale dealers at larger centres feel that prices should be lower, but supply over demand has not been great enough to warrant any marked reduction. There are signs of easiness, however. Bad roads in many sections have held up receipts, and an improvement would help supply. Prices a year ago were on a lower level, and wholesalers were beginning to put away their first instalment of storage eggs.

That hogs and hog products have been moving upward with marked rapidity of late is quite apparent to the man who has been keeping any kind of line on values. It will be remembered that prices on live hogs last fall eased off materially under liberal offerings. During early winter, arrivals of the porkers still continued free. The reason for this was apparently that feed was scarce and dear, and farmers were selling off their hogs. It was argued by many dealers that this would mean stinted supplies and higher prices later on. That period has apparently arrived.

In sympathy with higher prices for hogs and better demand for products, provision values have been expanding of late. Lard, which has been in good demand, has also been moving upward considerably.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—Market has been devoid of features, prices for all lines being steady, with fair local and country demand in hams and bacon. The call is good for lard, and movement of barreled pork about up to average. Hogs are showing signs of activity, and tend to move quotations in an upward direction.

BUTTER.—An easier feeling is experienced in butter. Manufacturers have increased supplies, and for week prices declined considerably. If present movement continues, values can be expected to reach a satisfactory point before long.

EGGS.—Eggs are again decreasing, and although they have not reached 25 cent mark, they should touch it shortly, provided mild weather and satisfactory roads continue. Demand under lower values has greatly increased.

CHEESE.—Although nothing interesting has featured cheese market this week, activity can be expected before long. Western Ontario manufacturers will get busy towards end of month. Demand is from hand to mouth.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS.—Live hogs have certainly been soaring of late. One month ago price at country points was $6.60 to $6.70. To-day it is $8.15 to $8.25. During past week strong tone has continued, and further advances of 40 to 50c were made. Small supplies have caused most of the trouble. No doubt supplies of hogs in country are small, but prices, in opinion of some dealers, should be nearing a limit.

Naturally, under rise in raw material, values on pork products have been expanding. Hams and bacon show another slight advance this week, and are steady at present level.

BUTTER.—That easier feeling which dealers have been looking for in butter for some time has at last made itself felt in a quotable change. This week a reduction of 1 cent per pound has been made in prices, with ideas of some dealers even easier than that. Further reductions are apparently looked for the near future, although so far easiness has been judged rather by signs for future than actual increase in new make. Production in Eastern townships has been showing big increase, and there have been easier offerings from that district. It therefore looks like easier prices ahead.

EGGS.—First of week found no change in egg prices, although there is easiness in the air which, under any gain in receipts will probably mean reduction in values towards end of week.

Dealers have been looking for easier prices, and felt that values should be lower, but truth of matter is receipts have not been large enough to warrant it, considering volume of demand. A year ago prices on Toronto market ranged around 18 cents, and dealers were putting considerable quantities into storage. Present values make this impossible. Trade evidently, however, expects lower prices.

New laid eggs	0 23	0 24

CHEESE.—And still values continue to climb, although this is by no means a surprise, considering condition of market here and abroad. Another ¼ cent has been tacked on to old cheese values this week. Large are quoted at 17 to 17¼c, as against 14c a year ago.

New cheese is offered by local dealers at 16¼ cents. The make so far has not been large, but can be expected to increase from now on.

Handling Provisions During the Summer

Reasons Why This Department Should Be Featured the Year Round—The Refrigerator and Meat Slicer as Assistants—Many People Like to Purchase Groceries and Cooked Meats at Same Place.

Many groceries stores to-day are the possessors of a provision department that can boast of a substantial and profitable trade. There are others, however, which cannot claim this.

There are many points in favor of having a provision department in the store—and this means, of course, a properly conducted one. One thing is that it attracts trade for other lines of goods. When the housewife comes to the store to purchase her ham or bacon, a dealer has the opportunity of introducing and selling others lines of goods.

Then again, the housewife appreciates being able to purchase all her wants in food at the one store. She does not like the bother of going to one store for her groceries and to another for her ham. Chances are if there is a grocer on the street who keeps both ham and groceries he will get her trade.

Now that warmer weather is becoming apparent, demand from customers will swing more to certain lines of provisions. Hams, rolled bacon and breakfast bacon will from now on be in good demand. As the temperature keeps rising upward smoked and cooked meats will of course become favorites. By commencing now and building a good foundation early in the season, a substantial trade can be worked up before midsummer.

Advantage of Refrigerator.

To the man with a provision counter and who expects to attain good results, a refrigerator is practically a necessity. It should not only be a store box either, but a place where the temperature of meats may be kept at a proper level. The advantages of a refrigerator—and a good one—during the summer are self apparent. The smaller dealer without one finds he is quite often out of certain lines because of necessity he must order in very small quantities or run the chances of spoiled goods. With a refrigerator which will preserve the quality of his meats he may order in a little larger quantities and thus guard against disappointing customers.

The value of display in selling goods is universally recognized but the dealer may experience some difficulty in showing his provisions during the warmer weather unless he has made proper arrangements. They should be kept at a proper temperature. Flies must not be allowed to get at them. Covering goods with netting may prevent this somewhat. However, if the dealer feels at all as if he can afford it, a display refrigerator or refrigerator display case should be provided for the purpose.

The display refrigerator combines both storage and display, being provided with glass fronts which allow the contents to be seen by customers. The roll-top variety have the feature that when any one of the rolls is opened, no warm airs enters the inside of the refrigerator as might be expected, for as the roll goes back, it shuts off the ice chamber from the rest of the refrigerator and the warm outside air does not reach the ice.

Both Cools and Displays.

Another development in refrigerators for grocery stores is the refrigerator display case, built along the lines of a silent salesman but combining refrigeration with it. It is necessary under unusual conditions to have the refrigerator in the rear of the store, but with this display case provisions and other lines which must be kept cool may be shown to advantage in any part of the store.

Another thing that must be observed in connection with provisions is care in slicing. The housewife wants her ham or bacon sliced properly. Besides when sliced in the proper manner, the amount received looks larger to the customers, and appearances are very important.

The Slicing Machine.

"A slicing machine is a valuable addition to the provision department," recently remarked a dealer who has one. "With it goods can be sent to customers in satisfactory condition. Another advantage of the slicing machine of no small account is the saving."

The amount wasted in slicing in many stores amounts to an appreciable sum in a year and it is indeed desirable to look carefully after the pennies if the department is to pay a profit.

Meats That Satisfy

Moyer Bros.' experience combined with careful attention to smallest details ensures the excellence of their products. The name is the grocer's guarantee of highest quality.

Sausages, Hams, Bacon

Products that have enjoyed the very highest reputation, simply because the packers never allowed the quality to deteriorate.

Moyer Bros.' sausages are all meat sausages, not stuffed with bread.

Connors' High Class Sea Foods!

Our Sea Foods possess a reputation for unvarying excellence, which has been won only after years of experimenting in the attainment of perfection.

To-day we have the most modern factories on the Atlantic coast; employ the most skilled help; secure the pick of the fishermen's catches; pack our goods scientifically in the most sanitary tin that we know how to make, and in consequence—WE HAVE THE GOODS AND THE REPUTATION.

All along we have co-operated with the wholesale and the retail grocer. We have always aimed, too, to give the consumer a fine article at a fair price.

Following this plan, we have worked up enormous sales among our grocery friends everywhere. We could not do otherwise.

Just look over your stock, Mr. Grocer, and see what "CONNORS" lines you are short. Then order.

This is our list:

1-4 OIL SARDINES, 3-4 MUSTARD SARDINES, KIPPERED HERRING, HERRING IN TOMATO SAUCE, FINNAN HADDIES (both oval and round tins), CLAMS, SCALLOPS.

IT'S JUST AS NECESSARY to care for and display your perishable goods properly after they are bought as it is to buy them right. You know how easily milk and butter taint—how quickly fruits and vegetables spoil in warm weather, and how the spoilage eats into your profits in an unexpected way. You often have to throw away good dollars in spoiled stuff, and lose first-class customers because something they get isn't just "right," and it's an easy matter to solve the problem after all.

McCRAY REFRIGERATORS

¶ McCray Refrigerators have accomplished wonders for hundreds of grocers all over the world. They are generally acknowledged to be the best in construction and appearance that money can buy. Refrigerators, Display Cases and Coolers are made in all styles and sizes, and we've got something to suit the most modest requirements as well as to fit the needs of the great big stores.

¶ We've just received from the printers our new 48-page catalog, beautifully illustrated in four colors throughout, which describes the McCray Patent System of Circulation and Superior Construction, shows how and why McCray Refrigerators are in use in many of the best stores in the country, and explains the whole problem of refrigeration in a way which will help you. Write to-day for this book and we will gladly send it free of charge.

¶ We also manufacture Refrigerators and Coolers for Residences, Markets, Florists, Hotels, etc. Catalog on request.

Doesn't This Strike You as a Good Soap Proposition?

Some men think a dozen times, others think once and accomplish much more. If the total population of Canada thought once and quickly, what a country this would be!

You don't have to think twice to realize that Morton's Soap is going to make quick sales and reap good profits. We have a soap proposition that is worth your investigation.

N.P. BAR

is simply an honest piece of soap, with no fake or fad connected with it. It gives the consumer by far the best value for the money, both as regards quality and quantity, of any soap on the market to-day.

Show it to your customers, and test it on the scales, ask them to try a bar; if they are not perfectly satisfied with it, you have our authority to refund their money.

It's sure to please—and there is mighty good profit for you.

Advertise The Fact that you sell "PURITY" SALT. It is a sure sign that you are pleasing your customers. Your customers can buy staples in any store, but they will go a long way to get a high-grade table salt. The people will have "Purity" Salt, therefore we say, stock this quality article and make known the fact you have it for sale and watch how rapidly it sells.

Who Would Have Believed

a few years ago, that it would ever be possible to KEEP MILK IN PERFECT CONDITION in every respect for an indefinite length of time without the assistance of chemical ingredients.

Laurentia Milk and Cream

realizes to the letter these conditions. HOMOGENIZATION, a purely mechanical operation, thoroughly mixes the milk and cream so that the cream can not rise to the surface. The milk is sterilized in air-tight bottles, rendering it free from bacteria and germ life.

PURE GOLD

BAKING POWDER, COFFEE, EXTRACTS, JELLY POWDER, SPICES

Favorably known from coast to coast for their good quality and absolute purity. Success is bound to follow these brands, Mr. Grocer, because they meet the two basic requirements of merchandising :

FIRST—An absolute, unvarying standard of highest quality.

SECOND—A wide range of such products that every demand may be met therefrom.

Your experience, your good merchandising sense, will bear out the statement that lines possessing these requirements will make successful stores. Grocers who handle Pure Gold Products are successful. They have the quality trade in their communities and are pleased and proud to have it. Build your trade on quality.

A Satisfied Customer and a Good Profit for You is what gives you

We claim it to be the strongest powder on the market, and if directions are followed the best results are assured.

HUTCHISON, OMAND & CO.

You will sell Lawrason's Snowflake Ammonia to nine out of every ten customers who come to your store at this season of the year. For cleaning, scouring, and a hundred different household uses Lawrason's is the most effective. It is absolutely pure and may be used with safety in any way.

Our big advertising policy creates more sales—If you don't get this trade your competitor will.

The Stock for You-- The Profit is Guarded

Certain household requisites are put for sale in large and departmental stores at a reduced figure that knocks out the living margin the retail grocer should get. Our policy has always been to protect the retail grocer who handles our product, thereby allowing him the full profit and the only profit there is from

An All-Year-Round Success

The coming summer season naturally means abolishing lavishly prepared meals of boiled or roasted meats. Cold meats generally have the call. That is why we are acquainting you at this season to the advisability of putting in a stock of

A-1 SAUCE

You will find it sells readily, and when once you have made a sale to a customer you are sure of their return for more.

Perfectly blended ingredients and the choicest quality vinegar have made Brand's A-1 Sauce the popular table relish—the kind that gives ordinary meals a piquant flavor, that may be eaten with zest.

The price is within the reach of all and can be sold at a good profit to the dealer.

Think What This Means To You

If you are on the market for a new selling force in your store – the kind that will insure satisfaction to your customers, a refrigerator that will sell goods and can be had at a reasonable price—all of which means protection to your business relations with your customer, then the installation of an

is a proposition worth your investigating. The average customer depends upon the honesty and judgment of their grocer—therefore, if they see you have installed the right refrigerator, The Arctic, it means increased trade and satisfaction. We would suggest that you have among your stock those old reliable and well-known brands "KLONDIKE" and "JUBILEE." Nothing but the finest of green corn is used in these lines and the perfectly polished handles make them head and shoulders above anything in the market.

You have a few customers who want a light fine broom—something fancy. We have just got out a broom specially for such trade which we call the "NUGGET." It is the fanciest Broom on the Canadian Market. Try a few in your next order.

In ordinary grades our values are unexcelled. Write for prices today.

20th Century Retailing DEMANDS the Use of

ALLISON'S COUPON BOOKS

You can't get away from credit business without driving away trade. And if you don't use Allison Coupon Books you are bound to lose some money on credit accounts. Allison Coupon Books make credit business "good as gold."

HERE'S HOW THEY WORK:—

When a man wants credit, give him an Allison Coupon Book, and have him sign form at the front which becomes then his promissory note to you. As he buys, you tear out coupons, and when his book is exhausted you can collect your note or extend his credit for another book, as you deem wise. No pass books, no charging, no time wasted, no errors, no disputes.

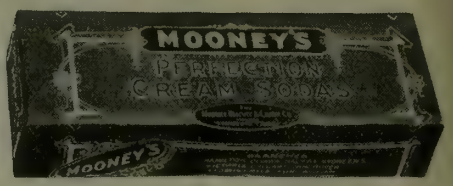
The Points of a Profitable Stock



Success follows the Perfection Soda because in its manufacture the two basic points of merchandising have been complied with.

First: An Unvarying Standard of Highest Quality.

Second: Always favorably and well-known to the buying Public.

Mooney's Perfection Cream Sodas will have the quality trade of every community where they are for sale. Think what that means, Mr. Grocer, to have customers buy from you, not because your price is always lower than in other stores, but because the quality of Mooney's Biscuits guarantees them the best values. Such trade remains because quality and service is its basis.

Is not that the trade you would like to build? — then stock Mooney's. Good profits.

PUT AN END TO ACCOUNTING TROUBLES

The

Ullman Account Register

IS THE SAFEST, SIMPLEST, QUICKEST, SUREST TO CHARGE, AND MOST SATISFACTORY, OF ANY SYSTEM ON THE MARKET. IT SATISFIES THE CUSTOMER AS WELL AS THE MERCHANT.

With this system your accounts are always made out in detail as well as in full to date, and your customer is sure to receive a bill of goods purchased. It shows both the merchant and customer the amount of account to date each time a purchase is made.

The customer knows every time he makes a purchase how much he owes, and he naturally tries to keep his account down. This insures quicker collections for the merchant. The only real step to stop the worry and work off incessant night bookwork is THE ULLMAN ACCOUNT REGISTER.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE MACLEAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, LTD.

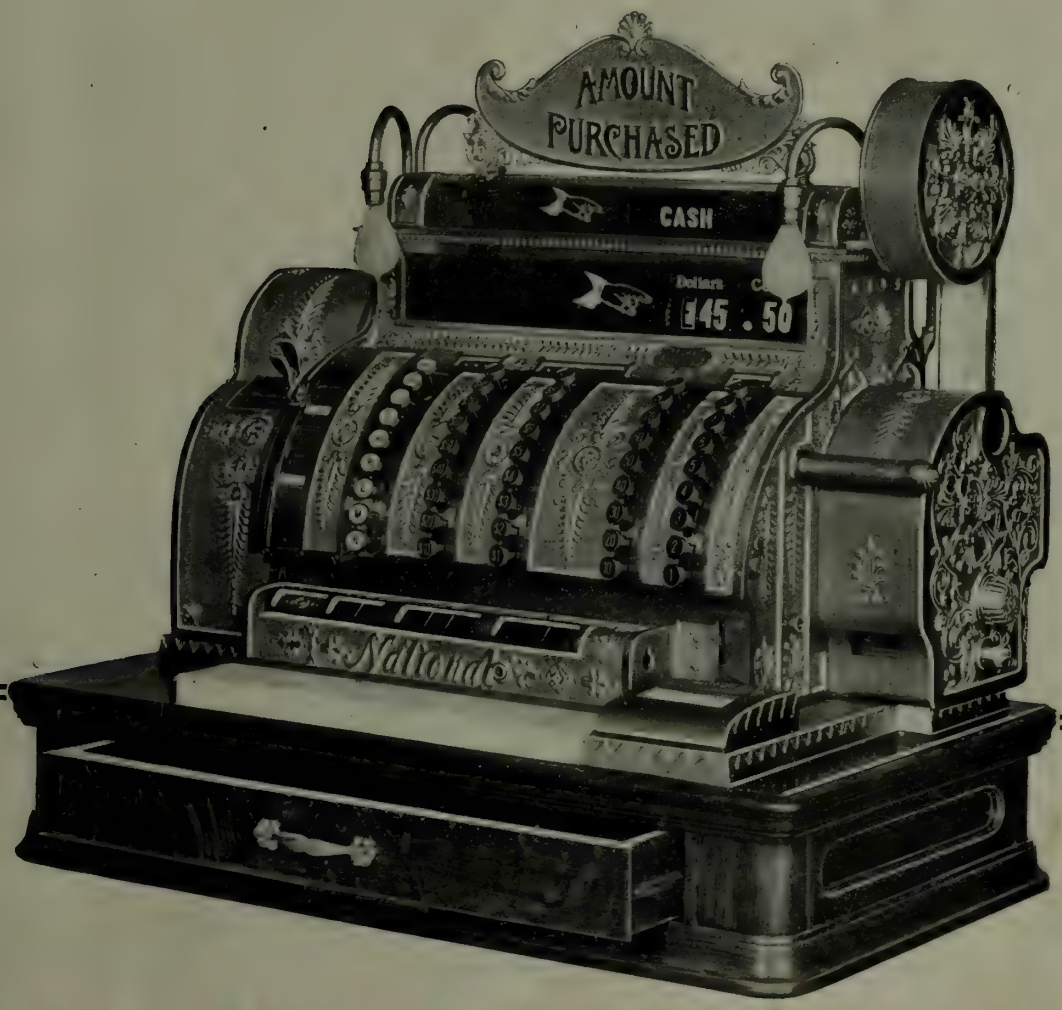
Vol. XXVI PUBLICATION OFFICE: TORONTO, APRIL 26, 1912 No. 17



I WANT A POSITION BEHIND YOUR COUNTER

I have had experience in many thousands of retail stores for 25 years. I have been steadily improving myself until to-day I believe I have about reached perfection, when it comes to taking care of the details in a retail store.

Nobody knows the trouble of the storekeeper as well as I do, for I have been right up against some of these difficulties.

I know how hard it is to avoid mistakes—how ready customers are to accuse you of being dishonest if you make an error in their accounts.

I know the value of giving every customer a printed receipt with every transaction.

I know how to prevent the petty mistakes and losses that make such a big leak in your profits.

I can tell you when your clerks make mistakes in change or other costly errors.

I can show you a quick way of balancing your cash and tell you whether it is all there.

I will promise to make every clerk in your store a better clerk.

I believe you could well afford to pay me $3 a day, but I am very modest. All I ask is that you pay me 75c. or $1 a day for about a year.

After that I will work for you as long as you are in business and won't ask for any more pay.

Will you give me a position ?

I will be glad to explain more fully the things I can do for you if you will write for the booklets which describe my capabilities. This information costs you nothing. Write for it to-day.

Fresh Milk and Cream that will Keep Indefinitely

Laurentia Milk and Cream

solves the milk question completely and practically, does away with all the dangers of "raw" milk, and it possesses all its advantages, besides its preservative qualities that give it an inestimable value. The process of "homogenization" divides the solid parts—the cream, the caseine—into minute particles and renders the milk much more digestible. The cream will not rise to the top, is mixed all through the milk. A good family trade can easily be worked up. will keep in kitchen or cellar any temperature but frost.

GROCERS OF CANADA

YOU ARE NOT IN BUSINESS JUST FOR THE FUN OF IT

THAT'S THE REASON WHY

THE SAFE COMPUTING CHEESE CUTTER SHOULD BE IN USE IN YOUR STORE "NOW"

1. It will maintain absolute accuracy in your cheese department.
2. It will pay for itself in a few weeks or a few months, according to the cheese business you do.
3. It is so simple in construction it can be correctly operated in the dark. Mistakes with a SAFE cutter are impossible.
4. It is a handsome piece of store furniture that costs little and lasts a lifetime.

You need no longer sell cheese at a loss. Every cut is uniform and gives you a profit. You can make money on your cheese by using a Safe Computing Cheese Cutter. Others are doing so. You can do the same.
Order one to-day from your jobber. Don't put it off. Stop the loss with a small investment.

Nine thousand, six hundred and twenty-four (9624) pounds more "SALADA" were sold in week ending April 13th, than in any other week in our twenty years existence, an amount equal to one hundred and seven tea chests weighing ninety pounds each. Think of it! If these chests were piled one on top of the other, they would just reach to the top of the new C.P.R. skyscraper at the corner of King and Yonge Streets, Toronto. This bumper week was 39,257 lbs. larger than the corresponding week of last year.

Can you have greater proof than this of the popularity of "SALADA" and how it pays to push it?

Trade to Go After During Month of May

Last Month of Spring Time to Introduce Summer Lines—Canned and Preserved Fruits, Housecleaning Articles, Cooked Meats, Etc., Should be Among Good Sellers if Pushed—Stocks of Summer Drinks Should be Looked After—Cleaning Up the Store.

We are now on the threshold of another May, the month which marks the turning of spring into summer, and accordingly a change in the variety of goods asked for and used. There are certain classes of foods which are in greater favor than others during the winter months but as the year blossoms forth and warmer weather makes its debut, these lines must give way somewhat to those which the consumer seeks under the changed climatic conditions.

This opens up another avenue of possibilities to the live grocer and he should not lag behind in changing to the new conditions demanded by reason of the change of season. Those lines which have occupied the centre of the stage on account of being particularly suitable to the colder weather must be shifted a little and summer foods and necessities given the stellar position on the stage of display.

Make Early Bid for Summer Trade.

The business man does not wait for his competitor to lead off with summer lines or allow him to coral an appreciable trade before he gets his sails up. While May is still in its middle life such lines as lemonade powder, lime juice, mineral water, camp coffee, cooked meats, prepared breakfast foods, fancy biscuits, canned foods and all that lengthy list of goods which afford short cuts to the preparation of meals, will begin to occupy a position of prominence on shelf and display.

Cereals is one line in which a change will be noticed as the weather becomes warmer. Lighter varieties and those ready for use will come into special demand. Stocks should be watched that heavy lines are kept within safe compass while dealers should put more life into the lighter varieties. While shelf display and personal salesmanship will do much towards this end, it would be well to combine these with window display. Some very attractive window trims may be arranged without a great deal of trouble. Some unual selling design will bring best results. While a plain arrangement of goods may attract passing attention, it takes something out of the ordinary to impress the article on the customer.

Preserve Supplies Getting Low.

That household supplies of preserves are now in small compass is a point which has been dwelt on before. The home-made fruit is conspicuous by it's absence. Any man behind the counter serving women customers will concur with this. He hears them bewail the fact quite frequently. This is a cue that should mean more business to the grocer ready to grasp the opportunity. Thanks to the pinnacle of perfection which canning and evaporating has reached in recent years, the retailer's stock of fruits—even if there was a comparative shortage last year—are not in the same scant condition as that of his customers. He has canned fruits, jams and marmalades to offer which in their excellency do not have to take second place to the home made product—although to suggest this to many a woman would be a rude shock to her pride. However, there is nothing to prevent any dealer dwelling on the quality of goods he knows well, nor to keep him from pointing out the good features of his extensive list of dried fruits for desserts or pie products. Do not neglect to keep these lines ever prominently before customers. The big season for their sale is just opening up and the dealer should not allow this opportunity for extra business to escape.

Housecleaning in Full Swing.

Have you been around among your customers of late? Even the man behind the counter will be able to tell the subject uppermost in the minds of most women at the present time. Spring house cleaning is once more in the air. Either the housewife is busy at the annual spring clean up or plans are being carefully laid and the day patiently awaited when weather will permit windows and doors to be thrown open, carpets torn up, and activity mostly of the scrubbing order to become general.

When women are in this state of mind is the time for the dealer to assist himself as well as his good customers by introducing all those things which allow this work to be done in the easiest manner. Women will warmly welcome any suggestions which will tend to lighten their labors. Soaps, soap powders, lyes, cleansers, ammonias, brushes, brooms, and stove, furniture and metal polishes, are among the lines which should be talked and displayed, whenever possible using a window to help in the cause.

The Time for Seed Sales.

Spring and warmer weather also suggest another line that should be given prominence. This is the time to push seeds. Country dealers of course have the greater possibilities in this line, finding sale for field as well as garden and flower seeds. It is requiring real salesmanship this year to sell many seeds on account of the extremely high prices, but there are strong arguments to show the farmer that it is in his own interests to sow just as large a quantity as usual. Prices at the time of harvest will well warrant it and he can by no means afford to run chances of poor crops by neglecting to sow enough seed.

City dealers will find demand confined mostly to garden and flower seeds but these should be worked to their full limit. Where is the man, if there is ground available, who does not take pride in an array of vegetables cultivated by his own hand or the woman who does not similarly rejoice in a bed of flowers. Work this pride of home cultivation to the fullest extent possible. Talk and display seeds. It means money these days.

Make the Store Look Brighter.

Something has been said relative to spring cleaning. Remarks were confined to customers, but it would probably be well to impress upon the grocer the desirability of overhauling his own store and putting things in shape for the summer. If it has not already been done, there are few stores which could not stand a little cleaning. Then again the dealer probably remembers some things which did not work quite to his liking last summer. For instance, the window may not have been as free from flies as one would wish. Now is the time to give attention to this and similar matters before summer and warmer weather arrives.

Theft Cases, and the Losses They Entail

Recent Articles in The Grocer On This Subject Arouses One Dealer—He Now Weighs, Counts or Watches Everything Purchased—Money Lost in Not Keeping Track of Bread Purchases Properly—How a Dealer Saved His Competitor From Losing Case of Oranges.

"Those articles which The Canadian Grocer has been publishing enumerating instances of thieving carried on against grocers, and pointing out the needfulness of making sure that every article paid for is received, certainly woke me up," said a grocer to the writer the other day.

"I have already saved considerable by following such advice, and I expect to save still more when I get a more perfect system working to prevent it. I gave little attention to the matter before, but I have firmly made up my mind that it pays to be watchful. I believe there are many grocers losing money which they wouldn't if they gave enough attention to its prevention.

"I do not know of many instances of thieving carried on against me by drivers and others that make a practice of it, but that's just where the trouble comes in. If we knew about it, most certainly it would soon be stopped.

How Bread Was Bought.

"I used to buy bread from a certain baker. Sometimes I would pay the driver, while other times I would tell him to charge it. I didn't keep any count of what I paid for or what I didn't. When I came to pay my bill, however, I found that there were only a few days during the month when bread wasn't charged to me. Evidently during the majority of days I paid for it, the driver put the money in his own pocket and charged it to me. Of course, I put up a big kick, and the baker allowed me a certain amount off. Now, every transaction is put through my books, so that in the future I don't expect to lose any money in this manner."

Helped His Neighbor.

He also gave an instance of how he had prevented the competing grocer across the street from being duped out of a case of oranges by a dishonest driver.

"A few days before Christmas last year, the grocer across the street got in a big supply of oranges. I saw the man drive around to the rear of the store with them, and when he came out he still had one case on the sleigh. When he drove by I noticed that the case had my competitor's name on it. This aroused my suspicions, so I asked him if he were sure he got all his oranges. He counted them over and found he was one case short of what he had paid for. It was made right, of course, but if he had not discovered it his profits on his Christmas orange sales would have been clipped pretty short.

Makes Sure of Weight and Count.

"I have also found that it pays handsomely to do some weighing and counting of goods delivered. I think most grocers are getting to recognize that. Mistakes, you know, are liable to happen, even in the best regulated firms. A short time ago I had an example of short weight in buying potatoes. I ordered ten bags and ten were delivered. One looked rather small, so I weighed it. It just balanced at 79 pounds, while the standard was then 90. I thought, however, it was probably made up in the other bags, which were larger. Later, however, I decided to find out for sure, and put them on the scales. I found that the ten bags lacked 49 pounds of the required amount, which meant $1.08 to me. It just shows how profitable at times it is to weigh goods.

A Catsup Shipment.

"I thought I had discovered another case of shortage yesterday," he continued. "A case of catsup had been brought in, and, as is my custom now, I counted the bottles. There were only 23, although I was charged with 24. It wasn't the wholesaler's fault, however. I found that the boy in unpacking the case had neglected to remove the last bottle from the sawdust."

Thus is shown another advantage of checking goods up.

"What system have you for preventing leaks through such mistakes?" this grocer was asked, whereupon he gave his plan.

"When goods come in my clerk or I secures the invoice and see that we have received not only the proper number of cases, but also exact count of each article called for in the invoice

"Then I look over the prices to see that they are correct, when the invoice is passed on to the bookkeeper, who goes over the figures to see they are carred out correctly, and that the addition is right.

Mistakes in Arithmetic.

"This last is quite necessary, for cases of incorrect billing come to light at intervals. Sometimes an article will be quoted at the right price per pound, but when you multiply this price by the number of pounds, you find that it does not agree with the amount billed. At other times errors in addition will be discovered by going over the invoice thoroughly. I also watch my weekly and monthly statements the same way.

"I don't mind paying for what I get, but I don't want to pay for any more," was this dealer's final comment.

CABLE RATES TO WEST INDIES.

The following are cable charges existing between Halifax and some of the British West Indies that are considered enormously high by business men:—

	Per word.
Halifax to Antigua	$ .81
" Barbados	.91
" British Guiana	1.44
" Dominica	.77
" Grenada	.89
" St. Kitts	.89
" St. Lucia	.85
" St. Vincent	.86
" Trinidad	.98

These cable rates formed a part of the discussion at the conference between representatives of the West Indies with the Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce. The rate to British Guiana is stated to be higher than to any other part of the world.

MOVED FANCY GROCERIES.

Two young men who had bought a general store in a conservative rural district adopted the following methods to arouse their patrons to interest in fancy groceries. The last of June they gave away wooden plates for picnics on the First of July. On the back of each plate was a price list of picnic accessories. Stiff cards bearing the same list were sent to all their patrons. In the store these articles were conspicuously and tastefully arranged. This proved so successful that their stock was sold out twice, while the former proprietor of the store predicted they could not dispose of it in a year. An appropriate price list is also sent out at "threshing time," Thanksgiving and Christmas.

CHANCE TO EARN A DOLLAR.

A dealer pays $2 for a dozen of a certain brand of preserved fruit. For how much must be sell the dozen to make 10 per cent. after allowing 15 per cent. for cost of doing business?

The above question is submitted to grocery clerks in Canada and a prize of one dollar ($1) will be given by The Canadian Grocer to the clerk who sends in the first correct answer. With the answer there must be given the course of reasoning on how it is obtained. Sit down at once and let us have your reply. Business Increases 100 p.c. in Six Years

Methods Employed by Hamilton Dealer—Much Value Placed Upon Display and Advertising—Makes It a Point to Get New Crop Goods as Early as Possible—Well Equipped with Store Fixtures and Conveniences.

The business now operated by A. G. Bain, of Hamilton, Ont., was begun more than six years ago under the name of Bain & Adams.

The sales of the store during the sixth year compared with the year the firm started business, showed an increase of 100 per cent.

In the accompanying photograph is shown an interior view of Mr. Bain's store, which to say the least is attractive. That goods are shown in such a manner as to sell them is a certainty. The writer on a recent half hour visit to the store saw that plainly demonstrated.

The Array of Equipment.

At the rear of the store are two display refrigerators, as well as an electric coffee mill. Chairs are provided for the convenience of customers while giving their orders. The store is also equipped with cash carriers, electric fan, computing scales, cheese cutter, etc., while the windows are improved by the addition of mirrors.

"Our fixtures are not expensive," said Mr. Bain, "but we aim to show our goods so that they will appear attractive. We have nothing but plain counters, shelves, tables and fixtures. It is the goods properly arranged that gives the store a good appearance." He believes in good display as a means of attracting trade.

Advertise in Three Papers.

Mr. Bain makes use of three papers daily for advertising purposes. Readers are run in each one announcing new arrivals as well as specialties. The space in each is not large, but it is the fact that they keep at it persistenly that brings results. An attractive 60-page catalogue, 8 x 4 1-2 inches, is issued by the firm about every eighteen months. In it the lines handled are alphabetically arranged with prices. These catalogues are widely distributed.

The methods that are being used by this store for the extension of trade makes sure the fact that the business has not yet reached its zenith.

An Interior View of A. G. Bain's Store in Hamilton, Ont.

Show Cases for Display.

The store has two large show windows which are responsible for a large portion of their trade. They were constructed with the value of display in view, and this is carried out in trimming them also. The window lights are left burning during the evening, and with the attractive manner in which they are usually dressed and the large number of people who pass every night, they secure a good deal of attention after the store has closed.

Counters extend along one side of the store only, the other side, as shown in the photograph, being used for the display of goods on tables, which may be changed as desired. On this side is also situated the cashier's and book-keeper's office.

A high class trade is done in this store. Quality goods, both domestic and imported, are handled.

During the entire winter imported vegetables may be had.

When the new crop supplies of any line arrive, Mr. Bain tries to be the first to show them. For instance, as soon as new crop strawberries arrived on the market they were prominently displayed. Good service combined with the highest class of goods is the means used to create and hold trade.

GROWTH OF CONDENSED MILK.

The number of condensed milk factories in operation in Canada increased from four in 1900 to twelve in 1910, and the value of products increased from $269,520 to $1,839,871. There were in 1910 six factories in Ontario with a product value of $1,335,689, two in Nova Scotia with $133,956, two in Quebec with $275,000, one in British Columbia with $44,326, and one in Prince Edward Island with $50,900. In 1900 there were two factories in Nova Scotia and one each in Prince Edward Island and Ontario.

COST OF DOING BUSINESS.

The following statement made in the course of an address at a recent convention of retail grocers will bear a good deal of consideration:—

> "It is more effective to teach our members what it costs to do business than it is to try and limit prices."

This is talking good common sense. The great work of any organization of merchants must be of an educative character, because the more a man knows about his business, and uses that knowledge in a practical manner, the more successful will he become.

Every dealer is in business to make a living for himself and family and if he knows exactly what it costs him to operate and maintain his business he is more likely to get a profit above the cost. He will see, if he possesses any common sense whatever, that he must, if his cost is 15 per cent. to do business, get more than 15 per cent. above cost of his goods. It is acknowledged by all business men that lack of knowledge and a system of keeping definite track of what it costs to operate, has been the cause of many failures. The only thought of many in the trade appears to be to get the goods out of the store; they work early and late and find to their sorrow in a short time that their credit is gone, and when too late that they have been conducting business at a loss.

Surely this great problem of cost should be given more attention at all retail gatherings. It is safe to say that if every grocer and general merchant in Canada knew exactly what it cost them to conduct their businesses, there would be fewer failures and more outstanding successes among the retail trade to-day.

CLEANING UP THE STORE.

It is preaching what one does not practice when a dealer displays, advertises and otherwise attempts to sell house cleaning articles, and delays his own house cleaning operations.

If the store, warehouse and back yard have not yet had an overhauling with a view to removing the dirt and straightening up things, now is the time to give this phase of the business some attention. It is not necessary here to elaborate on the amount of dust and refuse that seems to gather from nowhere in every corner of the store. It can usually be found without much inspection. The ceiling and walls will probably require a coat of whitewash or paint. The floor, counters and woodwork may need some varnish and the store front a coat of paint.

Every dealer has on his shelves numerous sweeping powders, furniture polishes, lyes and cleansers which might well be brought into commission at this time. Once they have been tried, they can be talked up more intelligently to customers.

The spring cleaning campaign should certainly be attended to at once. It results in a brighter appearance to the store which invites business and should be a part of every dealer's selling plans at this time of year.

THE FIRE INSURANCE PROBLEM.

The folly of conducting a business without being well insured has frequently been demonstrated. Some men are learning this much to their sorrow and at a great cost. Not only does the merchant owe it to himself to be fully insured, but to his creditors as well. To give sufficient protection to the men who allow him goods on credit is only just. But there is another side to the insurance question which men are prone to forget.

In an address before the Canadian Credit Men's Association in Toronto last week on "Fire Insurance and Its Relation to Credit," John B. Laidlaw pointed out that there were many retail merchants in Canada who had their insurance in very bad shape and that in case of fire they would probably be able to collect only a percentage of the amount expected.

That this is true, and there is deep reason to believe such is the case, is regrettable. Many merchants do not give the fire insurance the thought they should. Not only is it necessary to carry a policy of the amount which would cover the loss in case of fire, but it is just as essential that the merchant make sure that in case of fire he will be able to collect the amount he expects.

Some men, even business men, are willing to take too much for granted. They are led to believe perhaps that the company in which they are insured is strong or that in case of fire they will receive a certain amount, but they fail to investigate to make sure that such is true.

The man who insures should first be well insured. Before taking out a policy he should make certain that the company is a sound and reliable one. When he gets his policy it is also his duty to carefully read it to see that terms are as he understands them, and study the conditions he must himself comply with to insure the policy against protest.

MOCHA COFFEE CASE.

A United States pure food case of considerable interest to the coffee trade was recently before the courts in Chicago. The charge was the misbranding of Mocha coffee, the defendants being the Thomson & Taylor Spice Co.

The real problem at stake is as to whether or not it is lawful in the United States to label Harrar or Abyssinian coffee as Mocha coffee. The Government claimed that under the Pure Food and Drugs Act, and a subsequent amendment which ruled that only coffee grown in the Yemen province of Arabia could properly be labeled Mocha, the label on a shipment in question reading "Java and Mocha Gold Brand Coffee" was false and misleading, because the coffee was a blend of Java and Abyssinia.

The defendants admitted that the coffee was a blend of Java and Abyssinian coffee, but claimed that the Abyssian was purchased prior to the Pure Food and Drug Act; that it was purchased as Mocha in good faith. They tried to show that whereas for many years it was a matter of trade custom to buy and sell Abyssinian coffees as Mocha Longberry, this custom was abandoned by many coffee men in 1908, the time the amendment to the Pure Food Act was made, rather under the coercion of the Department of Agriculture, and merely to place themselves in harmony with the law. The defence denied that there was any law respecting the matter.

If the Government is sustained in its contentions, the trial may be considered as a test case, so far as the geographical name of any article and its place of growth is concerned. For instance, the decision may be a factor in determining whether or not there will be discontinued in the United States the name "Rocky Ford" as applied to melons grown anywhere but in the Rocky Ford district in Colorado; or Blue Point oysters, if they come from any place other than Blue Point, Long Island, etc.

The case is being watched with considerable interest by not only coffee men, but other sections of the trade.

WESTERN SEEDING PROSPECTS.

The weather during the past week has been favorable for farmers in Western Canada, and the ground is drying nicely.

Considerable grain has already been sown in Manitoba, while further west in Saskatchewan seeding is progressing rapidly.

Much of the grain that was left in the stook and stack over winter is now being threshed, and is turning out very well, much better than expected.

Large quantities of wheat that farmers expected to realize on only as feed grain is grading number three, and bringing a fair price. If the weather continues favorable for the next two or three weeks there will be an undoubtedly optimistic feeling throughout the West and general business will be good.

There is a sense of gloom prevailing over the city of Winnipeg, and all flags are floating at half-mast on account of losing such a large number of her most respected citizens by the foundering of the Titanic.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Cooked ham should now be featured; it helps in the quick-lunch operations.

Let the people know about the goods you carry. Few of them are mind-readers.

It profits a dealer little if he makes many large sales and only a few small collections.

Maple syrup almost sells on sight these days. See that it is sighted by every customer.

Prices are breaking somewhat on prunes. Many wholesalers have quotations to offer lower than the standard prices.

The clerk who is mathematically inclined has a chance of earning an extra dollar. See the offer on another page of this issue.

Any attempts to push canned beets should result favorably. They are delicious to the taste and serve as a splendid dinner vegetable.

One of the greatest icebergs in the retail business is lack of sufficient knowledge of costs. Many a merchant has foundered on this obstacle.

Whatever goes up is sure to come down, is an old adage coming true in the case of butter. It is wending its way slowly down the hill.

The baseball seasons in many Canadian cities will soon begin. The opening is usually coincident with the death of many grandmothers of delivery boys.

The merchant who advertises will never be among the unknown dead. Add to advertising "judgment" and you have a strong business builder.

Horticulturally speaking, April is the month for starting things. Start those much needed house cleaning operations before the month closes.

Pickles are a splendid seller this spring. The housewife's stock ran out earlier than usual, not so many having been "put down" last year.

The average housewife wants bacon sliced thin. The dealer who always supplies her wants is above the average in her estimation.

Overweight seems to be one of the general bad features in confectionery retailing. Grocers are too softhearted altogether—a lesson from Shylock would be beneficial for some.

New Brunswick is going in strongly for apple culture, which is certainly a worthy object. The Fruit Growers' Association of that province will set out 20,000 more apple trees than last year.

The price of glass has been put up by Montreal dealers who sell to the hardware trade. It is not likely, however, that this will affect fruit jar prices. A Toronto manufacturer told The Grocer that while manufacturing costs have advanced during the past year, there has been no advance in price of fruit jars, and none are contemplated. Their prices this season are exactly same as last.

Items in the Cost of Doing Business

Expenses that Amount to About 10 per Cent.—Stock Turned Over Sixteen or Seventeen Times Looks Like a Record—Adding Rent to Cost Whether Store is Rented or Not—An Invitation Accepted.

*By Henry Johnson, Jr.

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 23, 1912.

Dear Mr. Johnson,—I am sure that I would enjoy a visit with you; but it is not likely that you would receive much inspiration from a trip to our town or my store. I am just a common little grocer, one of the "2 x 4" kind, but always willing to learn.

I have enjoyed your articles in The Grocer very much for a long time, and have derived a lot of profit from them, too. Once or twice I have shown them to traveling men, who said they were probably all right, only likely were written by some man who was not in business, or never had been. On the same line, they would say, as the old maids writing to the ladies' magazines telling mothers how to raise their babies! That was my reason for asking if you were now in business.

You can readily see by the figures which I have sent you that I am only a small dealer; but I believe I have made a good showing for the amount of capital invested. I have always made some money; but I lost heavily by fire once.

I sometimes have aspirations for a big business, but guess the best thing for me is to peg along as I have done and leave the larger affairs for people with more brains.

But be sure and see me if you ever get in this part of the country. I thank you for your personal interest.

Very truly yours,

M. F. H.

Bouquet for the Small Dealer.

Is that a nice sort of letter to receive? If you would know, reflect that I have reviewed this man's business for several years. Then you will see how I come by his evidently complete confidence.

He need not depreciate his own capacity, ability nor accomplishment. It is the smaller merchant who "has time" to think that does the real thinking, on the average; and from him I can usually learn the most. I have learned from M. F. H., as we all learn most and best, through trying to teach him. Further, the joy of his contentment is something he should cherish, for riches will not buy that.

Funny about my good friends, the "boys on the road." They are all such chums of mine, generally such fine, solid, well-meaning fellows, that I am glad to hear from them if only to be called an Old Maid! Tell 'em who I am, M. F. H. Maybe some of them will recall me. Tell them to get in line on the right way to figure—my way; for it is the accepted way of to-day and to-moroow, and they all want to be Issers and To-be-ers, not Haswassers!

Will Accept the Invitation.

Yes, my friend; if I ever get into your town I shall sure go to see you. I'll take my chances of getting the value out of the time spent with you, too.

Winnipeg, March 11, 1912.

Mr. Johnson.

Dear Friend,—I have been interest- in your comments on cost of doing business. I am sending you my statement of the past year's work. I make my expense a little less than 10 per cent. Please tell me what I have left out. Part of the statement is guessed at. I meant to make it large enough where I guessed. Most of it is all right. My delivery is by contract, no horses or wagon to keep up. Drayage the same. My stock invoiced $1,700 this time, had some more flour than last year at invoice time. With best wishes, I remain yours,

C. J. H.

The accompanying statement is certainly interesting:

Clerk hire	$ 960.00
Paper, twine, sacks	250.00
Interest on investment	215.00
Delivering	240.00
Drayage	80.00
Insurance	47.00
My salary	720.00
Advertising	70.00
Lights	35.00
Coal	35.00
Stamps and stationery	20.00
Deterioration, fixtures	10.00
	$2,682.00
Sales	$28,440.00

Record Daily Expenditures.

I can think of only a few items omitted from that statement. For instance, rent, telephones, taxes, ice; maybe also, association expenses, contributions, and there should be a miscellaneous entry to cover numbers of little things now omitted—the trade papers he reads, like The Canadian Grocer, for example.

The only proper and safe course is for every man to keep a set of books—two will do the trick—which will enable him to record his daily expenditures for all things; for no man can do this work correctly from memory.

My friend pays rent, whether he owns the building or not. Need I argue that point? If he owns the building, it is worth money. He could rent it, so he should charge his business with the rent he could get for the property. This is the least he should do. Maybe he should do more. Maybe he could not rent the place at all, but has built it for his business. Then it is of special value to the business and, as the investment for the business was unusually hazardous because of scarcity of other possible tenants, the business should pay more than the average going return on business property.

Why Rent Should be Charged.

Say the place is worth 2,000. That it cost $2,000. Mr. H. could invest that money in bonds or mortgages where it would pay him 6 per cent. safely, reliably, without thought or worry on his part. Hence, it must pay 6 per cent. first. Then taxes of 1 per cent.; repairs of 2 per cent.; depreciation, 2 per cent. That makes 11 per cent. The rent should be 12 per cent, or $240 a year, $20 per month. This is going on the theory that there is no other tenant to be had. If the town is growing and other occupants might readily be obtained, the 2 per cent. depreciation is eliminated because enhancement of value will compensate for that feature. Then 10 per cent., $200 a year, is enough. But remember this: You cannot do business without paying rent, whether you think so or not. So let us add:

Rent	$240.00
Phones	24.00
Taxes (mercantile)	20.00
Trade papers	3.00
Associations	5.00
Ice	10.00
Contributions	10.00
Sundries	26.00
	$338.00

An Economical Expense.

As he shows it, his expense is 9.43 per cent. plus—wonderfully low. Even with the additions I have made, it is only 10.61 per cent. plus, say 10⅝ per cent.; and that is a very economical figure on which to run a business nowadays. I think that, even if I have not hit the right items and amounts in my additions, I am not far from the facts. I should like, now, to have a statement of how the business stood a year ago and how it started this year; for it should be very profitable, as there is room for about 7 per cent. to 8 per cent. net margin on the sales of $28,440, which would give Mr. H. from $1,990.80 to $2,275.00 to invest outside of his business every year. Even 5 per cent. net would be $1,422.00, and that could be accomplished on a gross margin of only 16 2-3 per cent. average. So I shall hope for further details.

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met.

Now note an astonishing thing. Here is an overturn of stock nearly 16¾ times in a year, taking the $1,700 inventory as a basis. If that stock is unusually full, as he says, then maybe he is turning his stock 17 times or more. He charges himself $215 interest. On 6 per cent. basis, this would mean an investment of $3,580.33 1-3 and sales of $28,440 would mean a turnover of the entire investment just under 8 times.

I should like to hear from Mr. H., for he certainly should be successful and I should also like to know how nearly correct is my diagnosis.

Plenty of Coffee That Cannot Be Got At

Held Up in Brazil Under the Valorization Scheme, Says an Authority—The Planter Making Money Under This System — Outlook for Still Higher Prices.

A Canadian coffee man states that the following opinion presents the coffee situation in the proper light: —

"Although coffee now commands the highest prices in years, a further advance is imminent, according to local roasters, who declare that matters have came to such a pass that they are not getting back a new dollar for an old one at the present selling prices. It is claimed that green coffee costs 10c. a pound more than it did three years ago, while in that period the cost to the retailer has been increased only 5c. The roasters have been slow to raise the price to the distributors, because they had reason to suppose that the sharp advance in wholesale prices would be only temporary, and they feared a serious curtailment of consumption if the prices to the consumer went up too rapidly.

Advance Was Permanent.

"The advance in wholesale prices, however, has proved far more permanent than expected, and there is so little in sight to suggest any relief that the roasters have only one of two courses to pursue, either to go out of business, as indeed, several have in the past year, or get prices for their goods that will net them some profit. If the retailer is obliged to pay more for coffee, it is only natural that higher prices will be demanded from the consumer. Coffee, which used to retail for 35c. a pound, should now bring 45c., and goods that a few years ago sold at 22c. should bring 30 to 32c. to cover the increase in wholesale prices.

Coffee Not Scarce.

"It should not be understood that coffee is at all scarce; indeed, there is plenty of coffee in the world, but almost two-thirds of the total supply is held under the valorization scheme and interests friendly to those behind that plan, which has for its principal end the maintenance of coffee at a high price. The present world's supply of coffee is about 12,000,000 bags; of that total about 500,000 bags are held by the valorization interests, while in Brazil there are about 2,500,000 bags more, which are practically kept out of the channels of trade because the owners ask more money than the coffee is actually worth. Thus something like 7,000,000 bags of coffee are kept off the market, and there is only a floating supply of approximately 5,000,000 bags.

Planters Becoming Wealthy.

"The owners of the larger part of the available supply are in a position to do what they will with the market, and as present indications are that the next Brazil crop will be a small one, they are inclined to take every advantage of their position. The Brazilian planter is waxing wealthy on the present high prices of coffee, and interest on the bonds floated under the valorization scheme is easily met while the Brazilian Government gets its share in what the local roasters are pleased to call a 'hold-up' by a surtax, or an export duty on all coffee exported in excess of 10,000,000 bags in one year. In fact, the roasters and consumers of the country seem to be the only ones in the industry who do not benefit by the present high prices."

TO DEFINE POLICY.

Meeting of Executive of Ontario R.G.A. Called for May 8 in Brantford.

President D. W. Clark, of the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association, has arranged for a meeting of the executive of the new organization for Wednesday, May 8, at Brantford, Ont. The views of the various members were obtained in arriving at the place and date, the majority favoring Brantford.

At this meeting the policy of the association will be formulated and then efforts will be directed to the organization of associations in different centres of the province. From replies received by President Clark from members of the executive, they are all enthusiastic over the prospects, and are anxious to get down to work at once.

ORGANIZER FOR ONTARIO.

R. M. A. to Have Representative Call on the Trade.

a couple of weeks' time. He states that an active organization campaign will be undertaken and hopes to form branch associations in various centres before a year's time. He will hold meetings in different towns and cities, at which he will explain the aims and objects of the association work.

THE R. M. A. OFFICERS.

Toronto, Apr. 25. — The Toronto branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada at a meeting last week elected the following officers:—President, J. C. Van Camp; 1st vice-pres., W. G. Sheppard; 2nd vice-pres., W. G. Britnell; treasurer, F. C. Higgins; secretary, John Impey; auditor, O. M. Moore; representative to Canadian National Exhibition, Thomas Bartrem.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Hallowee Dates—Advanced.

Brazil Nuts—Declined.

Molasses—Strong.

Sugar—Weak.

Montreal, April 25.—An active spring business is reported in all lines of the trade. Exceptionally good deliveries are partly responsible for the favorable turn of affairs, and dealers claim it will be a record season notwithstanding the many drawbacks and disadvantages offered within the last few months.

It is interesting to note that sugar is waiting for a decline and nothing at present is likely to vary its downward course.

Molasses offers an exceptionally strong market on import orders.

Canned goods have started to become active, a few changes having been made this week. Standard peas are quoted at $1.10; early June, $1.15; fine, $1.80, and extra sifted, $1.80. Canned corn is now selling at 95 to 97½ cents per doz. Split peas are down to $3.90 per bag.

SUGAR.—Sugar situation at present is interesting. Values for all grades are high, but wholesalers predict a decline before long. Trade is only moving in limited amounts.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.—Trade in molasses is of a satisfactory volume. Prices since last issue offered signs of weakening in sympathy with the recent drop in raw sugars, but stiffened again. A good business is being done in import orders. Syrup has offered no new features during the week. Business continues good, the general tone of the market is strong.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Still weak.

Prunes—Concessions made in prices.

Beans—Steady.

Cotton Twine—1c lb. higher.

Toronto, April 25.—Trade during past week or so has been none too brisk. In fact most jobbers are willing to concede that during past month there has been no overrush. However, trade is no more quiet than other years at this season. Another consideration is backwardness in opening up of spring season. "Trade in sugar," said one jobber, "has been slow, and it naturally makes a considerable difference in total sales."

Prospects are however, bright and confidence is expressed that near future will see greater activity. For one thing navigation will shortly be opening in earnest on the lakes and this will help a great deal. Retailers are awaiting the lower rates and wholesalers already have considerable business booked to go forward as soon as the better freight rates can be secured.

Country roads are also improving and farmers will be enabled to get out to make purchases. Retailers stocks in many lines such as dried fruits and canned goods are getting into smaller compass and will soon have to be replenished. Add to this the fact that housecleaning articles are beginning to move out and you have the reason for rosy dreams on the part of wholesalers.

Sugar continues weak under easy raw market caused by heavy receipts from Cuba. Demand for refined is dull. Refined in Toronto is $5.45 per cwt. as against $4.70 a year ago.

It was pointed out some time ago that cotton was moving upward and that a firming in cotton twine was not unlikely. It continued in this direction and dealers in cotton twine have recently advanced prices 1 cent per pound.

An exceptionally good demand is noted for pickles this spring. In fact all during winter there has been better demand than usual. Reason probably is that on account of high prices of vegetables last year housewives did not put away many pickles and have to rely on the grocer for these now. This and fact that palate demands some of these appetizers in spring is good reason why retailers should give pickles prominence.

Beans continue to hold a strong position. Big upward move which has been made in prices has naturally firmed pork and beans. It has been suggested that advance in these may become necessary. Some wholesalers are advising customers to purchase, using argument that pork and beans are staple lines anyway and at least will remain steady.

SUGAR.—Tone of sugar market still continues one of weakness, raws having continued easy and lower during past week. More definite and substantial news regarding what can actually be expected from Cuba is awaited. At prescent receipts of raws point to extremely favorable outturn and market has ruled weak. There are those who maintain, however, that planters have not sufficient storage facilities and are sending along their sugar and that this accounts for favorable showing which will mean less favorable conditions later on.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES. — Fact that corn still holds a stiff front accounts for present strength in corn syrups and starch. Position of these two lines is well maintained. Considerable business is still being done in syrups while approach of warmer weather will mean a larger demand for starch.

Weakness in sugar has had tendency to to break faith in molasses situation but conditions seem to indicate quite a steady undertone. Demand from retailers for this line continues routine.

DRIED FRUITS.—It is pleasing to note that here and there are wholesalers who note greater activity in dried fruits. With more than one firm, prunes have recently taken on more life denoting reduced stocks in retailers' hands.

Tone of prune market continues easy both locally and at coast points. Local jobbers are well supplied, and to induce business, lower prices have been quoted by many firms. No doubt on certain sizes, sales are being made by some firms at figures below quotations, but owing to variations in prices of different houses, it is difficult to get an exact line on values. Apparently larger sizes are in most plentiful supply here.

Figs as pointed out before are getting into smaller compass and are firm. Layer figs are well cleaned up, fanciest varieties being about done. Tapnets are also in rather scant supply for season.

Dates are in much same condition as figs, and are considered good property. Valencia raisins are quoted ¼ cent under quotations by some firms. Seeded raisins continue easy on the coast.

TEA.—No particular alteration in local situation. A report from London says that notwithstanding present adverse industrial conditions, demand continues active and testifies to inherent strength of the position.

Shipments from Colombo to the United Kingdom during March were 350,000 lbs. over those for 1911, and the estimate for April is an increase of 1,250,000 lbs. over 1911. London advices from Colombo are to the effect that yields are still improving. These facts may have the effect of weakening prices for the time being of the lower grades of Ceylon tea, but large dealers do not anticipate an easier market for goodliquoring Indian and Ceylons for some time.

COFFEE.—Nothing in situation to denote any variation from present steady to firm position. Market is well maintained by strong statistical position and fact that it is in strong hands. Demand from retailers is normal.

"Stocks of farmers' goods," says a Southern report, "are lighter than last year at the principal markets, and the situation is strong from a statistical standpoint and with average trade conditions the supply of Virginia and Spanish peanuts will be exhausted before the new crop is ready for market."

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—Peas and corn are quoted lower in Montreal, at least by some firms, but local wholesalers maintain quotations and most of them say there is nothing to warrant a break in prices as there is no over-supply and end of season will find decks well cleared. There are said to be some firms who on account of temporary quietness had a slight attack of "cold feet" but one wholesaler pointed out that it is usual for late winter to be marked by this lull but that now is the commencement of a good selling season and that these lines should commence to move more freely. Spring naturally brings green peas to mind, and canned article is next best thing, and not a bad substitute either.

Salmon maintains its strong position, and there are indications of strong market, especially on sockeyes again this year as being another "lean" year, pack cannot be expected to increase. Naturally under high prices there is tendency either to use cheaper article or purchase best article in smaller packages. Latter seems to be line followed, as people who have once used good salmon always want it. For this reason sale of 1-2 lb. tins has been increasing during past couple of years.

High prices for beans has caused firmness to pork and beans, and it has been suggested that conditions may come to such a stage that an advance will be necessary in prices. Manufacturers point out that not only have beans advanced, but everything else connected with manufacture, including solder, cans, nails and cases have been on increase. They say no advance will be made until absolutely necessary, but that profits are now clipped to a pretty close margin.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Beans—Strong advance, 10 cents.

Syrup—Dearer.

Sugar—Steady

Winnipeg, April 25.—The excitement and unrest resulting from the Titanic disaster has somewhat upset business conditions during past week and trade locally has been somewhat dull. There has, however, been no falling off in country orders and city is already assuming its normal conditions.

Beans and syrups are strong. They have advanced in price and are yet in an unsettled condition.

Shelled almonds have advanced a cent and Brazil nuts have declined four cents. Things are, however, somewhat quiet in the nut trade at present.

In general, prospects are very good. Weather in April so far has been favorable to work of getting in crops and a large acreage is already sown. The grain markets are strong with prices advancing, thus insuring a good turnover for large balance of crop yet unmarketed.

Collections are still reported slow but improving.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, April 24.—Market in St. John during past week has been decidely active and there have been many changes in list of quotations on standard articles, with possibility of further being recorded before long. Re-opening of navigation on the St. John and Kennebecasis Rivers has given an impetus to trade, as the steamers for most part have resumed their summer routes and orders from up-river districts are encouraging. The provision market is strengthened from last week, and there is a strong upward tendency shown in several lines.

Rolled oats are thirty cents higher and cornmeal has likewise advanced, while the price of beans surpasses all records previously made in St. John. Still further advances are looked for. String beans in can also went up from fifteen to eighteen cents per dozen.

Increase in Manitoba flour was soon followed by an advance in Ontario and market is reported unsettled, so that more advances may be expected. Sugar market is in a weakened condition, while molasses is a little easier. Clear pork has gone up $2 a barrel and pure lard is two cents higher per pound, as are hams and bacon. Eggs remain unchanged in price, but butter is steady and shows little inclination of relief for some time.

SMUGGLING GOING ON.

So Claim Merchants of Chilliwack, B. C., Who Will Ask for Better Tariff Enforcement.

Chilliwack, B. C., April 25.—(Special) —The Chilliwack Merchants' Association is to ask the Government for better enforcement of the tariff at Sumas and other points on the south of their territory and lying against the boundary of the United States. It is declared that groceries, shoes, millinery, dry goods, boots and shoes, etc., are brought in over the border by farmers, who have little difficulty in eluding the customs officer. Sumas and other towns are located right on the boundary, and special efforts are made by the business men there to secure the Canadian border trade. This is felt particularly by the merchants in the Chilliwack district.

The Chilliwack association is not altogether agreed on the question of the summer half-holiday. The reason is that some adhere to the decision of the majority, while others do not, and dissatisfaction is the result. An effort will be made to get a unanimous agreement on the matter, either one way or the other.

A WARNING.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said—
"My trade of late is geting bad,
I'll try another ten-inch ad.?"
If such there be go mark him well;
For him no bank accounts shall swell,
No angel watch the golden stair,
To welcome home a millionaire.
The man who never asks for trade
By local line or ad. displayed,
Cares more for rest than worldly gain,
And patronage but gives him pain.
Tread lightly, friends, let no rude sound
Disturb his solitude profound;
Here let him live in calm repose
Unsought except by men he owes.
And when he dies, go plant him deep
That naught may break his dreamless sleep;
Wherein no clamor may dispel
The quiet that he loved so well;
And that the world may know its loss,
Place on his grave a wreath of moss;
And on a stone above: "Here lies
A chump who would not advertise."

What is the secret of success in business? Selling the people what they want? asks a salesman.

No, not exactly, he says. It's educating them into wanting the things you have to sell.

Strong Front to Manitoba Flour

Under Strong Wheat Market—Recessions That are Probable in Millfeed Also Tend to Firm Flour—Crop Scare News Continues to Sway Grain Markets—Rolled Oats and Cornmeal in Steady Position.

Manitoba flour is steady to firm at last week's advance of 10 cents per barrel. It is considered as holding quite a strong position, and there has been some talk of another advance in price.

Strong wheat market, especially for good milling wheat, is responsible, at least in part, for firmer feeling. Another factor is that coming of grass and consequent slackening of demand for mill feeds will cause a recession in prices of bran and shorts that will tend to firm flour. During winter, high prices which millers have been receiving for these by-products has allowed a little less weight to be thrown on flour than would otherwise be the case. Now easiness apparent in feeds will work for firmer feeling in flour.

It is probable that opening of navigation with lower freight rates will balance to some little extent this firmness. Just how much it will lack of balancing it up is the question. While at this time last year, navigation on lakes was taking on life, activity as yet this spring is lacking. This, with freer delivery of raw material and cheaper rates, is patiently awaited by dealers.

Crop scare news is being taken full advantage of on the big grain markets of world by those interested. Up and down with marked irregularity, the wheat barometer continues to move as one report after another brings alarm to bulls or bears. Chicago is especially marked by scare news of a sensational nature. Alarming reports will bring a wild buying rush with upward move in prices, only to be followed later by a contradiction or some favorable report that will send prices scurrying in opposite direction. On whole, however, markets exhibit strength, and Canadian values are according affected.

Rolled oats and cornmeal both hold a steady position by reason of high level at which raw material prices are ranging.

Canadian visible wheat supply this week is 31,092,000 bushels against 29,797,000 last week and 13,762,000 bushels a year ago. United States visible wheat decreased 1,800,000 bushels last week.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—Manitoba flour is steady and firm at last week's advance of 10 cents per barrel and there has even been some talk of a further upward movement in price. Recession in mill feed, which is bound to follow the coming of grass, is considered as a factor in firming prices, while strong position which good milling wheat is holding also works for present strong feeling.

Ontario wheat continues firm in sympathy with small offerings and general trend of wheat prices. Last week's higher figure on blended flour is generally observed, while straight roller is firmer and higher at around $4.15.

CEREALS.—Springtime is said to be less conducive to demand for heavier cereals than colder weather of winter, but reports would seem to indicate that trade is standing up well under the somewhat unfavorable conditions by reason of warmer weather.

Rolled oats are steady at high price under strong front of the raw material. Corn meal also maintains a steady to firm position.

CATALOGUES AND BOOKLETS.

The Wm. Cane & Sons, Newmarket, Ont., have just issued an attractive catalogue. Half-tone cuts in color show their various lines of washboards, butter moulds, egg carriers, woodenware, etc. These cuts are on a white background with a chain border in brown, edged with a yellow tint. Descriptions of the various lines are given on the pages opposite the cuts. A cut of the factories, in colors, appears on the outside back cover.

Pineapples Coming into the Limelight

Larger Receipts and More Interest Being Directed to Them—Yet Selling for Table Use Only—Tomatoes Moving Out Well—Quality is Good—Shipments of Celery on Decrease—Florida Will Shortly Have New Potatoes to Offer.

Pineapples are beginning to move forward into the limelight. Receipts have been on a larger scale and more interest has been directed to them under slightly easier values and season is shortly expected to get under way in earnest.

Past week has been marked by larger receipts on Canadian markets, supplies coming from Cuba. Some Porto Rico stock will put in an appearance shortly, while Forida will later on contribute her share of supplies. Prices at present make sales only possible for table use, but within three weeks or a month dealers should be able to push them for preserving purposes.

Trade in oranges on Canadian markets is confined mostly to California stocks. Mexicans are also on offer. Navels exhibit just slightly easier tone, due no doubt to influence of arrival of some stock of none too fancy quality. A New York receiver says regarding oranges:—

"The navel ranges will be on the market till well along in June. Our advices are that the Valencia crop this season will be fully 25 per cent. short of that of a year ago. Growers on the Coast are even now asking $3 to $3.50 per box f.o.b. for shipment in June. We find in arrivals of navels that some lots coming forward in iced cars show 10 per cent. decay, while a few shipments on the market in ventilated cars were sound."

Tomatoes show little variation in price, but quality, which was somewhat lacking for a time, is now good and they are going out well. Season on east coast of Florida is nearing an end and fact that other sections are a little backward tends to steady market. Florida celery shipments are about over, but most Canadian markets have some stock ahead, while there is yet green-top variety available, which is a fine keeper in cold storage. Florida reports sizes now running mostly fours.

Egyptian onions continue reasonable and are selling well. Texas Bermudas will be commencing to come forward shortly. They come in 50 lb. crates and on account of quality are higher than Egyptians. Other producing sections for new crop onions at present are Mexico, Cuba and Bermuda.

Bermuda is supplying our new potatoes at present, but Florida will soon begin to lend a helping hand.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—An active market for week is reported in green fruits. Demand is exceptionally good, with values subject to decline, resulting from free shipments and most satisfactory weather. Apples are beginning to show signs of scarcity. McIntosh Reds and Greenings have dropped from the market. Limes and pineapples have put in their appearance and are meeting with inquiries.

GREEN FRUITS.—Thanks to somewhat warmer weather, there is a little more life to local fruit trade. Pineapples are engaging more attention and are easier at $4.50 per case. Some Porto Rico stock is expected in this week. Florida will not arrive until later on.

Apples, as pointed out before, are getting into smaller compass and accordingly commanding slightly firmer prices. Florida grapefruit is at an end. Cuban is available. Bananas are selling better by reason of warmer weather.

VEGETABLES.—Among lines of new goods offered that will serve to coax appetites of customers, are spinach, green and wax beans, green onions, radish and lettuce by dozen and hamper, cabbage, asparagus, cucumbers and tomatoes.

There is a good supply of celery at $3 to $3.50 per case. Tomatoes are of good quality, and selling at $3.75 to $4.

There was a somewhat easier feeling in potatoes at beginning of week, some dealers quoting New Brunswick Delewares at $2. Others maintained prices at $2.10. Opening of pits is bringing out somewhat larger supplies of Ontario, but not sufficient to have any great bearing on situation. Sweet potatoes are scarcer and higher at $2.65 per hamper.

Current News of the Week

Quebec.

The Montreal grocery clerks will hold their annual picnic at Valleyfield, Que., on June 23rd. They will be met there by the grocers of that town and will head for the Exhibition grounds where sports, etc., will be held.

Stewart Menzies, of James Keiller & Sons, Limited, Dundee, Scotland, and London, England, manufacturers of marmalade, preserves, chocolates, jams, etc., is at present at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal. He will remain in Montreal for two weeks or so and will then pass through the larger centres to the coast, returning by the U.S.A. en route for Scotland.

Ontario.

Geo. Childs, grocer, Toronto, is succeeded by W. Vasey.

J. J. Vincent, Toronto, has purchased the grocery of J. T. James.

J. B. Murdoff, general merchant, Trenton, Ont., has sold to J. W. Collins.

D. S. Perrin & Co., London, Ont., will rebuild their plant on the present site on Dundas street.

Jos. H. Collis, export manager for J. S. Fry & Sons, Bristol, Eng., was in Toronto and Montreal during the week.

Hamilton Road Grocers' Association, London, Ont., have added May to the months in which the half-holiday rule will hold good this year, and the East London Retail Grocers' Association may adopt the plan.

The Swift Canadian Co., Toronto, intend to erect a seven-story cold storage plant at corner of St. Clair avenue and Keele street at a cost of $200,000.

Chas. E. Mountjoy, of the Mountjoy Fruit Co., London, Ont., died on Saturday. The wholesale fruit dealers of that city closed their places of business on Monday afternoon out of respect for his memory.

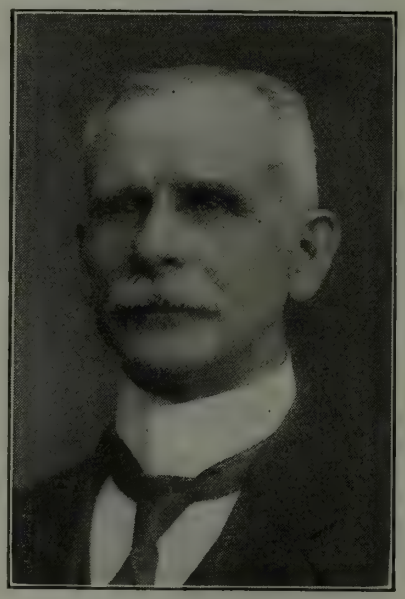
E. S. English, a London, Ont., grocer, accidentally broke his leg last Saturday night carrying a box of groceries into a customer's home.

Wallace Anderson, Toronto, has been appointed exclusive agent in Toronto and Ontario (except Hamilton) for the St. Vincent Arrowroot Growers and Exporters' Association. L. H. Millen will represent the association in Hamilton.

Milton Dierlamm has severed his connection with J. Ritter, general merchant, Millbank, Ont., and gone to Ripley to enter into partnership with George Emmerton in a similar business.

Roy Owen has taken over the business of his father, who conducted a general store at Poplar Hill, Middlesex, Ont. The latter is removing to Delaware.

Robinson Swinn, who for many years conducted a grocery business in St. Thomas, Ont., with his brother, under the name of Swinn Brothers, and who for a couple of years has been living in Salt Lake City, has leased a store at Luton, Ont.



J. A. McINTOSH, Hamilton,
A member of the Executive of the recently organized Ontario Retail Grocers' Association.

George Blackwell, for 13 years general merchant at Komoka, Ont., has sold to Mr. Foster, of Evelyn, and will go West.

The British Canadian Canners, Hamilton, Ont., have appointed Wallace Anderson, sales agent for Toronto. They will have five factories in operation this year and next season expect to add an additional five or more.

The factory of the American Can Co., Hamilton, Ont., was damaged to the extent of about $15,000 on Tuesday in a fire in which the night watchman, Charles Warren lost his life. The management say the manufacturing part of the establishment will not be crippled. The part that was damaged was the paper can department.

The Bulk Sales Act has gone down to defeat in the Ontario Legislature for the second time. A couple of sessions ago it was brought before the house but did not meet with favor, being considered as class legislation. This session the bill was introduced by W. D. McPherson and it seemed quite possible that it might become law. But when it came up for the third reading in the house, it once more suffered defeat.

Western Canada.

Edward Jennette, has purchased the general store of Eccles & Metcalfe, Spruce Grove, Alta.

F. R. Collins, general merchant, Radisson, Sask., has sold to J. B. Sample.

G. F. & J. Galt, wholesale grocers, Calgary, Alta., have sold to Campbell, Wilson & Horne, Ltd.

William Braid has retired from active participation in the business of William Braid & Co., wholesale coffee and spice dealers, Vancouver, B.C. This firm was established twenty years. The business has been taken over by James Beveridge, who has been connected with the company for seventeen years. Mr. Braid will visit Scotland this summer, and when he returns will devote his time to private interests.

R. D. Dinning, who has been secretary of the Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association, has resigned to join James Roy, who is secretary of several of the wholesale organizations. Mr. Dinning has been with the grocers three years. Of late he has been secretary also of the B.C. Hardware Dealers' Association, and it is not improbable that he will retain this connection. It has not yet been decided who will be Mr. Dinning's successor. The association has been advertising for an assistant secretary, and very likely two men will hereafter do the work, one on the outside and the other in the office.

Trade Awaiting Supplies of Fresh Fish

Which Are Smaller Than Usual for This Time of Year—Demand Will Turn to Fresh Varieties as Season Advances—Frozen Fish of Good Quality Still Available—End of Oyster Season Near at Hand.

Lack of supplies of fresh fish is still a considerable obstacle to trade, and dealers are awaiting until supplies sufficiently increase to switch demand over more to this variety. As pointed out last week, amount of fresh fish offering from coast points is small, while fishing on lakes and rivers has been held back by slowness with which ice has disappeared.

Demand will gradually turn to fresh varieties as season advances and supplies make it possible. However, there is still some little trade in frozen lines which are procurable, thanks to cold storage, in good condition and which are lower in price than fresh.

Oyster season is on the wane and will soon have passed into history for another year. Oyster dealers seem to be quite well satisfied with the season. It has had its bad spots but taken on the whole since it opened in September last volume of sales has been quite satisfactory.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—Fish market is wanting in features. Call for the season is brisk and prices tend to go higher owing to shortage in some lines. For week, whitefish and steak cod have advanced.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—Trade is still hampered by lack of supplies of fresh fish, which are being held back as explained last week by tardiness of ice in disappearing from inland bodies of water, thus preventing fishing. Halibut is selling well. Pike and suckers are recent additions to supplies. Trout fishing commences on May 1.

Oyster trade is at low ebb, and end of season is not now far distant.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.—Sardine season opened last week but run of sardine herring so far has been light, and, though operations have been started in some canneries, there has been little material to work with thus far. This the fishermen do not regard as serious, however, as run commences at different times in different years, and what they lose now will be easily amended for, it is thought before close of season.

At present there are some matters in difference between Charlotte County weir owners and weir fishermen's union, and the U. S. sardine packers over matter of prices at weirs for ensuing season. The annual meeting of the Weir Owners' Association was held recently in St. George, and a price fixed for sardine herring, but the U. S. packers claim that conditions of the packing industry do not warrant their paying the prices fixed by union and they have asked for an opportunity to lay their views before the fishermen. A conference has, therefore, been arranged.

Supply of fish on local market during past week has been fair, and easily enough to meet demand.

Produce & Provisions

What is Keeping Eggs From Going Down?

Decline Predicted by Dealers As Yet Quite Small—Several Explanations Are Offered—Someone Apparently Putting Stocks Away at High Price—Butter Continues on Downward Trend—New Cheese Is Easy—Provisions Steady to Firm.

Some little time ago, or to be more exact immediately after the passing of Easter with its accompanying big demand, wholesale dealers quite freely predicted that eggs were booked for a decline in price. There were not a few who declared that values must go down. In making this statement they pointed to the fact that production would gradually increase. They also said that time to commence to put away stocks in storage had about arrived, but that prices must go lower to allow of this. And still prices remain steady at a figure little below Easter price. Values at larger centres are just as high as a week ago, while steadiness was noted at majority of Saturday markets in smaller centres. What is the reason?

Lack of industry on part of the hen cannot be given as cause, for production has been on increase. No doubt present situation is partly due to larger consumptive demand than usual, caused by high prices of other foods. Many believe there is also another factor. While dealers at larger centres declare that values are considerably too high to warrant any stocks being stored, there is no doubt that somewhere along the line some one is putting them away. That there are certain dealers with contracts to fill who must make sure of storage supplies is the explanation of one. That dealers, uncertain as to May weather, are making sure of the cool weather eggs by storing now is another, while a third reason offered is that many country dealers, remembering high figure that eggs have reached in recent winters have equipped themselves with storage facilities and, dreaming of fancy prices which they hope to attain next winter, are willing to store at present prices. "Is some one running a big risk?" is a question asked.

Butter, however, is following predictions more accurately and easiness under increasing supplies has been order of week. Receipts are increasing and wholesale dealers prefer to keep the decks as clear as possible from day to day, feeling that values have yet some distance to go before reaching rock bottom. Taking Cowansville, Que., as we did last week as an example, we are enabled to judge the trend. On April 6, price on that market was 35 1-2 cents. On April 13 it was down to 31 5-8 while Saturday last found them hovering around 28 cent mark. Retailers, in view of easiness, are operating on a hand-to-mouth basis.

Old cheese remains in scant supply and firm. New cheese shapes in opposite direction. Already there has been a considerable decline from price of first offerings and the end is not yet. Easiness is looked for as production increases. Already England is showing interest in new make and is ready to do business ahead providing dealers can buy at right price.

Tone of provisions is one of steadiness under well maintained hog market. Smoked and cooked meats as well as lard are moving quite freely and prices are firm with some further advances noted at certain centres.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—In sympathy with trend of live hogs during past month or so, as well as larger demand which spring has brought forth, provision and lard prices have gradually been moving upward, and are still steady to firm at present higher prices.

Large quantity of lard has been moving into consumption with consequent firming and advance in price.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS.—Although some slight weakening at times during week, values on live hogs are about on a par with a week ago. Supplies still continue small. Dealers are wary about making any definite prediction regarding future of prices, being uncertain as to just what quantity of hogs there are in the country.

Provisions remain steady to firm, smoked hams having expanded another 1-2 cent during week. Firm position of lard has been maintained with several firms quoting 1-4c. per lb. higher.

BUTTER.—As indicated in last issue, easiness has made itself noticeable by a quotable change in prices. Movement commenced last week still continues, and further reductions have been general this week with markets still marked by same tendency.

Of course, it is the increase in new make which is responsible for lower values, this being noticeable in both dairy and creamery. Prices at moment are somewhat unsettled, varying from day to day as increase or decrease in offerings affects immediate situation. Important point, however, is that tendency is easier.

EGGS.—Somewhere along the line is a factor which is keeping eggs from moving downward as dealers have expected for past couple of weeks would be the case. Quotations to retailers in Toronto remain unchanged from a week ago, while a review of last Saturday's provincial markets notes a general steady tone. Weather has been such as to coax the hen into industriousness, so we must look elsewhere for the cause. There is no doubt that continued big consumption is somewhat a cause of steadiness. While most local dealers declare it too risky to store at present figure, there is no doubt a portion of the trade is putting them away at present figure. Some have to make sure of supplies for their contracts. Others want to have some of the cool weather eggs put away.

CHEESE.—With existing conditions, nothing but steadiness can be expected in old cheese. Smallness of stocks denotes that no weakening can be looked for.

With new cheese, which is on the market now, situation is different. There has already been a considerable decline from high point and end is not yet. As season advances and make increases tendency is downward.

POULTRY.—Trade in poultry cannot be described as brisk. This is not the busy season. Prices on most lines vary a great deal. Country dealers are sending along some little quantity of fowl.

There is considerable cold storage poultry being used at present time, which as a rule is in good condition.

Part Played by Slicing in Selling Bacon

A Dealer Tells How He Worked Up Splendid Trade by Slicing Properly—Used Meat-Slicing Machine—How An Opposition Store Looked After This Feature — A Season to Sell Cooked Ham.

Every little Willie who is ever sent to the store to buy ham or bacon for his mother is instructed to be sure to tell the "grocery man" to slice it thin. This should impress upon the dealer or clerk in charge of the provision counter that if he would court the favor of the housewives dealing with him, he must give them their bacon sliced properly.

Customers generally want their meats thin, no matter what use they are to be put to. Heavy slabs of ham or bacon are about as popular to the user as boneless codfish that is full of bones or cleaned currants that are far from being free of grit. Customers both big and little will constantly tell you that they "want it thin."

Cause of the Increase.

"During the last two years," remarks a Winnipeg grocer, "I have noticed that sales in the ham and bacon end of the business were gradually showing a substantial increase. I had a pretty good idea what the principal reason for this was. About two years ago I purchased a meat slicer.

"I always find it well to keep in touch with the movements of the other fellow, and so on the question of meats I recently decided to find out exactly what my competitor was doing, more particularly how he turned out his sliced meats.

Sends Clerk to Investigate.

"One of the clerks was sent out to buy a pound of medium wide bacon. The store where he purchased it used an ordinary knife and from the appearance of the bacon it was evident that the clerk in charge had taken little care in the slicing process.

A comparison of this meat with some we had ready to send out, explained the growth of my bacon and ham business. When I had sliced off the pound, there were 27 slices of bacon of a fryable thickness against the other fellow's eighteen more or less varying slices.

"If a person will put himself in the place of a customer, he will see why care in slicing is good business. There are two trays of bacon both marked at same price. One has 27 slices of a fryable thickness and the other, 18 slices, some of which will be done after a certain length of time in the pan, while others must be fried longer. Which one is going to appeal to the customer? The answer is easy."

Cooked Ham a Seller Now.

Cooked ham from now on will become a bigger seller. Warmer weather will cause the housewife to use this instead of going to the trouble and expense of cooking her own. People are also constantly on the outlook for short cuts towards the preparation of meals in summer and cooked ham solves the meat side of the problem.

Again, cooked ham will be used extensively in making sandwiches during summer months, and it is essential that it be cut thin and uniform. It is said that variety is the spice of life but this is far from true when it comes to slicing ham or bacon.

It therefore, behooves the dealer who seeks an increasing business in provisions to make plans to give customers their goods properly sliced.

THE CROP SITUATION.

A bulletin on crops' condition up to April 1 has been issued by Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Fall wheat and clover are expected to come from under the snow in practically the same condition in which they entered the winter. It is pointed out, however, that the trying weather of April, with its alternate thawing and freezing, was yet to be met with before these crops reached the new growing season.

TANGLEFOOT

has one-third more sticky compound than any other; hence is best and cheapest.

Nature has solved the problem of distribution. It uses a multitude of agents to effect the distribution of its products.

Nature does not expect every seed to fall upon fallow ground and to take root. But, it achieves a profitable percentage upon its distribution. This is all that an advertiser has to do to reap a profitable harvest on his outlay.

Keep in mind the dominant fact that mankind from its first appearance on the earth has been schooled by nature to look for signs; for invitations to taste; for suggestions as to what to wear. Tell your story briefly, forcibly, truthfully, and address it through the proper media and you can successfully apply advertising as a means to increased distribution.

Pineapples

The season is now well under way and car lots are arriving at our Toronto and Hamilton houses. The brands of Cuban Pineapples we are handling this season are, as usual, the best coming from the Island.

"Just as Good" as Ramsay's are Not as Good

In almost every line of merchandise there is some leader, in comparison with which other articles of the same class are claimed to be "just as good." The claim of other makers that their brand is "as good" as is the sincerest flattery and compliment to our goods.

Ramsay's BEST BY TEST
Farm Cream Sodas

The shrewd merchant at once concludes that there is nothing to be gained by experimenting, and that the way to hold and increase his trade is to stock the standard of the line. In Soda Biscuits it is Ramsay's Farm Cream Sodas.

TO MAINTAIN AND INCREASE PERMANENT TRADE

We handle only articles of known worth—the tried and tested kind—articles whose intrinsic merit has raised them far above the commonplace. We do this because we like to feel that the folks who buy them are, year after year, adding permanent trade to the business of the grocer who sells the goods.

Codou's Famous Macaroni

Codou's Macaroni, Vermicelli, Spaghetti, fancy letters and pastes, represent the top-notch of quality—the highest attainment of skill, experience and cleanliness in a model factory, said to be (by those who really know) one of the finest in the world. Codou's Macaroni—a macaroni whose delicacy and whiteness bear witness to the caution used in selecting only finest wheat (from Taganrog) for the making. Tender as a macaroni can be, nutritious to the highest degree. Let the name on every package "Codou" serve to assure you of highest quality when you buy.

G. & S. Asparagus

THE CONNOISSEUR'S DELIGHT

It has all the delectable charm of the tender blades freshly cut from the Griffin & Skelley private beds on the banks of the Sacramento River Within an hour from the time it leaves its growing place it is nearly ready to can and seal—all the original piquant flavor is thus retained, you see—and all the delicacy of the fresh young stalks!

YOU NEVER HAVE A DOUBT ABOUT THE QUALITY OF RED ROSE TEA

Isn't there a whole lot of satisfaction in selling a tea that you are SURE will please your customers, one that you are CERTAIN there will be no complaints from and one that is sure to bring repeat orders.

You know this is all true of Red Rose Tea. You can sell more of it than of any other tea and you can sell it with much less work and worry.

You can do a very big tea business on a very small stock. You can turn over fifty cases in a year and never have on hand more than $50.00 worth of Red Rose Tea. Considering the small investment and the quick turnover you will find that you will make more profit in a year on Red Rose Tea than any tea you have ever sold.

Hamilton, Apr. 29, 1912

Dear Mr. Grocer,—

REGARDING WHITE BEANS AND SIMCOE BAKED BEANS.

For a long time now we have been speaking to you each week about the superior quality and value of SIMCOE Baked Beans.

In the Canadian Grocer, Apr. 19th, page 135, comparative prices are shown for white Beans, as follows :

BEANS, Prime, per bush.	2.50	1.90-2.00	2.10	2.00	1.80-1.85

In the same paper, issue Apr. 26th, pages 33, 34, appears a report on Baked Beans as follows :

"Beans continue to hold a strong position. Big upward move which has been made in prices has naturally firmed Pork and Beans. It has been suggested that advance in these may become necessary. Some wholesalers are advising customers to purchase, using argument that Pork and Beans are staple lines anyway, and at least will remain steady."

"High prices for Beans has caused firmness to Pork and Beans, and it has been suggested that conditions may come to such a stage that an advance will be necessary in prices."

Do you know that Baked Beans are among the few lines that have not advanced in price in sympathy with most other articles of food ? You can buy your Baked Beans to-day at practically the same prices as in 1908, although the Manufacturer's cost of raw material has advanced fully 40%. Only those manufacturers who bought beans early in the season are able to sell on the basis of present prices, without making a financial loss.

Think for a moment ! Does it seem reasonable that it is possible for prices to be lower ? On the other hand ; do not the possibilities point to advanced prices ? How are your stocks ?

When sending in your orders to your wholesaler specify SIMCOE BAKED BEANS, the 3's Family Size, the can with more Beans at a lower price.

Yours respectfully,

DOMINION CANNERS LIMITED.

If it's CUSTOMERS you want, Sir—

YOU certainly want H.P. SAUCE to bring them in.

THE MILK PROBLEM SOLVED

Homogenization does it—a mechanical operation which divides the globules of cream and casein into infinitesimal particles and mixes intricately and permanently all the ingredients of the milk, which prevents the cream from rising.

LAURENTIA MILK AND CREAM

the name applied, is more digestible, and all danger of ordinary milk is eliminated. It will keep indefinitely in any temperature but frost. A large trade is easily worked up.

Purity-Cleanliness-Freshness

AFTER years of experiment in the proper making of jams, Chivers & Sons are now the recognized leaders of the preserved fruit industry in the Old Country. Exhaustive investigation by the world's best critics has pronounced them "excellent."

PURITY—Cleanliness—Freshness—these three, are the hall-mark of this world-famed make of food products. Starting in a very small way with a mere handful of employees, Chivers & Sons have developed into a thoroughly organized concern employing thousands of people.

Chivers & Sons' Fruit Preserves

have a flavour that is unequalled, being composed of the choicest fresh fruit skilfully prepared. This delicious flavour may be attributed to their method of preserving and packing, almost immediately after the fruit is gathered. This is an advantage obtained by Chivers' factory standing in the midst of thousands of acres of orchards in the finest fruit-growing district of Cambridgeshire.

A feature that you will find as a selling point is the careful packing in tins or bottles. By a special process all the tins are prepared so as to prevent the possibility of any detrimental effect on the fruit.

You safeguard your reputation, Mr. Grocer, by stocking foodstuffs of perfect purity and quality—tried and tested. You will find it the means of bringing many repeat orders—at good profit.

and bad Tea is a mighty poor thing for your trade.

Tea kept in stock six months loses one cent per pound in value, after one year two cents, after two years it is positively unfit for sale and is just about as bad as it can be.

The absolute necessity of selling only fresh tea cannot be too strongly emphasized. Tea is at its best the day it is fired in the gardens, and although in sealed metal packages it keeps very much better than in bulk, still it loses flavor. We do our utmost to have "SALADA" reach the consumer in all its garden freshness and fine flavor. We ask for our mutual advantage, the co-operation of every retailer in our efforts to serve the public with fresh tea. Our advice is to buy not more than three months' supply at a time. Twenty years' experience proves to us that this is vitally important.

If any retailer---anywhere---at any time, has any "SALADA" in stock that is over six months old, ship it back to us (freight collect) and we will refund the full price you paid for it. We back up our belief in the paramount importance of fresh tea by this sweeping guarantee.

Figuring the Selling Price Properly

About Seventy Per Cent. of Replies to Grocer's Question in Last Week's Issue are Incorrect—Some Figure Expenses on One Thing and Profit on Another — In Some Cases Both Were Figured on First Cost—The Correct Answer.

Last week The Grocer submitted a question in mathematics relating to an everyday business proposition in the store, and received a great many replies. All of them were not correct—in fact, few of them were. Here is the question and offer:—

CHANCE TO EARN A DOLLAR.

A dealer pays $2 for a dozen of a certain brand of preserved fruit. For how much must he sell the dozen to make 10 per cent., after allowing 15 per cent. for cost of doing business?

The above question is submitted to grocery clerks in Canada and a prize of one dollar ($1) will be given by The Canadian Grocer to the clerk who sends in the first correct answer. With the answer there must be given the course of reasoning on how it is obtained. Sit down at once and let us have your reply. Address, The Editor, The Canadian Grocer, 143 University Ave., Toronto.

Common Error of Many.

The answer is not $2.53, as a great many calculated it. Other incorrect answers were: $2.50; $2.55 3-10; $2.63, etc. Out of every 15 replies, 10 were wrong. So there is room for improvement in the matter of calculation of profits, if the dealer and clerk wish to make a success of the business.

One reply read as follows:

Editor Canadian Grocer.—In answer to your question regarding profit on the preserved fruit, I would figure it out in this manner.

Cost per doz. $2.00.

Cost of doing business, 15 per cent. = 30 cents.

Actual cost of goods, $2.30.

10 per cent. of profit 23c.

Selling price = $2.53.

Should be Consistent.

It will be noted that the clerk has figured his cost of doing business on the original cost and the profit on the total cost, whereas both should be figured on the same thing, that is, the selling price or turnover. No dealer would figure his cost of doing business on anything but turnover, and profit should be calculated on the same.

If the selling price is $2.53, cost of doing business 15 per cent. and profit 10 per cent., the above answer is shown to be incorrect when an attempt is made to prove it. Twenty-five per cent. of $2.53 is 63¼ cents, which would bring cost down to $1.90¾. This, however, should be $2.00, so that the $2.53 answer is wrong.

Something Obscure About This.

Following is the course of reasoning used by the clerk who figures selling price at $2.55 3-10:—

Editor Canadian Grocer:

To make ten per cent. clear on sale of one dozen of preserved fruit, they would need to be sold for $2.55.30 or 21.28 each, or say 22c each for easy figuring.

Arrived at as follows:

First cost	$2.00
15 p.c. for cost of doing business	.30
10 p.c. profit on made up cost of 2.30	.23
10 p.c. profit on total sales price basis, extra	.02.30
Total selling price	$2.55.30

The above is a longer method of doing the figuring than would be adopted if it had to be done every day, as then a "table" would be used that would give the percentage of cost to be added so as to give a clear 10 per cent. profit on the selling price.

The error of figuring cost of doing business on one thing and profit on another was made in this case also. Just why the extra 2 3-10 cents were added on, cannot readily be seen.

On the Wrong Basis.

Another answer was as follows:—

Editor Canadian Grocer: I notice in your issue of April 26th, you ask what goods costing $2 per dozen must be sold at to pay expenses of doing business of 15 per cent., and still have a profit of 10 per cent. for the grocer.

Now the goods must be sold to cover 15 per cent. and 10 per cent.; therefore the first is to get my expenses.

If I am to cover 15 per cent., I must secure 115-100 of cost, that is, $2.30. If my profit is 10 per cent., I must secure 110-100 of cost, which is $2.20. In the first place I have expenses of 30 cents, and in the second a profit of 20 cents, making a total of 50 cents. Therefore I must market the goods at $2.50.

This clerk was, if nothing else, consistent. He figured both expense and profit on cost. His mistake was not figuring both on selling price. As stated above, no dealer would think of calculating his expenses on cost, but always on turnover. A few other replies reasoned the problem out the same way.

The Prize Winners.

Monday morning's first mail brought in two correct answers, among a number of incorrect. The Grocer has therefore decided to give each of the two $1, their names being Mable Sandiford, with Geo. O. Werrett, Simcoe, Ont., and Chas. Byass, 76 Seaton Street, Toronto.

In sending her answer the former wrote:

Editor Canadian Grocer: Re your offer in The Grocer of $1.00 for correct solution of problem, I beg to send as answer the following:

If the article cost $2, and the profit is on selling price, it should be sold for $2.66 2-3, for 33 1-3 per cent. on cost equals 25 per cent. of the selling price.

Mr. Byass' answer was:

10 per cent. for profit and 15 per cent. for expense equals 25 per cent.; to make 25 per cent. we must add 33 1-3 per cent. of cost, which equals $2.66 2-3 per doz. for the fruit.

Example: What costs 75c must sell for $1.00 to make 25c, which is 1-3 or 33 1-3 per cent. of 75c, the cost.

Other correct replies came from Benson Forbes, of Hamilton, with Trebilcock & Berry; Lennox Thompson, of Simcoe; and Roy P. Merrick, of Mitchell Square, Ont., but these were in later mails.

An Easy Method.

Probably the simplest method of reasoning the answer is this: the selling price, minus 15 per cent. of selling price, minus 10 per cent. of selling price, equals the cost, or $2. That is, the selling price, minus 25 per cent. of selling price, equals $2; in other words, 75 per cent., or 75-100 of selling price is $2; therefore, the selling price is 100-75 of $2, or $2.66 2-3.

——— Ontario, March 11, 1912.

Henry Johnson, Jr.,

Care Canadian Grocer.

Dear Sir:—We have been interested in your straight talks on the different phases of the grocery business.

Stock taking has just been finished, and as you seem to be a sort of specialist in picking various statements to pieces we would be much obliged if you pull this one apart and show us as far as possible its weak points.

Might explain further, perhaps, in allowance for bad accounts:—

The $877.85 in 1912 includes the $585.43 of 1911—is, in fact, the accumulation of some years of slow accounts.

In taking stock we figure under real value, if anything. Would hesitate a long time before taking these "stock sheet" figures for our stock.

Perhaps we have not given you full enough particulars. Will give you further on application. Of course, we expect you not to make firm name or town name public.

Yours truly,

F—C—A——&—Co.

In Feb., 1911, we took off $585.43 for doubtful and bad accounts. This year we increased the amount to $877.85. We believe this is considerably more than we could not collect, but place it that way to be on a perfectly safe basis. Our total china business amounted to probably under $1,000 for the year. Total sales (cash received) for the year, $18,550 (not including "truck account"), i.e., goods sold and paid for by eggs, butter, etc.

Allowance has been made in Fixture Account for depreciation. Our delivery horse is not included in amount, as at time of stock-taking it had not been taken over by the business, but was private property of one of the partners.

Expenses for year were as follows:—

Working Conservatively.

When men keep close watch of their business and do most of the handling themselves, working along conservative lines of estimates, etc., there is not much danger that they will go far wrong. In such cases, methods are of secondary importance. It seems to me very likely that these men lay aside something from what they "draw" from this business. Maybe they are buying homes, or have other investments, wherein they lay up surplus. Speaking strictly, however, they are not working it right in several ways.

According to their figures, they do business on just less than 5.14 per cent. for general expense. Add what they have drawn, and we have an expense of just more than 17.64 per cent. That is too heavy an expense account, especially in view of two facts: (1) That on their own figures they are making just under 18 1-4 per cent. gross; (2) that they have charged no interest on investment which, being considered, wipes out their slight net gain of $112.48 and leaves them with a loss of $141.27, or a little over .76 per cent. on sales.

Some Change Suggested.

Being "all in the family"—that is, all in the intimate control of the partners—has made them slightly heedless of good business. That should be changed.

First thing to do is: Record all "trade" transactions as if made for cash both ways. It costs just as much to handle a bar of soap which is exchanged for eggs as the one which goes out for cash.

Second: Stop all "drawing" of irregular amounts. A very liberal allowance for partners' salaries on this business would be 7 per cent., say $1,200 for both. On such basis, the business would show for last year all expenses and interest paid and about $1,000 net profit. As this is a matter of choice, however, I recommend that the partners fix their salaries at $1,800 for both, which will be practically 10 per cent. on sales and will run the wages expense up to 12½ per cent. They should live rigidly within that limit, paying it to themselves regularly every month. Had this been done during the past year, the business would not show a net profit of around $400.

Third: Open a savings account for the business and deposit therein $25 per month during this year. As $100 is accumulated, buy a good bond with that sum. I can point out some to you which will net around 5 per cent. on which you can borrow whenever need arise—only you must not let that need come up. Let the surplus remain as a surplus until you have $1,000 to $2,000 piled up. Time enough to consider what you will do after that. Intrench your business behind solid bulwarks of true Business Insurance first.

Fourth: Watch you accounts still more closely. I do not know how long it has taken you to accumulate that $585.43 of depreciation on accounts; but you have gone back $292.42 during 1911. That is just 1.56 per cent. on sales—over 1½ per cent.—three times what it should be. I know you are conservative. That is all understood. I know you may collect more than you estimate. Make a Specialty Now of Canned Goods

Supplies of the Housewife Practically Exhausted—Not as Large a Supply as Usual Prepared Last Year on Account of High Prices of Fruits and Sugar—Let the Window Work Overtime—Good Money in These Goods Just Now.

There was a time, and we do not have to go very far back in history to find it, when the good housewife would stand in horror at the mere suggestion of purchasing canned goods at the grocer's. Those were the days when a goodly portion of the summer and fall was taken up in preparing a supply of fruits and vegetables for the ensuing winter.

Time has changed, however, and very quickly too, and the home preserving has given way to factory canning. Now the major portion of canned goods are sanitarily packed in factories situated right in the heart of the producing sections. This allows of goods being packed from the best quality fruits and vegetables at a minimum of expense.

Made Rapid Advances.

That the use of canned goods has grown tremendously in the last 5 or 10 years is well known to every grocer. Canned goods have come to form a big percentage of the sales of every store. Take canned goods out of the market and there is not a table that would not suffer in consequence, nor a household that would not be seriously affected by the inconvenience. They are an excellent food, they are not expensive, and they are labor and time savers to the housewife. These are the reasons why the demand continues to increase.

Why Selling Is Easy.

This is decidedly the canned goods season and, moreover, this is a year in which the demand should be exceptionally large. The dealer is probably aware of the reasons that make this so. In the first place, high prices of fruit last year was the reason for little preserving being done by the housewife. What little found its way to the fruit shelves has now resolved itself into a very small quantity. Fruit is a necessity of daily diet. For these reasons, canned fruits should now be big sellers.

Canned vegetables and fruits, jams and marmalades are the lines that the grocer wants to swing into prominence now. A good situation in the store where people will constantly see them, is somewhat of a factor in making sales. Displays on counters and around pillars should be made where possible, while last, but by no means least, is window display.

Be Sure to Use the Window.

Window display is an important medium for promoting the sale of canned goods. Some attractive trims may be arranged and by the use of show cards the excellent quality, the convenience and comparative cheapness of these lines may be heralded forth. Herewith is a suggestion for a window trim, in which fresh fruits and vegetables are shown, the idea being to drive home the point that only the best fruit and vegetables are used in canning, and that cleanliness is the watchword of the factories.

There are other points which may be presented to good advantage, either through newspaper advertising or by the salesman himself.

COMMON ERROR IN FIGURING PROFIT.

This matter of figuring profits and arriving at the selling price is so important that we feel much more attention should be given it by dealers and clerks.

Last week The Grocer announced a contest for clerks in figuring selling price when cost, rate of profit and expense of doing business were given. On Monday and Tuesday of this week twenty-one answers were submitted out of which number only six were correct.

On Wednesday several more arrived with about the same proportion wrong.

The majority made the common error of figuring either cost of doing business or profit or both on the first cost, whereas both should have been calculated on the turnover or selling price. On another page of this issue the question asked is given and the answers are taken up in detail. They are worth while studying by every clerk and dealer, because the problem has a direct bearing on the success or otherwise of many members of the trade.

The man who persists in calculating his profits on his cost and his overhead expenses on his turnover at the same time, ends nowhere. He will not emerge where he intended, his actual profit will not be what it seems, and if he succeeds it will only be by the mere chance of having marked goods sufficiently above cost to more than cover overhead expenses.

THE STALE EGG PROBLEM.

The time is drawing near when complaints of bad eggs on the market will be heard.

Once the warm weather arrives, hens have the unfortunate desire to find a new nest if any liberty whatever is extended to them. Their eggs accumulate in their privately-owned nests until the farmer's son stumbles upon them. The result is the market basket has a heavier load the following Saturday, but stale eggs have become mixed with the good ones. Other delays occur before they reach the commission houses or final purchaser, and complaints of decayed eggs come back to the merchant. But the farmer is immune from any blame because he cannot be traced. The country or country-town merchant has to bear the brunt of the dissatisfaction, consumers have the repulsive experience of opening bad eggs, commission men send back discouraging reports, and the price of eggs is undoubtedly higher than if only fresh-laid eggs were placed on the market.

Every merchant who purchases eggs from country customers should by some means or other get them to bring only fresh eggs to market. If eggs were paid for according to quality, this condition of affairs would soon be brought about, but as long as they are accepted by the merchant and paid for at existing prices without regard to quality, we will have the circulation of eggs unfit for human consumption.

It is the duty of every dealer to do his share in educating the farmer to sell fresh eggs only. Thousands of dollars are lost every year under the present system, and it is time for a change.

THE CONFECTIONERY DEPARTMENT.

In the handling of confectionery in the grocery store there are one or two things to which a dealer must give his attention to make a success of that department. These points have been brought out by a number of retailers who during the past few months have given their views to The Grocer.

It is practically a unanimous opinion that much loss is entailed by the giving of overweight in bulk goods. A sale of these means 5, 10 or 15 cents' worth, and if a high class chocolate is being purchased there are not many chocolates. The dealer or clerk, not wishing to appear stingy, adds a few more to dispel this fancy, and a loss or very little margin is the result.

To overcome this one dealer advises the use of a small computing scale, and if the business and store is large enough, a separate department and a saleslady to look after it. This arrangement places the dealer and his grocery clerks under no obligation to give away any confectionery whatever.

Freshness in high class goods is another item to be watched. Buying carefully in small quantities will overcome stale goods. On the occasion of something special, such as Easter and Christmas, too large a stock of appropriate goods should not be purchased. This only results in the held-over stock being unsalable when the holiday season is over. Better to buy sparingly of the holiday lines and add plenty of goods that can be sold after the festive season.

Display is another feature that all agree to be of paramount importance. Show the goods appealingly at at all times, and if their quality warrants it, sales are bound to be made.

MARMALADE ANALYSIS.

A recent bulletin issued on marmalade by the Inland Revenue Department shows that of 154 samples collected in various parts of Canada and analyzed, 138 were found to be genuine. That is, this number contained nothing but fruit and sugar.

Chief Analyst A. McGill points out in his report that while 14 samples contain glucose, yet glucose is a nutritious food. It is normally contained in every meal we eat, since in the ordinary processes of digestion cane sugar is changed into glucose.

"There can be no sufficient reason on the ground of wholesomeness," he states. "for objecting to commercial glucose as a component of jam or marmalade; and if, as is claimed by many manufacturers, the addition of glucose actually improves the quality of jams and marmalades, there can be no reason for withholding a statement of the fact of its presence.

"In the meantime," he adds, "it is necessary to describe jams which contain glucose without declaration of the fact, as adulterated under the Act, in that a cheaper substance than sugar has been in part substituted for sugar. This is merely technical adulteration, and does not mean that as an article of food, the jam or marmalade is less nutritious or wholesome."

The analyst contends that while glucose is a wholesome food, yet marmalade was known long before it as fruit and sugar, therefore marmalade containing it should be so described on the label, and must be considered as adulterated.

A review of the analysis shows that marmalades sold in Canada are of a high quality and can be recommended as wholesome food.

THE PORK IN THE PORK AND BEANS.

The "pork" part of pork and beans has been somewhat regarded as a joke by the consuming public. The retailer is often jollied about it by customers, as one was by the Vancouver man who told of having an exciting time when he offered a prize to the member of his family who could locate the remnant of the hog in the can of beans.

However, this canned article has just claim for containing the words "pork and beans" on the label. There is really pork in the can, and a considerable quantity too, although customers can hardly expect to get a pound of 18 cent bacon in a 10 cent can of beans.

To customers who have any comments to make in this regard, it would be well to explain that the amount originally placed in the can is larger than becomes apparent to the eye when opened. Under the heat to which the goods are subjected in the canning process, the major portion of the pork is melted. It mixes up with the beans and gives to it that flavor that has made this line such a popular one.

ARRANGING THE HOLIDAY SCHEDULE.

Soon straw hats will be making their appearance, and spring will be on the wane and summer approaching. The days will be hot, and thoughts of summer vacations will fill many minds. This is a state of affairs which may be expected, and the dealer will do well to make his preparations accordingly.

Those dealers who employ a number of clerks might well arrange in advance the date upon which the staff will go away for their holidays. The dealer will then know during just what seasons he will have a short staff. He will be able to prepare in good time, so that all may be in readiness when this short-handed season arrives.

Arranging the holiday schedule well in advance is of advantage to the employer in other ways. It prevents disputes among the clerks as to who shall go on a certain date. It enables the clerks to plan their trips; and instead of there being any discord among them there will be a feeling of expectancy. They will give more enthusiastic, more whole-hearted service.

In arranging the holiday schedule, Mr. Dealer, don't forget that hard-working, worried and faithful member of the staff, the proprietor. He needs rest and relaxation the same as the others, and should have it. Don't think that the store can't get along without him. The absolutely indispensable man has never yet been found.

STRENGTHENING THE MAGNET.

What is the use of a show window? Generally this is believed to be the sample of the store; the eye, not through which the store looked out, but through which the people look in. The window is an indication of what is to be seen inside. But it is more than this. It is one of the store's magnets—one of the forces which draw people to the store.

This phase of window dressing deserves some consideration. The retailer must present his goods in such an attractive way that they will arrest attention, and draw people to inspect them more closely. But there is an agency outside of the mere goods which some men have used to make their windows attractive. They give room to signs, not immediately relating to the store, but of genuine interest to a large part of the people whose custom they have or hope to gain. There are some who do not believe in this—and doubtless in certain places this would not be advisable—but properly regulated the system of putting forward signs, bearing information about things of interest to the general public, does a store good.

People notice these cards from across the street, and walk out of their way to see what is to be learned. After satisfying their curiosity, they look at the goods in the window. If the display is well arranged—and, of course, the notices must not be allowed to interfere with this—many people will see something which they want. They will perhaps buy, or will say something about the goods which will induce others to buy.

Let people once get to know that signs bearing news of general interest are to be seen in a certain store window, and many of them will go out of their way to pass that store. Much attention will be gained. The magnet will have been made more powerful, and the educational qualities of the window will not have been spoiled, if discrimination has been shown in the class of announcements which are given window room.

Merchants After Mail Order House Scalp

At Annual Meeting of Dominion Board R. M. A. Question Was Discussed and Resolution Passed—Inspection of Scales, and Credit Reporting Department Among the Other Problems —The Officers Elected.

Montreal, May 2—(Special)—The Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada held its annual meeting here on Monday and Tuesday of this week, when new officers were elected and several resolutions passed. The officers for the ensuing years are:

P. J. Cote, Quebec, Dominion President.

A. Weseloah, Berlin, Ont., 1st. Dom. Vice-Pres.

W. U. Bouvin, Montreal, 2nd. Dom. Vice-Pres.

J. A. Beaudry, Montreal, Dom. Treasurer.

E. M. Trowern, Dom. Secretary.

J. G. Watson, Dom. Auditor.

The Mail Order Problem.

One of the most important questions discussed was the mail order problem. This was gone into thoroughly from every standpoint, and the following resolutions passed:

"That inasmuch as it is important to the upbuilding of the cities, towns and villages of the various provinces of the Dominion, that as far as possible the persons who secure their living in these cities, towns and villages should do all in their power to assist in paying the running expenses of said municipalities, and in our opinion this can best be done by consumers spending their money in their own home towns; and inasmuch as all those retail merchants who occupy premises and carry stock and employ assistants are compelled to pay taxes on the most highly assessed property, and as it is considered only fair that those who peddle from door to door should pay a peddler's license, or those who are transient traders should pay a transient trader's license, then we consider that those who use the mail by issuing catalogues for the purpose of soliciting orders at retail and encouraging club buying and taking the money and trade out of any municipality which properly belongs to it, should also pay a license or pay the full cost of such services to the post office department, and not be allowed to use the post office staff and the machinery necessary to conduct such business for the purpose of destroying the trade of the largest class of taxpayers—the retail merchants.

"The position at present, as we find it, is that over twelve thousand post offices are conducted by postmasters in Canada, who are retail merchants, and these postmasters are paying their own rents and spending their time for a mere pittance of what it is worth to receive and hand out thousands of tons of catalogues for mail order houses, who are receiving the benefit at the expense of the Government and these retail merchant postmasters and the business men of the cities, towns and villages are losing the trade of the local municipalities, besides that which properly belongs to them.

"We therefore ask that a thorough investigation into this system be made by the executive officers of this board as early as possible."

Other resolutions adopted were:

"That in view of the fact that a further amendment is necessary to the Criminal Code, in order to enable the retail trade to consult with and make fair arrangements with the wholesale trade and with manufacturers, we again urge the necessity of securing the necessary amendment from the Dominion Government."

Scale Inspection.

"That this convention request the Dominion executive officers to present the petitions and press forward the legislation that has been commenced by us to have the fees for the inspection of weights and measures paid out of the Dominion treasury."

"That this board establish a credit reporting department to report to the members of the association the names and addresses of such persons who do not pay their accounts regularly."

E. Laniel, a Montreal grocer, took a number of the delegates for a 20 mile run around the city in his motor car. Needless to say this was thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated.

FOOD STANDARDS FOR EXTRACTS

If Artificial They Must be Labeled Such —Strength of Lemon and Vanilla Not Decided On.

Toronto, May 2—(Special).—On Wednesday of last week the pure food section of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, met at the National Club rooms to discuss with Chief Analyst A. McGill and Prof. Ellis, of the Inland Revenue Department, standards for extracts of lemon and vanilla. Jas. Lister, of the Litster Pure Food Co., chairman, presided, representatives being present from the following firms: MacLaren's, Ltd., Hamilton; Imperial Spice Co., Hamilton; Gorman, Eckert Co., London; Wampole & Co., Perth; Pure Gold Manufacturing Co., Toronto; White Swan Spices & Cereals, Toronto; J. Hungerford Smith, Toronto; J. J. McLaughlin, Toronto; Eby, Blain, Ltd., Toronto; Hutchinson & Peterson, Toronto; Robinson Mfg. Co., Toronto; Imperial Extract Co., Toronto; T. A. Lytle & Co., Toronto, and Stuart Bros., Niagara Falls. Mr. Litster read a letter from the Seeley Mfg. Co., of Windsor, regretting their inability to have a representative at the conference. Professor Rush, of the Canadian Ermaline Dye Co., Buffalo, with his color expert, Mr. Watkins, were also present.

The question of standards for vanilla and lemon extracts was gone into at length with Mr. McGill. The manufacturers considered that the standards, as originally drafted were not exactly what they should be, and Mr. McGill will make a re-draft of them when they will be submitted to the association again.

The matter of artificial extracts was discussed and as far as these are concerned, the law will now compel manufacturers to label them as "artificial." This was definitely decided upon.

The chief point in the lemon extract standards is the amount of citral, (which is the active principle of it) that will have to be used. So far as vanilla is concerned the principal part of setting a standard is to decide on the amount of vanilla to be used to every gallon of extract.

Members of the pure food section of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association are particularly pleased with the methods Professor McGill is using in determining the standards. He is making it a point to discuss the practical side of the manufacture of food stuffs with men in the business before making any definite decision as to what certain standards should be. This is certainly a commendable action on his part.

The first executive meeting of the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association will be held in Brantford at the Prince Edward, next Wednesday, May 8, at 8 o'clock p.m.

In last week's issue an item appeared to the effect that Geo. J. Emmerton, Ripley, Ont., was taking into partnership Milton Dierlamm, of Millbank. Mr. Emmerton writes that this is contrary to the fact, and that he has no intention of taking in a partner. We gladly make this correction of the item which we received and published in good faith.

A Decline in Refined Sugar Expected

In Sympathy With Continued Weak Tone to Raws—New York Lower and Canadian Expected to Follow—Concessions in Prunes Still Being Made at Some Centres—Seeded Raisins Lower in Montreal — Opening of Navigation Helps Trade.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Seeded Raisins—Lower.

Prunes—Easier.

Canned Tomatoes—Easier.

Montreal, May 2.—Business for spring trade is brisk. Dealers in all lines claim they are satisfied and expect navigation to add greatly to the trade.

Prunes are easier with decline of ½c this week.

Canned goods are moving well. Canned tomatoes are now at $1.65 per doz.

Brazil nuts have declined and may go lower.

SUGAR.—Situation as regards sugar is in practically same weak shape as it has been for some time. The expected decline has not put in an appearance yet, and dealers are still waiting. This has caused considerable drop off in demand, as dealers hesitate on buying with a decline in view.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Sugar—Decline expected.

Brazil Nuts—Easier.

Prunes—Concessions still being made.

Corn—Quoted at $1 doz.

Toronto, May 2.—Tone of wholesale grocery trade is somewhat healthier this week and month of May is conceded as making a good start. There is no doubt that as farmers are busy on the land, trade in country districts is somewhat hampered, but against this, it is argued that condition of country roads have improved, which tends to help trade.

Opening of navigation on the lakes has worked for greater activity in wholesale trade. No doubt considerable business was held back to secure lower lake rates and, as navigation has been unusually late in opening this spring, trade has been held back considerably.

Sugar is quiet and dull, refined quoted at $5.45 per cwt. in Toronto, as compared with $4.70 a year ago. Market continues weak under easy raw market and a decline in refined is looked for.

There have been some lower prices quoted at odd times on brooms by some manufacturers, but local dealers state that there is nothing in general situation of good broom corn to warrant any easiness. There was a slight downward fluctuation in broom corn around first of year, which some Canadian manufacturers got in on, and are thus able to offer slight recessions on certain grades. "Some Quebec manufacturers have been quoting us some very attractive figures on low grade brooms," said one wholesaler, "but the manufacturer we have been buying from says he must maintain his prices."

A traveler for one firm this week was offering brooms at $3 which a week previous had been quoted at $3.75.

SUGAR.—Same weak tone continues in sugar market and a decline in Canadian refined is anticipated. Raws have continued easy. New York has adjusted itself to easier conditions, and it is expected that Canadian market will follow. Cuba crop reports have so constantly improved during past few weeks by dry favorable weather and full number of centrals at work, that a very full crop, up to original first estimates, appears now well settled. Thus, the easier trend of the market.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.—Normal seasonable trade is in evidence in syrups and molasses. There is considerable business in new make maple syrup being done while other varieties appear to be receiving their share of attention.

Corn still maintains a strong front and corn products in sympathy hold a steady to firm position.

There is no particular change in general molasses outlook. Attitude of Barbados producers with regard to their expectations of future are unchanged.

DRIED FRUITS.—There is by no means any marked activity in dried fruits, but here and there some improvement in demand is reported by jobbers. Some retailers who have had supplies from last fall's purchases are running low and coming into the market, but buying is mostly for immediate requirements.

Tone of spot dried fruits in California continues easy. Locally concessions below quotations on certain sizes of prunes are reported, but some improvement is noted in demand by some wholesalers, removing somewhat feeling of nervousness. Bosnia prunes are quoted from 7¾ to 9 cents.

Evaps. are fairly steady. Seeded raisins are slightly easier. Figs and dates point the opposite way.

TEA.—Trade from wholesaler to retailer continues on a normal scale Distributors are buying mostly for immediate requirements, purchasing conservatively until some definite news is received regarding the new crop. Certain amount of interest is being directed towards opening of new crop from Japan.

It was just one year ago that Japan issued its edict prohibiting the coloring of tea. There was considerable conjecture at the time as to what effect this would have on sale of Japan tea. Dealers in this variety say that they do not see that year has brought forward anything serious in this regard. Japan tea growers have been carrying on an advertising campaign to increase the popularity of their teas and one of the arguments used was that they are not artifically colored.

COFFEE.—In regard to coffee situation, there is practically nothing new in local market, tone of steadiness still continuing.

The key to the Brazil coffee position is the crop now maturing and which on July 1 will begin its outturn. Naturally at this stage of the crop, there are various estimates, but the fact that all indications in Brazil have an upward tendency shows the belief on part of those close at hand, that next crop will not be large, otherwise with receipts of present crop keeping at such good level, prices would naturally tend downward.

SPICES.—Spices have shared in the greater activity by reason of opening of navigation and improvement in conditions of country roads. There are no particular lines in special demand at this season, trade being well divided over whole list. While there are some slight tendencies in primary markets of some lines, there is nothing that has any important bearing on spot goods.

NUTS.—Trade cannot be described as active. Naturally at this season, nuts in shell do not come in for any great attention. Advent of push carts and opening of baseball parks will naturally mean an increased consumption of peanuts. Further shipments of Brazil nuts are on the way, prices tend downward and are on a much more reasonable level than for past couple of years. Late reports indicate that the earlier estimates of a big crop of Brazil nuts were founded on fact.

Canned Goods.

TORONTO. — Most local jobbers do not appear to be worrying about being able to clear decks of canned goods before new pack puts in an appearance, but there are some dealers who are a little nervous on certain lines. There is some difference of opinion as to just how demand compares with other years, although it is conceded that high prices naturally tend to curtail consumption.

In fruits, situation seems steady and quotations of different firms fairly even. This cannot be said of vegetables, quotations of various firms varying somewhat. Tomatoes are quoted from $1.55 to $1.70 for 3's. Corn ranges at $1 by most firms, with some included slightly higher. Peas have been at $1.30 and $1.35, but some firms are shading prices 5 cents per dozen. Some Montreal houses, said to be pretty well stocked have been cutting prices on peas. Beans are not plentiful and bring $1.20 to $1.25 per dozen.

There is a normal movement of canned fruits. Pumpkin is in good demand for pie filling. Jams and marmalades are finding a good demand. Lobsters and salmon are steady.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, May 2.—Business is reported as most satisfactory, demand for all staple lines being excellent and there is a first rate demand for specialties.

With extraordinary building activity going on in city, a first rate season's business seems assured and with 75 per cent. of wheat crop sown and probable completion of this important work shortly, prospects generally in West could hardly be more favorable.

Another feature that must have a satisfactory influence on western trade is general advance in grain prices which have gone up on average about 5 cents per bushel all round during month. As there is yet a large amount of grain to be marketed, this increase will greatly add to the spending power of West and should materially assist in the matter of collections which during past month have been somewhat disappointing.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, May 2.—Local market during the last week has been fairly active, and there have been some changes of interest in quotations. The orders received by wholesale houses indicate a prosperous spring trade, but in some commodities there will be a falling off owing to the unusually high prices prevailing. Sugar market is reported in weak condition, decidedly uncertain, but with a downward tendency at present. Raw market reacted during the week, and became stronger, but it weakened in a day or so, and is down now. Molasses took a lower step this week as well, but hardly had this taken place before it advanced again and is now reported firm.

Beans and lard still maintain their record prices. Pork is also high, both domestic mess and American clear having advanced this week.

Seed is remarkably scarce, and owing to the fact that exceptionally high prices are being asked, demand is not great.

In country market, cheese is a little easier, but still quite high. Eggs remain about the same, a little firmer if anything, while butter still maintains its position of steadiness and scarcity, with little possibility of change. There is practically no poultry on hand, but meats are in fair supply. Potatoes are unchanged, selling still at from $2.25 to $2.50.

CURRENT NEWS OF THE WEEK

Business Changes and Other Movements in Various Provinces.

Western Canada.

A Retail Merchants Association has been organized in Coquitlam, B. C. The object of the organization is to decide upon such matters as closing hours, the employment of clerks and other such matters affecting their business. A. R. Millard was elected president, and Ben Seaborne, secretary.

The Mooney Biscuit & Candy Co., Stratford, Ont., and Winnipeg, Man., have purchased the biscuit factory of the H. Smith Biscuit Co., Vancouver, B. C. The price is reported to be in the neighborhood of $300,000. W. C. Mooney, vice-president of the company, who has been manager of the Winnipeg factory, is now in Vancouver, and will have charge of the reorganization work.

Jean Bonnet, Bordeaux, France, arrived in Canada last month in the interests of H. Desegaulx & Co. Last week Mr. Bonnet was in Winnipeg, and spoke interestingly of his opinion of Canadian trade in general. He states that outside countries are becoming more and more interested in Canadian trade, and he was pleased to note the great development in Canada. Mr. Bonnet is establishing agencies in various parts of Canada for his principals.

Quebec and Maritime Provinces.

P. Donovan, general merchant, Canterbury Station, N. B., succeeded by Wm. Donovan.

C. H. Dougall, Limited, of Montreal, has been incorporated at $25,000.

Letters patent have been issued incorporating the N. K. Fairbank Co., Limited, with a capital stock of $500,000. Head office is in Montreal, and incorporators are Cecil G. MacKinnon, T. B. Gould, T. J. Coonan, K. Archibald and H. B. Mulvena. Lard, soap, soap powders and cotton seed oil are some of their products.

Ontario.

Lindner & Benner, jam and preserve manufacturers, 1000 Gerrard Street East, Toronto, are moving into new premises at corner of Dundas and Arthur Streets.

C. G. Armstrong, general merchant, Orono, Ont., recently underwent an operation at the General Hospital, Toronto. He is recovering rapidly.

J. H. Lanford, grocer, London, Ont., has sold to Mrs. Henry Sampson.

DEALER'S BUSINESS STATEMENT.

estimated properly. Hence, you must cut down that possibility of loss this year.

Raise the Gross Margin.

Fifth: Try hard to increase your average gross margin. At present you are averaging only about 18 1-4 per cent. It should be close to 20 per cent. If you are careful to push profitable goods this year and avoid too many "bargain offerings" in your advertising, you may succeed in widening that margin to 19 per cent. or better. Such an addition would give you extra net earnings of about $140 on your present business. It is the fractions of pennies that count. Work more consistently on high grade goods. Talk and think quality and value as opposed to price. In naming prices, quote high figures first and work downwards; do not begin at the bottom and work upwards. You will find that good psychology in making sales.

* * * * * *

Note that I recommend the accumulation of a surplus, not the employment of additional capital. Every dollar you add to your capital increases you interest charge. Do not load up with more expense of this kind until you have absolute need of it for expansion.

Give Your Money a Chance.

Note, in passing, that $2,000 of 5 per cent. bonds will not only act as a sheet-anchor at all times, but will earn your business $100 interest every year. It is astonishing how money grows if you will give it some show.

I hope to hear from you further—any time on any subject related to these business problems. Also, if you see things differently from the way I have stated them, let me have your views. In the multitude of Counsel there is Safety.

Slow Freight Causes Trouble in Flour

During Past Season—Mills Handicapped by Lack of Raw Material—Flour Exports Have Been Hampered — Navigation Opens on Great Lakes—First Ocean Boat Leaves Montreal May 4— Flour is Steady—No Recession in Millfeeds Yet.

The week has been marked by the inauguration of spring flour and grain shipping season on the lake routes. It has by no means opened too soon being considerably later than is usual in other years, by reason of heavy ice on lakes which was slow in disappearing. There has been congestion on railways for some time and millers have experienced considerable difficulty in securing sufficient supplies of raw material and in getting their flour to Eastern points. For this reason and the fact that elevators on east side of lake are well cleared of stocks of grain, opening of navigation on lakes will be welcomed by dealers. The first ocean boat leaves Montreal on May 4.

That slow and congested freight situation has caused a great deal of trouble during past winter is to use the words of one man, "no dream." Mills have been handicapped by lack of raw material while flour exporters have not been able to get flour to coast shipping points. Many instances are cited to show the marked slowness. One exporter who had flour sent from a Saskatchewan point on Feb. 16, reports that it was not loaded on the steamer until April 20. This may be somewhat of an extreme case but there is another instance of it taking from March 7 to April 27 to cover the distance.

However, the opening of navigation will overcome this to some extent, although lake boats do not appear to be anxious to book shipments of flour as there is plenty of grain and it is much more easily handled. With regard to what effect on prices, opening of navigation will have, dealers say it will not be great. A larger percentage of goods coming forward has been sold ahead for some little time. No doubt it will have some bearing however.

Flour still holds a steady position as indicated last week. Good milling wheat continues strong. Recession in mill feed, which was stated might be a factor in firming flour has not materialized because in absence of appearance of grass, demand for mill feed has continued on a fair scale.

Spring sowing operations in Canadian West are in full swing and indeed are nearing completion. In winter wheat sections of Canada, grain has come through winter in fair condition.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR. — Nothing new has taken place in market this week. Prices hold steady under similar conditions in raw material. Retail demand is good.

TORONTO.

FLOUR. — Manitoba flour occupies about same position as week ago, tone of market continuing steady in sympathy with similar trend to raw material prices. Trade is said to be fair.

Business is quiet in winter wheat flour. Situation seems to be quiet right down the line. Farmers are busy in the fields and are not disposed to give much attention to delivery of grain. Wheat is therefore firm and millers continue steady in their ideas on flour but business is low at present prices. As one dealer said in regard to straight roller: "We are asking $3.15 to $3.20 but it is hard to get buyers at that price." A report from Ottawa that there is still 4,000,000 bushels of wheat in Ontario farmers hands is somewhat of a bearish feature and indicates that farmers have been holding on to their grain. This is a considerable amount of wheat to be held so near to harvest time.

WATCHING FOOD IN WINNIPEG.

A falling off is noted in amount of unsound food condemned and destroyed by Winnipeg health department. In March, the total was barely over eight tons, of which fresh fruit was the largest item—6,310 pounds—with vegetables a close second—6,280 pounds. Over 1,400 pounds of fresh fish also found the way to the incinerator.

The Handling of Confectionery Properly

Opinions of Two Dealers on How This Department Should be Looked After—One Does Business in Large and Other in Small Centre—Attention Called to Overweight—The Value of the Silent Salesman for Display Purposes.

OVERWEIGHT THE CAUSE OF LOSSES

By Henry Slasor, Winnipeg, Man.

The handling of the confectionery end of the grocery business, I believe, is unsatisfactory to many merchants. Personally, I have sometimes in the past felt like leaving confectionery out of my store altogether, but am now absolutely convinced of its necessity. I know of other merchants who have discarded it only to start in again and handle it.

Before I give you my ideas as to the handling of this line of goods I would like to give you my opinion why it is generally so unsatisfactory. First of all many of us weigh 2 ozs. of candy on scales that are not suitable; for instance scales of 30 to 100 lbs. capacity, and if we are particular in weighing exactly we are ridiculed by the purchaser and considered to be splitting raisins.

Proper Scale Required.

To handle this line the first thing absolutely necessary is therefore a proper scale of small capacity, and to always use the computing chart. Why it was unsatisfactory in my own business was that we are not careful enough in this particular. Another reason was that when customers were paying their accounts we generally gave them some little candy present which, while perhaps money well spent, yet, nevertheless was a drag on this end of our business and kept this one department on a non-profitable basis.

Make It Separate Department.

I am going into this line and believing it ought to be a profitable one will begin as follows:—Separate it from my grocery counter, and place a young woman in charge of it. I am installing a good silent salesman, a proper candy scale, and a real good line of chocolates and candies. By separating it from my grocery counter it does away with handing out so much gratis and also ensures that what are disposed of are weighed carefully and sold at a good profit.

And it also has not the tendency to make a customer feel when we give her five cents worth of forty cents a pound chocolates, that we are stingy and mean, as it appears when selling on the grocery side with the large scale.

Guard Against Waste.

One other advice I would like to give, and that is, do not allow any "picking" by your employes. This I know is done by a great many. Let every employe understand that these goods cost money and you absolutely refuse to tolerate any employe who is addicted to this habit of eating your goods.

I am glad The Grocer is taking this matter up and believe that many merchants will be benefited as the outcome by having their confectionery line run on a practical and profitable business basis.

THE METHODS OF A SMALL TOWN DEALER

By Chas. S. Fisher, Iroquois, Ont.

In regard to the sale of confectionery in grocery stores, it is my opinion that this is where it belongs. This is true in not only the ordinary lines of cheaper varieties, candies carried by most grocers, but also the very best grades of chocolates.

I quite agree with some other writers that it is time the grocers wakened up to get the trade that rightly belongs to them.

A Staple Line.

While candy may be considered by a great many as a luxury any grocer is quite justified in calling it a food because if he handles it in the right way, he must plainly see that confectionery has become one of his most staple lines and one that a great many of his customers will not get along without. What staple article does the grocer find on his shelves what will turn over his money as quickly with a profit of from thirty to fifty per cent as confectionery will do if properly attended to?

Now as to the handling of it. I live in a small town of about eight hundred, am in partnership in a grocery store, and we handle china, stationery, and fancy goods as side lines.

Uses Silent Salesman.

We have one silent salesman show case for the display of our best chocolates in packages and bulk. These we buy from three of the best factories who give us the controlling agency for our town. We find it pays better to buy oftener and in smaller quantities and take greater care of the stock on hand to insure the freshness of each package that goes out.

For the Christmas trade we always have a nice assortment of fancy packages but still not too large a stock of these as we find every year that here more and more of the plain white boxes are being sold and people are not wanting to buy those fancy packages after the holidays are over for fear of them not being fresh.

A small window display and a little fixing up of the show case now and again to keep it looking attractive, will work wonders.

For our cheaper candies we have a ten-foot show case with trays neatly divided off which when properly filled sets a tempting appearance. These goods are turned over a little more quickly than the others and are generally handled on a little closer margin.

Fill the Children's Wants.

The sale of gross goods may seem a little tiresome sometimes but one must not grumble but give just the same attention to the child with the penny as any other customer, for who knows this child may some day be a purchaser of the most expensive lines; and children generally remember where they get the best goods as well as service.

To increase the sale I find that a special sale of some one line on Saturdays helps a great deal. One time I selected a good cream mixture that I bought in quantities as low as 7½ cents per lb.—of course that was when sugar was cheaper than it is to-day.

IRISH POTATO IMPORTATIONS.

St. John, N.B., Dealer Says Quantity Has Not Been So Great for 40 Years.

"I have been in business for a long period of years," said a St. John, N.B., dealer recently, "but for nearly forty years back I cannot remember of there having been such large receipts of Irish potatoes as has been the case this season. It is most unusual, and it will probably be another long period before they are again imported in such large quantities. When I remember of their first being shipped here, nearly forty years since, they spoiled for the most part on the voyage from the Old Country, and when they were landed in St. John they were fit for little else than for cattle feeding, though some of them were used in seeding.

"The importing of these potatoes has lowered the price of the local stock, and it is a distinct surprise to note than with the remarkably large crop harvested in New Brunswick this year that months before the new 'spuds' are seen on the market we should be compelled to import from Ireland. If the crop in Ireland had not been good this year, Canadian people would have had to pay much higher prices than have been asked, though $3 and even $2.75 which prevailed for a time are decidedly high for St. John and other parts of New Brunswick."

Car Load Lots of Strawberries Arrive

First Big Lots for This Year—They Come From Carolina — Florida Tomatoes Still Hold Steady — West Coast Supplies Ready by Middle of Month —Dealers Loaded With Small Size Oranges on Some Markets — Grapefruit Firm, While Pines Point Downward.

Strawberries are coming forward to Canadian markets in larger quantities, the first carload lots having arrived on the larger markets this week. The source of supply is gradually moving farther northward. It was Florida which gave us our first taste of the 1912 berry, but now we are getting shipments from South and North Carolina. Of course, the farther north they can be procured, the shorter distance they have to be transported to distributing centres, while northern berries are of a somewhat firmer and better keeping quality. This week's shipments were of good quality, and have been taken up well by the trade.

Florida tomatoes are moving out well, but prices show no recession from their steady position. East coast is winding up just now, while west will not be ready to ship until around middle of month. Florida celery is pretty well to an end, but there are quantities held in storage at most centres, and will still be available at steady to firm figures. Florida also produces a later green top variety, which is about ready to ship, but the yield is not large.

In fruits, bananas, with warmer weather and advent of fruit stalls and push carts, are showing a larger consumption. On some markets dealers appear to be loaded up with small sizes of oranges, as there is a tendency in California navels to run to small sizes. Grapefruit is not in large supply, and market is steady to firm. Pineapples are in larger supply, and tendency of market is downward.

The Dominion Government has put into force an order prohibiting importation of all fruit from the Hawaiian Islands, owing to ravages of the Mediterranean fly. The insect attacks northern, as well as southern fruit, and it is feared that if it enters Canada, it may seriously affect the industry. The United States is also considering a similar move. Canada does not import much fruit from Hawaii, so that it will not have any serious bearing on trade.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—There is an active market in green fruits for week, although values remain unchanged. Spring demand is heavy at present, but easy shipments and favorable weather allow business to run smoothly. The first carload of strawberries was received Monday, and meeting with active demand at previous quotations.

GREEN FRUITS.—Demand for fruit is of a fair nature, although unfavorable weather experienced at intervals hampers it to some extent. Oranges move fairly well, bananas are going out better, pines are being given more attention, while strawberries are coming in larger quantities. End of this week will see the first carload shipment of strawberries to this market. Up to this time they have come in small quantities. South Carolina is the source of this carload lot.

Pineapples, as indicated last week, have continued easy, and are now offered at $3.50 to $4 per case. Grapefruit is not in large supply, and is firmer, Cuban ranging from $6 to $6.25 per case.

VEGETABLES.—There is quite an extensive array of vegetables that, if displayed properly, should appeal to customers, being offered now.

Tomatoes hold at a steady figure. Asparagus is just slightly easier, as are also new radish and green onions in hampers. There is a fair movement of Florida celery at unchanged prices.

It has been pointed out before that with later arrivals, Egyptian onions would be easier. They are down to $3.75 per bag of 110 pounds. Some dealers quote turnips easier. Carrots, beets and parsnips are, however, conspicuous by reason of their high price.

Business in new potatoes is not extensive at present, only small shipments being handled as yet. Old potatoes hold fairly steady, although outside quotations are being shaded somewhat by some firms. Some dealers are pushing certain varieties of potatoes for seed purposes.

Another Oyster Season Comes to a Close

After What Dealers Consider Fairly Satisfactory Season—New Season Opens On Sept. 1—Trade Still Waiting for Larger Supplies of Fresh Fish —Some Improvement in Offerings of Ocean Fish.

Fish business is still hampered by same causes as pointed out before. Trade is waiting for lake and ocean to yield up a larger array of fresh varieties of the finny tribe than are now adorning the markets. There is a somewhat larger supply of ocean fish being offered, however.

There is a little business being transacted in frozen varieties, but at this time of year it is usual for considerable trade to be in force in fresh stock. This, however, is an impossible thing this year, mostly due to the work of old Father Winter who put such a substantial coating of ice upon our inland waters that fishermen are much later than usual in getting under way.

Another chapter in oyster history has been completed, the end of April marking the completion of another year. For the next four months bulk oysters will have little of interest to the retail dealer. September 1, or a few days before, is opening of new season.

Reviewing past season, oystermen look upon it with a fair degree of satisfaction. There were undoubtedly bad spots which detracted from season as a whole. For some time, trade in this line has been at a low ebb. Another bad feature was that winter was rather tardy in setting in, and those dealers who do not handle oysters until the weather itself provides a refrigerator were rather late in getting under way. When winter did commence in earnest, temperature was certainly low, but this is not very conducive to handling oysters either. The moderate temperature is the more desirable.

However, in spite of these slight drawbacks, trade on whole shows a favorable comparison with other years, although it was pointed out by one wholesaler that he was rather doubtful whether consumption per capita was measuring up to standard.

Advices from Newfoundland state the winter fishery on Southwest Coast was good with heavy purchases of salt bulk and green fish by United States vessels, thus reducing quantity for export.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—A good seasonable trade continues in fish. The week has been particularly busy, with many new varieties featuring the market. Fresh carloads of halibut arrived this week; but offered no easing off in price. Fancy shad, large shad, herring, barbotte (dressed bullheads) and salt eels are the new arrivals. An advance, owing to local scarcity, has been reported for pike and fancy haddies.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—There is a decided lack of new features of interest to report. Trade is just in about same position as a week ago. Trade is drifting along on the quiet side awaiting for the supplies of fresh fish that will give added life to business.

There is still some trade in frozen varieties, but the list is pretty closely cleaned up, while smoked kinds are well reduced. Prices show practically no alteration.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.—The first floating shad hatchery in Canada is being built in St. John for use on St. John river. Alex. Finlayson, of the Fisheries Department, Ottawa, was in the city this week on an inspection trip, and in speaking of the hatchery said it would be located on the St. John river where it could be used to the best advantage. If enough parent fish could be procured, he said, he had no doubt as to the practicability of the hatchery, and though it is the first of its kind to be built in Canada, another is now planned for Middleton, N.S., where salmon trout and shad will be produced.

Daily labor, says a philosopher, should not be called or looked upon as work. It should be regarded as the means of development, prolonging life —a recreation.

Produce & Provisions

Butter Still on the Downward Path

Prices Continue to Ease as Make Increases—Dealers Looking for Still Further Concessions—Eggs Continue to Hold High Position—Production Increasing but Demand is Good—New Cheese Points Downward—Pork Products Firm.

There is one article in which the consumer should be less critical of the price asked by the grocer, and that is butter. Reduction in price of this commodity during past few weeks has been of a substantial nature and values are still on the down grade. We hear of some centres where values are holding steady, for instance, St. John, N.B., but ultimately there must come a weakening for general trend is decidedly downward. Cowansville, Que., which we have been taking as a gauge still continues easy. On April 6, price was 35½ cents; On April 13, 31⅝; on April 20, 28 cents, while on Saturday last it was easy at 26 cents. Thus is shown the general trend.

Wholesalers are looking for further concessions in price, for supply is gradually getting a lead on demand. Supplies from country points are being shipped to larger centres mostly by express as under present conditions, time counts. As production increases it will be natural for prices to go downward until they reach a level which will allow of any surplus supplies being worked off.

Wholesalers say that eggs should be lower. Indeed, many of them said this some three weeks or more ago, but still prices hold up strong. There has been some wavering at a few country points, but steadiness prevails at most larger centres.

While receipts are increasing, demand is also improving and counteracting production somewhat. Dealers at larger centres look at present prices as too high for storage purposes, but apparently some stock is being disposed of this way.

Production of new cheese is assuming more substantial proportions, and values point downward for this reason. The season is said to be two weeks late and it will be well into May before we see grass cheese. English buyers are taking some new cheese but at declining prices. Advices from London state that a considerable quantity of New Zealand cheese is on way to that market, which has created an easier feeling in England, where an early season is expected.

Live hogs continue to come forward tardily and prices hold firm. In sympathy with firm raw material and better demand experienced since opening of spring, provisions and lard hold a firm position, with increased prices being asked at some centres.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—Lard has advanced this week ¼ cent for pure and ½ cent for compound, owing to increased demand and limited stocks. Pork is receiving good call and will most likely advance before long.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS.—Live hogs have continued steady, showing net advance of 10 cents during week under only moderate receipts. Dressed hogs have responded further to late upward movement of porkers on the hoof.

While pork products have been moving upward for some time, they have hardly kept pace with raw material values and under better demand which present season is bringing forth, further advances are noted this week in several lines. Breakfast bacon and cooked hams are 1 cent higher, smoked hams are worth ½ cent more and lard values have expanded another ¼ cent. Trade is of a fair character and indications point to steadiness.

BUTTER.—Following indications of last week, tone of butter market has continued easy and declines ranging around three to four cents have taken place during week in sympathy with larger receipts of new made goods. Production of both creamery and dairy continues on increasing scale and wholesalers are looking for prices to continue movement already commenced. In face of declining market, demand is of hand-to-mouth character.

EGGS.—Feature of egg market is tenacity with which prices stick at the high figure. Past week has witnessed no downward tendency in quotations, level being well maintained. It may be that season is backward, but there are apparently some other factors in the case. One dealer explained that different firms with connections throughout the country were making strong bids for supplies in order to establish business connections early in the season. Production is on increase, and although there is an appreciable consumption at present, it seems as if supplies are being put away, although many local dealers declare they would not risk it at present prices.

CHEESE.—New cheese is now being manufactured in considerable quantities and naturally, with production increasing, tendency is downward.

Value of a Side Counter for Provisions

Dealers Who Find This Separate Department Profitable — Cleanliness Shown by Marble Top on Counter—Obtain a Fair Profit—Beware of the Summer Fly — Get Picnic and Social Trade for Cooked Ham.

If it is worth while stocking provisions at all, it is worth while to specialize on them to some extent at least. Providing the store is large enough, a side counter with a clean top will, if properly run, pay for itself in a short time.

"We have a side provision counter," writes an Otawa dealer, "which means a good deal of extra money for us. The top is made of marble on which is always displayed appetising cooked ham, breakfast and side bacon, so that every one who enters the store gets a good look at it. Our sales have recently begun to pick up gradually since the warm weather set in, and we are going to make a bigger bid than ever for business this year."

This is a time when all dealers can increase cooked ham and bacon sales. But some special attention is necessary.

A Special Counter.

Bruce & Sanderson, Parliament St., Toronto, grocers, have a short side provision counter opposite the front door. The eyes of every person who enters naturally must fall first on this with its display of ham, bacon and eggs. It has a marble top, which denotes cleanliness, and always has its display of cooked ham. Now that housewives are finding it advantageous to prepare quick meals—the majority of them are in the midst of house-cleaning—this line will sell from being seen.

Behind the counter in Bruce & Sanderson's store is a large refrigerator with display front for butter, while the shelves in that section of the store are laden with canned vegetables, fish, pork and beans, etc.—all appropriate goods for the provision department.

Watch the Profit End.

With the existing prices on pork products, dealers should be careful to get their profits. When wholesale prices advance, they sometimes feel it will be disastrous to their trade to make a corresponding increase to customers. Yet it would seem advisable to make a fair profit over cost and expense of doing business, even at the sacrifice of a few sales.

Of course, if it means the loss of custom, a different situation arises.

Get Rid of the First Flies.

Now that Spring is here and summer coming, attention should be given to protect meats from flies. Nothing can do any department more harm than a swarm of flies hovering about foodstuffs. They repel trade. Probably some years ago not so much thought was given to them, but recently since Medical Health Officers have been spreading broadcast the statements of disease germs being carried about by flies, the women pay more attention to cleanliness in this regard. Every fly in the store should be gone after as soon as observed, and destroyed. Delay means much more difficult work later on.

Ham for the Picnic Sandwich.

With the warm weather of late May and summer, cooked ham will sell well for the picnic and church social sandwich. By attracting the attention of possible buyers by show cards, advertising, etc., a good business can be done in this respect.

SEEING THE SIGHTS.

An observant person sees some funny sights in a grocery store.

He can see "the cod fish," "the brussels sprout," "the tapioca flake."

He may also see "the mince meat," "the tea leave," "the ginger snap," "the stove polish," "the sugar scoop," "the yeast cake," "the corn starch," "the honey comb," "the cinamon bark."

And he will observe that the tea is a great "mixer," the coffee gets "roasted" all the time, the cucumber is usually in a pickle, and the sardines are "soused."

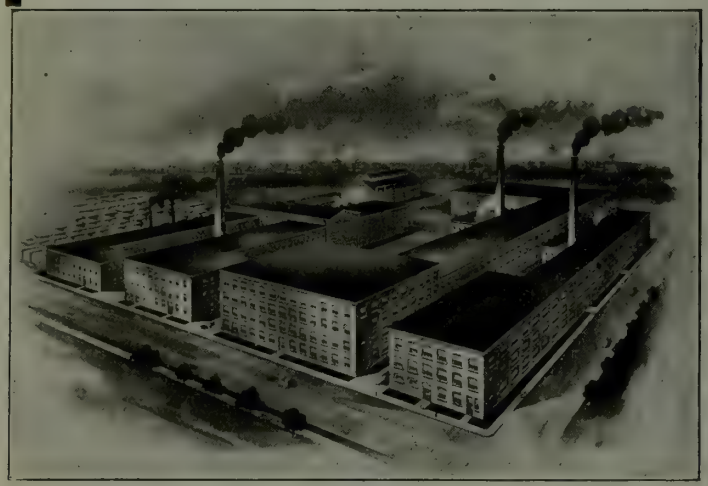
PUT AN END TO ACCOUNTING TROUBLES

The

Ullman Account Register

IS THE SAFEST, SIMPLEST, QUICKEST, SUREST TO CHARGE, AND MOST SATISFACTORY, OF ANY SYSTEM ON THE MARKET. IT SATISFIES THE CUSTOMER AS WELL AS THE MERCHANT.

With this system your accounts are always made out in detail as well as in full to date, and your customer is sure to receive a bill of goods purchased. It shows both the merchant and customer the amount of account to date each time a purchase is made.



The customer knows every time he makes a purchase how much he owes, and he naturally tries to keep his account down. This insures quicker collections for the merchant. The only real step to stop the worry and work of incessant night bookwork is THE ULLMAN ACCOUNT REGISTER.

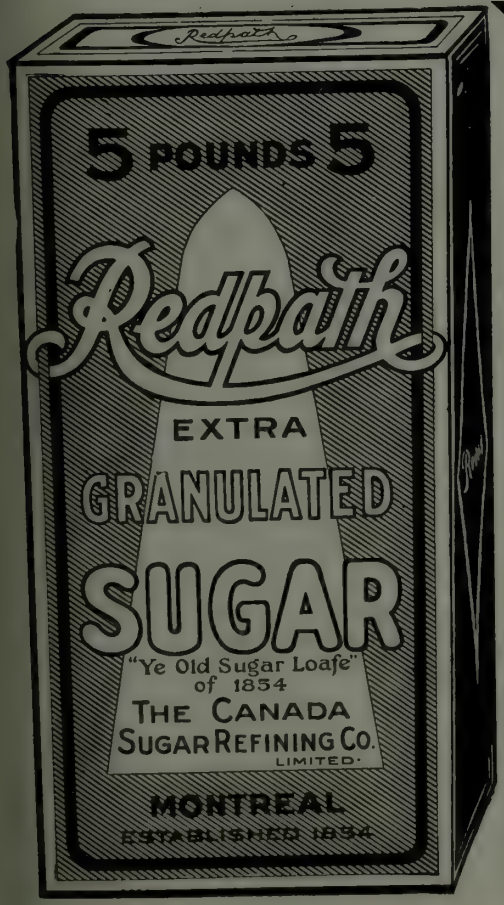
A fifty-year old favorite—Quality counts



When a customer hesitates because

Redpath

Extra Granulated Sugar
In this New 5-Pound Package

is not the cheapest sugar she can buy, point out that, besides the greater cleanliness and convenience of the carton, there is a wide difference in quality.

Ask her to take home a sample of REDPATH Sugar and examine it alongside the cheaper sugar she has been using. The crystal whiteness of REDPATH Extra Granulated, in contrast with the other, is the plainest kind of proof of its superiority, which more than makes up for the difference in price.

In the new 5-Pound Sealed Carton you have certainly "Canada's Finest Sugar at its Best." Push it—it will make you friends.

Auto Delivery Curtails Delivery Expenses

Service is one of the main features which determines a merchant's patronage, with delivery the most important part. Merchants are more and more beginning to realize the many points in favor of automobile delivery, because it brings them more business and because it is cheaper than any other method.

The Menard Commercial Car

has been designed to meet the demand, and is a quiet car of great reliability, reasonable speed, with a large reserve of power and a frame of strength and size capable of carrying a load of considerable bulk and up to 1500 lbs. weight.

The design of tires used on the Menard Commercial Cars reduces the cost of maintaining tires to a nominal sum. There are many other features of the Menard that will impress it upon merchants for its superiority above all others.

Facts That Speak For Themselves

LAWRASON'S SNOWFLAKE AMMONIA

London, March 13, '12

To Messrs. S. F. Lawrason & Co.
City.

Dear Sirs,—

At a meeting of the London Retail Grocers' Association last evening, a resolution was passed in which the Association expressed its appreciation of your selling policy; keeping your goods out of the cut-rate stores and the liberal advertising you are doing to our mutual benefit, and it was further resolved that each member should push the sale of your goods as much as possible.

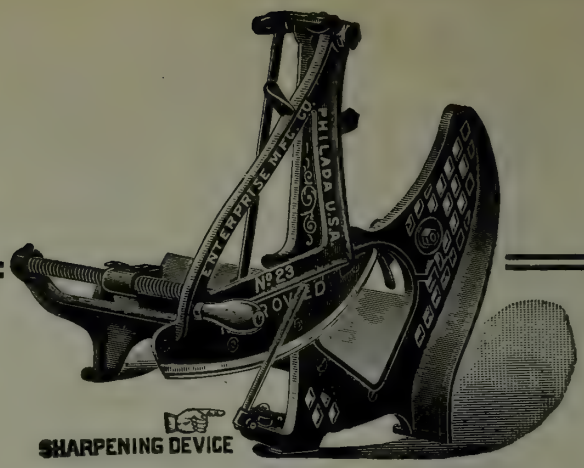
Yours truly,
Jas. MacKenzie
Secretary.

Jno. Diprose,
President

THE GIANT FIVE CENT PACKAGE

SPRING CLEANING TIP:—All wood-work should be thoroughly washed with Lawrason's Snowflake Ammonia before painting or varnishing, to remove grease and dust. The paint or varnish will spread easily and dry quicker, also take one half less to do the work.

S. F. LAWRASON & CO., - LONDON, ONT.



A Good Beef Shaver is an Easy Money Maker

Enterprise Beef Shavers are made on the principle that gives you years of satisfactory service. Every part is made of good material and with the fine accuracy of machining that means absolute precision in operation.

ENTERPRISE

are made in two styles. No. 23—the Enterprise Smoked Beef Shaver, with Self-Sharpening device—does the work without waste. The knife is suspended pendulum-like and each stroke cuts a slice cleanly and quickly. Regulated automatically to cut from tissue thickness up to an eighth of an inch.

Enterprise Rotary Smoked Beef Shaver with Self-Sharpening Device achieves the very highest point in the manufacture of this type of machine. The feed is easily regulated and cannot shift while in use. Slices are absolutely uniform always, the machine being capable of cutting from tissue thickness to a quarter of an inch. The sliced beef falls into a drawer which holds about two pounds.

Either of these machines in your store will give you satisfaction for years and will rapidly earn its cost. As all parts are interchangeable, you can make it as good as new ten years from now.

Like all Enterprise articles—Cherry Stoners, Raisin Seeders, Meat and Food Choppers, Sad Irons—they are made on honor to last.

Just write to-day for our complete catalogue has a reputation for absolute purity and superior quality that makes it easy to sell. Little known brands take time and talk to make a sale, and the busy merchant has no time for either. He prefers the Soap that people buy without urging---and so he sticks to SURPRISE.

THE ST. CROIX SOAP MFG. CO.

Factory at ST. STEPHEN, N.B.

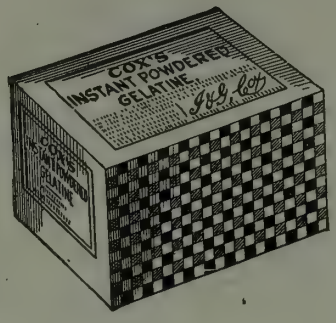
Branches: MONTREAL TORONTO WINNIPEG VANCOUVER WEST INDIES

THE satisfied customer assures a PERMANENT customer, yet without purity satisfaction of the lasting sort is not possible---nor probable. Quality goods command regular trade. Profits from the following articles are business builders.

Cox's GELATINE

(It Never Varies)

Its high quality never varies from that standard of perfection reached by the makers so many years ago. Made by particular people for particular people. Made on the honor of a name that has been before the public for a century of endeavor to produce the BEST.



Sardines from Norway

Packed in perfectly pure Olive Oil by Olsen & Kleppe at Stavanger, Norway, with wondrous care and skill in the selection. Their special leading brands "Albatross" (small fish) and "Ambrosia" (a trifle larger) command ready and large sales to the most fastidious people.

Bramwell's Epsom Salts

Show a noteworthy absence of moisture from top to bottom of package — are absolutely free from foreign substances. They never have been and never will be classed with ordinary "salts" of commerce. They are in a class by themselves.

"Le Calice" Castile Soap

(11 Gold Medals)

The soap of absolute purity. Sanitary, clean, antiseptic, free from any corrupt animal matter, is pure as oil and skill can make it. Le Calice is as good and safe for the complexion as for the finest lingerie. Made only by Srs. D. Leca & Co., Marseilles.

Did It Ever Occur to You that good coffee is the drawing card of a grocery business?

Just put in a line of Chase & Sanborn's High Grade Coffees and you will find people come from the extreme ends of your town for it—and incidentally purchase other commodities.

This is Soclean Season—Get Yours!

If you have not a stock on hand at this season of the year you are missing an opportunity of a good trade now, with big profits, and a steady trade throughout the year.

SOCLEAN

has made many friends, both among users and grocers. Here are some grocers reasons for stocking:

Costs less than others of the same nature.
Earns more than similar lines.
Advertises itself.
Turns quicker than any other.
Requires fewer salesmen.
Appeals to more people.

It's time to go after the profits of this popular line. Put up in attractive tins, sizes to suit every purpose.

Send an order to-day.

SOCLEAN LIMITED, - Toronto, Ont.

The One Way to Please all of your customers, all of the time is to always have on hand a well assorted stock of

"MELAGAMA"

ANTI-DUST
ANTI-DUST

Anti-Dust as a microbe and dirt-chaser has proven a complete success, the very best proof of its popularity amongst housewives being the frequent repeat orders we receive from leading dealers.

There's a cause, and that's what we want to drive home to you. Anti-Dust is different. It is not a preparation similar to others you are asked to handle, put up in more attractive tins. No, Anti-Dust stands out as the leader because it has qualities all its own.

Not an Enterprise for the "Quitter"

¶ "If there is one enterprise on earth," says John Wanamaker, "that a 'quitter' should leave severely alone, it is advertising. To make a success of advertising one must be prepared to stick like a barnacle on a boat's bottom.

¶ "He must know before he begins it that he must spend money—lots of it.

¶ "Somebody must tell him that he cannot hope to reap results commensurate with his expenditure early in the game.

¶ "Advertising does not jerk; it pulls. It begins very gently at first, but the pull is steady. It increases day by day and year by year, until it exerts an irresistible power."

Gentlemen—
You say that the Barr Register Account System will save us a great deal of money. We will be glad to have you prove this to us, providing it puts us under no obligation to buy.

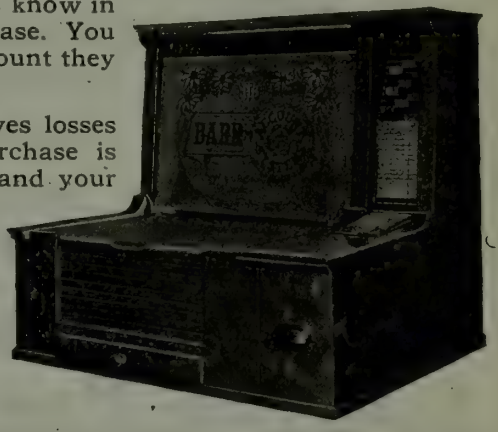
Name .....

Street and No. .....

City..... Prov.....

Yes, and save several hundred dollars. For one merchant has told us he has reduced his outstanding accounts from $3,000 to $500 with the aid of the BARR system.

The Barr Account Register System does away with the old cumbersome and profit-wasting system of handling credit accounts by the day book and ledger system. It does away entirely with monthly or semi-monthly rendering of long itemized statements. It lets your customers know in an entirely inoffensive way just how much they owe you at every purchase. You do not keep your customers in the dark for a month concerning the amount they owe you—a system that actually hinders their paying their bills.



Besides this, it saves all the time and worry of book-keeping and saves losses which occur through mistakes in book-keeping. Every time a purchase is made your customer receives a statement of his account to date and your book-keeping is kept up to the minute without a further pen stroke.

You want to know about this system—it will save you several hundred dollars. We say that it will. It is up to you to prove the truth of the statement. Use the coupon NOW.

SILVER CLEANER

An entirely novel and efficacious preparation. Entirely new principle—cleans without rubbing—saves labor—so easy to use—no trouble—no fuss—no dust—no muss. Cleans more silver in half an hour than paste and powder in half a day, and cleans it better.

This is the ideal, most economical and only modern way for cleaning

SILVER AND GOLD (Sterling or Plated Ware)
NO RUBBING. NO WEAR. REMOVES TARNISH INSTANTLY.

Each package contains powder and a special piece of metal (electro). A quantity of the powder is added to very hot water, the piece of metal is then dropped in, and the articles to be cleaned are placed in the solution, so that they come in contact with this piece of metal. Presumably galvanic action is set up, but the result is that the tarnish and dirt will be removed almost instantly, and the articles cleaned may be taken out, rinsed and wiped dry with a cloth or chamois. Tarnish will be removed from all the crevices and surfaces alike and the original lustre and polish restored and retained.

For Cut Glass the solution does not need to be so hot, but all the dirt, stains and finger marks are removed and that wonderful, wholesome sparkle and polish is brought out—simply delightful.

DOES AWAY WITH HARD LABOR. Each package contains enough powder to clean your silver several times—complete directions with every package.

Jam Consumption Increases, and Why

Changes That Have Come Over the Trade in Past Ten Years—Estimates of Comparative Amounts of Domestic and Imported Jams Consumed in Canada —Almost a Million and a Half Spent in Year for the Pure Goods—Result of 1911 Dry Weather.

Jams, jellies, marmalades, preserves, etc., have beyond a doubt made wonderful strides in Canada in the past ten years, so far as consumption and quality are concerned. Ten years ago the Canadian housewife depended on her own supplies, with some few exceptions; but now it is the other way around. The majority depend on their grocer.

What is the reason for this change? If it could be answered in a few words, those would have to be "advance in quality."

The increase of population is undoubtedly another strong factor explaining the phenomenal consumption, and more particularly since a large proportion of the additional population has come from a jam-eating country—England. People, too, are getting more money, and have more money to spend than formerly, part of the surplus going to buy these goods.

"There is no doubt," stated one manufacturer to The Grocer, "that the consumption of jams, jellies and preserves has increased materially during the past ten years."

He gave as his reasons the purity of the goods, the increase in population, and the fact that during the past few years the ordinary individual has become more luxurious in his taste and is willing to pay a fair price for a good article.

Advance of Pure Goods.

Whereas the increase in consumption of pure jams has been large, there is no doubt that a large amount of this has been at the expense of the inferior article which eight or ten years ago formed the bulk of the trade, with the exception of probably $200,000 of pure imported jams.

But to-day it is estimated that we are not only importing $400,000 worth, as against the $200,000 eight years ago, but Canadian manufacturers are putting up a $1,000,000 worth in a year, as compared with $25,000, or $50,000 at the outside, eight years ago. This means an annual distribution of $1,400,000 in pure jams, etc., in a year among the Canadian people, apart altogether from that manufactured privately. Two Canadian firms alone, it is stated, manufacture some $800,000 worth. In spite of the enormous amount consumed, there is a scarcity of some varieties.

Result of Last Year's Drought.

Owing to drought and the failure of crops last season, there was a shortage earlier in the season of raspberry and strawberry jam, also some of the smaller varieties, such as black currants. The shortage in these was estimated at 50 per cent. But a large part of the extra demand was met with imported stock.

There is also no doubt that the housekeeper is depending more and more on the manufacturer for her supplies, knowing that she can get them pure. Another reason, probably, is that domestic labor is so scarce, and also the disinclination on the part of housekeepers to do any more housework than is absolutely necessary. Of course, when there is a plentiful supply of fresh fruit, it is always noticeable that the quantities put up for home consumption are much larger. The glass jar manufacturers will be able to confirm this, as there is quite a difference in the demand for the jars in seasons of plentiful supply of fruits, and the seasons when fruit is scarce.

Manufacturer Buys More Cheaply.

"It is questionable," claims one manufacturer, whether it is profitable for the housekeeper to put up her own jams, marmalades and preserves, for the reason that the manufacturer contracts ahead in large quantities, and is thus able to secure his fruits much cheaper than can generally be secured in the open market. And then again, he is also able to secure his sugar at lower prices, generally buying when the market is at its lowest, and, as a rule, the consumer only buys sugar from hand-to-mouth, and in the preserving season sugar is generally at its highest."

Cleanliness in the Factory.

The sanitary methods by which jams and preserves are made nowadays in the big factories have done much to create a good will for pure goods. Where a factory is kept in spotlessly clean fashion, with everything in its place and a place for everything, merchants and the consuming public soon come to know about it, and the products of that place will always have their endorsation. Men who have been through factories and found how cleanly conditions were, have advised and persuaded their wives to give up a portion of the annual preserving work and save time, trouble and fuel by purchasing the pure manufactured article.

Good Information for Dealer.

Retail dealers have here much food for thought in selling jams, etc. If every point at his command is utilized properly, sales much above the actual demand will result, and there will be no necessity for carrying over any stock when the new is ready for the market.

POINTERS ABOUT CANNED GOODS.

Fruits and vegetables are gathered when at their best and taken at once to the factory, where they are canned without going through the delay of shipment.

Most of the factories now court visitors. They make cleanliness in packing an advertising feature.

Except at height of their season, canned vegetables are cheaper than the fresh.

Advise customers to keep a supply on hand for emergency. With their aid a good meal may be gotten together quickly.

Canned soups are scientifically prepared; that is, they contain exactly the proper ingredients to produce the best flavor, and at the same time contain the greatest percentage of nutriment.

There is something magic in the name "pumpkin" that makes it sell when suggested. Squash should not be forgotten either.

The sale of jam is increasing with great rapidity in Canada. Is every dealer getting his share of this trade?

Government inspection shows marmalade in Canada on the whole to be quite pure.

Spring lamb and canned peas make a good combination.

Now is the time to push the sale of canned rhubarb. Spring suggests rhubarb and the fresh article is a little dear for many customers.

An important point in the eating of sardines in olive oil is that it brings into use the oil, so beneficial to the health.

Are you handling potted chicken, ham, tongue and venison? These dainties appeal.

Considering the Salary of the Clerk

To What Is He Entitled?—Writer Claims it Should be Based on Profits of the Goods He Sells in a Week—Table Showing That $55.71 Worth of Goods Must Be Sold to Earn a $9 Salary.

By James R. McFaul.

The clerk's value to the merchant is in proportion to the amount of goods he sells above the actual demand. It is upon the sales-making power of the clerk that his value to his employer is reckoned. The amount of wages he receives is really an investment by the merchant, who expects a fair dividend on the same, just as if he were investing his money in any other way.

Both the merchant and the clerk should at times consider the question of whether the clerk is doing his share in making up the expenses and providing the profit of the store. The merchant certainly does not want a clerk who is not able to sell enough goods to pay his own wages, and a certain amount over, for there are many other expenses besides his salary to be paid, while the merchant has money invested in the business from which he expects some returns.

Does Work Warrant Increase?

There are not a few clerks who consider that their wages are too small and that they are worth more money; yet these same clerks probably never stop to consider whether their sales are large enough to even warrant their present salary. The salary of the average grocery clerk is not large, but even at its present level, there are, however, many clerks who barely earn their own wages, yet still are always looking for an increase. Sometimes even the poorest clerk, when he has been at the work for a certain length of time, will consider he should have a raise, although he never stops for a moment to figure out just what his real value to his employer may be.

Should Do Some Figuring.

The clerk would do well to figure up his sales of goods asked for, and those for which his salesmanship is responsible, and see how much he is really earning for his employer. If clerks would do this and act conscientiously on the result of their investigations, many would at once make an effort to increase their sales so that they might really earn their money before they requested any further increase. That the clerk may find out the value of his work let us consider the profit on an ordinary list of goods. Here is an actual sale given by one grocer with both cost and selling price recorded:—

	Selling Price.	Cost.
Granulated Sugar	$1.00	$0.85
1 can tomatoes	.15	.13½
25 lbs. flour	.70	.55
1 can salmon	.25	.21
Rice	.25	.20
1 can pork and beans ..	.10	.08½
1 can lobsters, ½'s ...	.30	.25
1 lb. tea	.30	.25
1 loaf bread	.10	.08½
1 lb. biscuits	.10	0.8
1 lb. butter	.35	.32
1 doz. eggs	.30	.25½
Total	$3.90	$3.27

Profits to Cover Wages.

From this sale of $3.90 it will be seen that the profit is 63 cents, so that the clerk who is drawing $9 per week must sell at least $55.71 worth of goods to pay even his own wages. Then there are all the other expenses that must be met and they are by no means few, before the merchant himself begins to get any profit on the capital invested or for his work.

If the clerk does not sell any more goods than will just cover his own salary, the merchant is losing the expense of running the business, at least as far as that clerk's proportion is concerned. The value of a clerk depends on his ability to extend sales over and above the point where he begins to be a profit maker for his employer.

A System Required.

Every merchant should have a system of keeping account of the sales of each clerk, so that records will show every week whether a clerk is coming up to the standard which his wages call for or not.

The Problem of Finding the Selling Price

Out of Thirty Replies 21 are Wrong—Those Who Figured the Question Properly—The Only Safe Method.

Our problem in figuring selling price when cost, rate of profit and rate of expense of doing business are given, created a great deal of interest. Out of some 30 replies received from different parts of the country only 9 were correct. In addition to the correct replies referred to in last week's issue, the following figured the problem properly:—Edmund S. Estabrooks, Coldstream, N.B.; L. W. Myers, Stratford, Ont.; Wm. Cameron, Brandon, Man.; and T. G. Bannister, with the W. H. Stone Co., Winnipeg.

Mr. Bannister's answer is concise and sound and is worth reproducing. Here it is:—

Editor Canadian Grocer:—In answer to query in your issue of the 26th ult., I beg to quote the following answer,—100% represents selling price. All profits and expenses being figured from selling end, therefore after allowing 10% for profit and 15% for expenses.

75% selling price = $2.00

100% selling price equals

$$\frac{100}{75} \times \frac{$2.00}{} \text{ equals } $2.66\ 2\text{-}3.$$

Mr. Cameron, who is with Mittler & Lynch, Brandon, Man., sent the following logic reply:—

100% equals Selling price.
Less 10% profit leaves 90%.
Less 15% cost of doing business leaves 75%.
75% equals cost of Goods or $2.00.
100% equals selling price or

$$\frac{100 \times 2.00}{75} \text{ equals } $2.66\ 2\text{-}3.$$

As stated in The Grocer many made the answer $2.53. Later returns showed 11 of the replies to be this figure. It was secured from figuring cost of doing business on the original cost and profit on the entire cost, whereas both should have been calculated on the selling price.

TABLE FOR FIGURING PROFIT.

Editor Canadian Grocer. — I was pleased to see I was a winner in profit-figuring competition. I think the following is a fairly easy way of getting at the selling price, and gives percentages suitable to cut lines, reasonable profits and the good profits which can be made on a few lines such as confectionery, etc.

	Multiplied by	Divided by	% profit.
Cost price	10	9	10
Cost price	8	7	12½
Cost price	6	5	16 2-3
Cost price	5	4	20
Cost price	4	3	25
Cost price	10	7	30
Cost price	10	6	40
Cost price	2		50

CHAS. BYASS.

76 Seaton St., Toronto.

(N.B.—In the problem dealt with last week the profit required was 15 per cent. for doing business, and 10 per cent. net margin, making 25 per cent. in all. Two dollars multiplied by 4 and divided by 3 gives $2.66 2-3—the correct answer. Mr. Byass' table might well find a place in the hat.

The reason for this is plain. We sell only good reliable, known brands of groceries; we sell them at a very low profit, and selling them out fast, we keep fresh goods coming in every day. We give full weight and a square deal when you buy groceries from us.—The A. E. Hill Co., Hartney, Man.

SOAP MEN UNITE.

Members of St. Croix and John Taylor Firms in a New Company.

The Canada Gazette of this week announces the formation of a company to be known as Canadian Soaps, Limited, with a capital stock of $2,000,000, made up of $100 shares. The men behind the new concern are J. E. and G. W. Ganong, of the St. Croix Soap Manufacturing Co., St. Stephen, N. B.; M. J. Taylor, A. P. and O. F. Taylor, of John Taylor & Co., Toronto; Henry Wright, of the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Toronto, selling agents for the St. Croix Soap Mfg. Co., and Chas. W. Young, of Winchester, Mass., U.S.A.

The firm states that the chief objects of the amalgamation are to secure more economical and better facilities for supplying Western Canadian trade in the matter of freight rates, etc., and to enable them to manufacture the different soaps in both New Brunswick and Ontario, and so save time and trouble in shipments.

The head office of Canadian Soaps will be in Toronto.

OUR NEWFOUNDLAND LETTER.

Potatoes Scarce in St. John's — Dried Fruit and Molasses Easing Off in Price.

St. John's, Nfld., May 6.—(Special)—Business is beginning to stir, and this week trade is brisk. The different steamers began on May 1st to connect with the railway which taps the different centres. After the quiet steady trade of the winter, a little rush would be welcomed.

The local supply of potatoes is about exhausted, and importations of P. E. Island stock late last fall, are all cleaned up as well. A quantity of English potatoes arived last week, and another lot is due to arrive next week. Sales were made readily at the rate of about $2.90 for 180-lb. barrels.

Prices have eased off somewhat on dried fruits and wholesalers are quoting 50c per box less on California raisins than they were two weeks ago. Prunes, apricots, etc., also show a decline in price.

Molasses is the only heavy article that has declined in price and dealers are quoting at least 3c per gallon less than a few weeks ago.

Florida watermelon acreage will be the largest this year in the history of the state, and outlook at present is encouraging.

RAISING STANDARD OF QUALITY.

Pure foods mean greater consumption in spite of prices.

This is well exemplified in the case of jams, jellies, preserves, etc. As shown in an article on another page the consumption of pure jams in Canada has increased wonderfully during the past eight or ten years. The fact that many manufacturers are now turning out only the absolutely pure article has much to do with the great increase in consumption of these goods. It is just another case of the conquest of the pure article over the mixture, and indicates the trend of the public's appetite in the years to come.

Dealers who strive to raise the standard of quality of goods sold are undoubtedly on the right track. They are selling goods which are bound to give satisfaction, and a satisfied customer is a greater aid to business building than a concession in price.

Let every dealer work along with the trend of the times and sell the purest goods he can purchase. It lies in his power to persuade his customers to buy these goods regardless of the fact that they are a little more expensive than others.

SHORT MAPLE CROP.

That maple syrup producers and the trade have been badly disappointed this season goes without saying. Receivers are no doubt aware that there has been a decidely poor crop—it amounts to about one-half of that gathered last year.

The causes can best be summed up by the two words "bad weather." The season was late in starting, and heavy rain combined with lack of frost did considerable damage.

When the trees begin to bud before the sap has been taken, farmers throw up the sponge, so to speak, as they know, that budding syrup has a peculiarly strong flavor, which the average consumer does not appreciate. Strong flavored honey appeals to some, but a highly flavored maple syrup is by no means pleasant.

Yet there is one redeeming feature. The quality of what sap was taken was good, being better than that of last year. Grocers should be careful, therefore, when purchasing pure syrup to see that they are not getting the "buddy" variety, as it is more than likely that some will be offered.

WHOLESALERS SELLING DIRECT.

From every section of the country come complaints of wholesalers selling direct to consumers. A letter has just been received from a retailer in Vancouver telling of the same trouble in the Pacific province. In fact, in practically every large city where wholesale houses exist, and even in many country districts where tourists spend the summer this condition of affairs is found.

That there is nothing to justify it, goes without argument. Cases are frequent where retail dealers have lost customers through wholesalers offering lower prices—and wholesalers with whom they have been dealing. How can they expect a retail customer to pay them his bills, and at the same time take away the means whereby he gets the money?

No doubt much of the trouble and dissatisfaction is due to lack of understanding one another. Probably if more conferences were held between the two sections of the trade, good results would accrue. At any rate something should be done to put business on a fairer basis.

THE EGG IN THE STORE.

When a dealer gets a shipment of eggs in the store in warm weather, there are certain precautions that should be taken to insure it remaining in the same condition as received for a reasonable length of time. If this is done, it will not be such a difficult matter to build up and strengthen the egg end of the business.

The cause of some of the trouble with bad eggs in the store is due to a disregard of scientific knowledge. Everyone knows that a fertile egg placed under a brooding hen will hatch a chicken in three weeks' time. This is brought about by the action of heat, and during the 21 days the condition of the egg is changed from one stage to another, gradually getting away from a state of freshness.

Many are likely to forget that heat of any kind will bring about some of these changes in a fertile egg. Merchants should see that eggs are not allowed to lie in a temperature around 70 or 80 degrees.

The fact that a large number do not pay sufficient attention to this matter is due in part to the heavy shrinkage experienced every summer in eggs. If every dealer did his part this shrinkage could be materially reduced.

A PREMIUM NOT APPRECIATED.

It has been said that people like the idea of having something "thrown in" when making a purchase. That there are exceptions to that rule is shown by a recent case related to the writer. It was an actual occurrence in a Canadian town.

A woman purchased a pound of bulk tea at a local grocery store. When it had been about half used, one day while taking some out of the bag to make a steeping, she discovered a piece of gum already chewed and masticated.

Her feelings can better be imagined than described. This was one free deal which she really did not appreciate. She was not the kind to work herself up to fever heat, and then descend upon the grocer and confront him with plain evidence of his uncleanliness and neglect. What she did do was to firmly resolve that never again would she purchase anything from that store, where the proprietor or clerk was so neglectful as to care for food in this manner. She kept her resolution, and has not purchased a single article there since. And while she did not mention it to the grocer, she let many of her friends know about "the filthy methods used in that store."

That grocer has probably wondered why his customer suddenly withdrew her entire trade from him. If he knew where that chew of gum had gone, which he or his clerk carelessly tossed away one day, he would be supplied the explanation.

In the first place, it is far from good store manners for a salesman to chew gum; but the person so careless and lacking so much in cleanly habits as to toss any such repulsive substance about where it is liable to come in contact with food which people must use, has no place behind the counter. His place should be out in the open, preferably with a pick and shovel.

CONDITIONS ARE SOUND.

One of the most significant evidences of the general prosperity existing in all lines of trade in Canada is the fact that there has been little disturbance in labor conditions this spring. As a general thing, May-day finds the trades more or less in a state of disruption, the journeymen demanding increased wages, the employers breathing defiance. It is not uncommon for business in the larger cities to be disturbed in early spring by a succession of strikes of more or less lengthy duration. Toronto has seen no fewer than fourteen strikes in different trades at the same time.

While there have been strikes this spring, and some are still pending, for that matter, the situation has been exceptionally quiet. Demands for better wages have been advanced by the men, but the differences have been settled amicably and satisfactorily.

This is a striking evidence of prosperous conditions. The fact that higher scales have been fixed without demur in many cases shows the financial soundness of the employing interests and the confidence with which they regard the future.

KEEP CUSTOMERS INFORMED.

May 24 is a public holiday throughout Canada, and the stores close on that day. Many dealers on the day previous place signs throughout the store denoting that the next day is a holiday and reminding customers that they look to their grocery needs.

The object of this is twofold. Customers are apt to forget the fact and neglect to make sufficient purchases to carry them over the holiday, and should appreciate this reminder, while this simple idea will no doubt work for a larger volume of sales than would otherwise be made. It is an idea that it would be well to take advantage of on every holiday during the year.

In many towns, the stores are closed one afternoon of the week during the summer months. The same idea may be followed to good advantage here by reminding customers of the half holiday. A terse sentence exhorting customers to look to their needs may assist in sales.

Then there is another side to it. Customers who have neglected purchases and find the store closed, are likely to have a certain degree of ill-feeling towards the grocer for not being on hand to serve them when they want the goods. The best method of handling this ill-feeling is by preventing it, and plenty of cards that will cause customers to make all their purchases while they may, will do much in this direction. The big stores give considerable attention to this particular and find it good business to do so.

TO PROMOTE EFFICIENCY.

The wide recognition accorded to the need for efficiency is demonstrated by the organization of a body in New York to be known as "The American Society for Promoting Efficiency." The object of this society, according to its constitution, is "the promotion of efficiency, or the highest result obtainable relative to the effort expended, in every activity of man." It is open to anyone who takes a genuine interest in the question of the improvement of effort and result. The directors will investigate into every field of activity with the purpose of finding new methods and better systems.

Already a number of men of international reputation have become interested in the movement and it is becoming apparent that the work will be furthered by some of the best intellects in the world. The project is a gigantic one, but the committees now at work can be depended upon to unearth a vast amount of valuable and practical information.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The dealer who maintains prices is on the road to success.

Victoria Day means good prospects for the confectionery end of the business.

Figure cost of doing business as well as profit on the selling price, and be safe.

Think of 2,000 articles of food packed in cans. The development of the canning industry has been truly wonderful.

* * *

Get the dirty work of the store out of the way before the customers begin to come. It will suit them better, and it will make clerks better salesmen.

The advances that have been made in the sales of jams, jellies, etc., in the last decade illustrate the result of manufacturing a pure article.

No expert business manager will sell goods without a fair profit. Where a price has to be cut it shows lack of efficiency in buying.

* * *

Freight congestion is still a thorn in the side of facility in shipping. According to reports there must be enough eggs on railway sidings to at least give Montreal a breakfast.

Guessing is poor policy. A woman asked a clerk how many pickles there were in a certain bottle. He guessed there were about 20. The woman considered them too expensive and went out. On counting them, he found there were 40. His guessing had lost a sale.

In next week's issue the article of Henry Johnson, Jr., will deal with the question of two towns separated only by a bridge, where the dealers in one seem to be getting the bulk of the business. It will be particularly interesting to such places as Berlin and Waterloo in Ontario.

The Time to Erect That New Building

Inquirer Cautioned to Go Slowly—Business Statement Shows Up Well But is Not Yet Sufficient to go to the Extra Expense —The Value of Patience—How Fast Should One Grow.

* By Henry Johnson Jr.

————, Sask., Mar. 13, 1912.

Henry Johnson, Jr.,

Care Canadian Grocer.

Dear Sir,—Have been reading your department for some time and get a good deal out of it. I would like to tell you my own little tale and get your answer. Am sure I will appreciate your advice very much.

I enclose statement of conditions at starting time, June, 1908, also at time of Invoice, Feb. 1st, 1912. I try to get 25 per cent. profit based on selling price. Bills must be paid at least once in 30 days and do not allow them to leave a balance from one pay day to another. Will average less than $300 on my books at any time. Am very strict about my credits and have only lost between $12 and $13 since I started. Could do a much larger business if I were more liberal on the credit question.

Man I bought from did $8,500 during his last year. In 1911 my sales were $10,703.24. Started out January, 1912, with gain of $125.80 and Feb., $248.19. Last year I cleaned up over everything $766.94 and since starting have made $2,671.32. Had to go pretty slow at first, but have been discounting everything since January 1st, 1911.

Wife and I do the clerking with one man to do delivering and odd work. Pay the man $7 and find him cheaper than boy help. As trade grows I intend to pay him more.

Have exclusive sale of certain lines and talk quality instead of price. Do a little advertising—very carefully, about ¼ per cent. of gross sales. Town has population of 6,500, 11 groceries and 2 department stores which cater to cheaper trade. Trade is quite evenly divided.

My building is an old one, but the location is of the best. Customers have to go up two awkward steps to get in; windows antiquated, built high, small glass; floor also badly worn and rough. So you see I am handicapped that way. By another Spring I shall be free and clear and then I think of going into debt for a modern building and up-to-date fixtures. I feel that if we can go ahead under present conditions we surely ought to make good with things favoring us. Will be obliged to spend considerable on the old shack in another year if I do not build.

Please tell me what you think of what I have done and whether you think it would be advisable to build another Spring or wait until I had more ahead. Have no rich father to back me; it is just a business proposition. If I start, just have to make good. Can get the money all right at 5 per cent. I think I ought to make the jump while things seem to be coming my way.

Have electric coffee mill and cheese cutter and certainly would not part with them. Tell me good and plain what you think and if you wish to know anything further will be glad to inform you. Am 34 and never sick so not handicapped in any way.

Yours sincerely,

T—— W—— A——.

Had less than $100 at time of starting. Went in debt for the rest. Made $766.94 clear of everything in 1911. Living, clothing, expenses of all kinds paid out of store.

Less than $100 at beginning; $2,671.32 net worth now. Looks like I had made nearly $2,600 during the 3½ years.

Had $1,322.58 stock at inventory time. Had bought rather heavily on some stuff and was carrying over $200 more stock than usual.

This is one of the good stories that reach me occasionally. It illustrates very graphically that a man with small capital can make that capital yield more than it can be made to yield at any later date, when there is more of it. I should like much to have the statement of earnings during each year by itself, because then we might see just what that "less than $100" earned on itself each year.

A Splendid Showing.

Meantime, let us average it. Call it $100, and then take the $2,600 he has made in 3½ years. We shall find that he has averaged $742.85 a year, or nearly 750% annually on that first capital. Of course, there was an endowment of $2,475 in the business. On that figure the earnings have been a little better than 33.44% per annum. It is a crackerjack good showing any way you figure it.

Fact is, the showing is so good that I do not want him to take the second desperate chance which may spoil it all. He is running along at the rate of about $125 per month this year. That should show up to $1,500 for 1912. Employing $2,671.32 of capital—net worth basis—such earnings would make 55½%.

Put Surplus Into Bonds.

If that works out, then he should be able to pay off that $1,200 of debts during 1912, and have $300 to add to his capital for 1913. Using $4,000 in 1913, maybe he could make $2,000, or 50% on the capital employed. As the surplus was accumulated, it could be put into solid bonds, yielding 4½%, and thus grow a bit of itself during the year, adding $25 or $30 to itself without any watching, and being available at any moment all the time.

Beginning January 1st, 1914, then, he should have his business and real estate, worth probably not less than $4,000, and $2,000 in cash surplus besides. Then he will be in shape to undertake his improvements without any particular risk. With the wife trained into the business, the business in such good shape and then a life insurance policy of $2,000 to protect her in the business in case of accident to the husband, there would be no objection to the new building being undertaken. But I should counsel against it before January, 1914.

Have you ever noticed that a suit you may be wearing may get to look very shabby without falling to pieces? Have you ever put aside such a suit and then worn a second one until it, too, became shabby? Then have you brought out the first suit and said to yourself: "Well, that suit does not look so bad as I thought it did?" That will be your experience if you fuss along with your present store. It will do. It can be made to do. Just do the least bit of patching here and there to keep it together for another year after January, 1913. It will work out. Do not worry about what your customers will think of it, either. Good goods will hide any little roughness, and, after all, people all have their troubles, and yours will not trouble others, nor be so apparent as they are to you.

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met.

You are young. That makes you impatient. But you can realize that a year more or less is a very small matter to you. You have a good location. It will keep good. It will be just so much better if you wait until you can go in boldly and remodel without being handicapped through the feeling that maybe you cannot quite afford some of the very things you will need most in your new, up-to-the-minute store. Go slow. It pays.

A Salary For Proprietor.

I suggest that you change one part of your accounting. Pay yourself and wife definite salaries. You should take, say, $15 per week, $65 per month, which makes $780 per year. Pay your wife, say, $30 per month. Then charge these salaries up to expense. No reason why you should spend all this money unless as and when you need it; but pay it regularly, so as to have things on the right basis. I am stabbing at the amounts. You may modify it all in the light of what it has actually cost you to live; but the principle is what I want you to establish.

I believe that what I have counseled you to do is right and wise. But I shall hope to hear from you further. By the way, I have the impression that your wife will incline to agree with me.

Resolutions of National U.S. Grocers

Annual Meeting at Oklahoma City—Manufacturer's Name on Label--Maintaining the Selling Price—Recognition of Legitimate Wholesalers—Honest Advertising—The Parcels Post Question.

Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, May 9.—At the annual convention of the National Retail Grocers' Association of the United States held here, a number of resolutions were discussed and approved of which are of interest to the Canadian trade. Among them were the following:—

Whereas, Congressman P. P. Campbell has introduced into Congress a bill which provides that the name of the manufacturer and the location where packed shall appear on every label, can, package, bottle or container of any kind, therefore, be it resolved, that we, the National Association of Retail Grocers of the United States, go on record as favoring the Campbell bill now before Congress, providing that the name of the manufacturer and the location where packed, shall appear on every label or container.

Whereas, free deals have a tendency to overload the retailer and force him many times to buy in quantities larger than his capacity, and which causes price-cutting to unload his stock,

Therefore, be it resolved, that we inform the manufacturing trade that we are opposed to free deals of all kinds.

Maintenance of Selling Price.

Whereas, many manufacturers of well known staples have for some time insisted on the jobbing trade charging a uniform selling price on their goods, at the same time showing no interest whatever in behalf of the retail trade, and,

Whereas, the retail trade has no protection against illegitimate competition and ruinous price-cutting, and,

Whereas, there are legal ways in which a manufacturer can protect a retail selling price, as well as a wholesale selling price, thereby assuring the distributor a fair margin of profit,

Therefore, be it resolved, that we do hereby favor manufacturers establishing and maintaing retail selling prices on their products, in order to assure us this protection.

Whereas, some manufacturers use certain selling plans, which can, or do, operate either directly or indirectly similar to free deals,

Therefore, be it resolved, that this convention look with disfavor upon any selling plans whereby the manufacturer gives a number of regular packages free with each purchase by the retail dealer with the intent that he give one package free to non-users of that product.

Recognition of Wholesalers.

Be it resolved, that we hereby endorse any wholesale grocery company that will adhere strictly to the jobbing business, and refrain from selling direct to the consuming trade; and,

Be it further resolved that we hereby request all manufacturers and brokers to recognize any wholesale or jobbing grocer companies, as such.

Resolved, that in future the city accepting the national convention, shall do so with the understanding that they shall not use the national association name in securing advertisements for the program.

Whereas, the National Retail Grocers' Association is well represented among its members by the trade press, but not having a vehicle as the daily and weekly press to reach the consumer, to counteract the effects of the vicious attacks often made on the retail dealer,

Be it resolved, that the executive board establish and maintain a Bureau of Publicity, but that no additional office be created thereby.

Whereas, retail merchants have suffered in the past from the attempts to thrust upon us unfair and unjust legislation,

Be it resolved, by the National Retail Grocers' Association, that the interest of the public at large would be more justly conserved by electing practical business men as our representatives in both national and state legislatures.

Be it resolved, that this association work to the end of securing national and state legislation, requiring that the statements made in advertisements shall be truthful, and that the goods advertised must conform to the statements in the advertisements.

Whereas, there is an undue pressure being brought upon Congress for the passage of a parcels-post enactment, a measure which is not demanded by the people at large, but is sought by special interests, out of purely selfish motives, since the operation of a parcels-post can benefit only those who desire shipments away from their home towns, consequently implying purchases away from their logical trade centres, but desiring transportation at less than cost, the deficiency to be paid by the people at large, who have no interest in the transaction between buyer and seller, who should rightly bear the cost,

Therefore, be it resolved, that we again unalterably oppose the passage of any parcels-post law.

FREIGHT BEING HELD UP.

Produce Merchants Have Many Complaints to Offer Against Railways.

Toronto, May 9.—(Special)—Strenuous complaints are being made by wholesalers in all lines of business in regard to slowness with which freight is moving in and out of the city. This is by no means a new difficulty which they have to suffer from, but it appears to be becoming chronic. The local yards have been congested for some time, and it is said that on Friday last C. P. R. had 1,200 loaded cars, while the G. T. R. had 1,500 cars of freight for delivery locally, filling the sidings between the city and West Toronto.

Wholesale produce houses along Front Street stated on Monday that there were six or seven hundred cases of eggs and similar quantities of other country produce lying at the freight sheds and that some consignments made to them over a week or ten days ago from points less than 48 hours' distance were still undelivered. Customers were canceling orders and they were losing business through the delay.

Current News of the Week

Quebec and Maritime Provinces.

O. H. Bouvier, grocer, Montreal, has sold to Nap. Brion.

W. J. Maloney, St. Antoine St., Montreal, grocer, died suddenly last week.

P. Pastene & Co., of Boston, have opened a Canadian branch warehouse at Montreal.

Several grocers and one or two bakers have been summoned to court in Montreal to answer charges of keeping food exposed to dirt.

D. A. Morrison, wholesale grocer, Amherst, N.S., has purchased the wholesale grocery business of J. F. Crowe & Co., Halifax, N.S. Mr. Morrison is now a member of four different jobbing houses in the Maritime Provinces. They are Morrison, Limited, Amherst; Puddington, Wetmore & Morrison, St. John, N.B., McCullough, Creelman & Morrison, Truro, N.S., and the new firm Morrison & Williams.

The Meadow-sweet Cheese Co., Montreal, have amalgamated with Lunhaur, Jones & Grant, and are now located at 25 William street, Montreal.

The Canadian General Commission Agent Co., have started business in Montreal under the managership of F. H. Wright. They have a number of specialties, such as orangeade syrup, pure fruit sugar, Vanco hand soap, S. City laundry flakes, S. City wall cleaner.

Flour circles, in fact the trade in general, will regret to hear of the death of two men who have been well known for many years and who have been highly respected on all sides. F. W. Thompson, vice-president of the Ogilvie Milling Co., left early last month on a trip to Europe as his health was none too good, but it was never expected that his indisposition would have such a fatal termination. Mr. Thompson was born at Montreal in 1862, and was therefore in his fiftieth year. He joined the old Exchange Bank of Montreal when only 15 years of age, remaining there till 1893 when he became general manager of the Ogilvie Flour Mills northwestern business with headquarters at Winnipeg six years later, and general manager of the entire concern in 1900. Two years later he reorganized the business, floating a new company which bought out the property of the old firm and changed the concern's style to Ogilvie Flour Mills Limited. Of this new concern Mr. Thompson became vice-president and managing director, a position he held during the past ten years.

The St. Lawrence Flour Mills Limited have also lost one of their most loyal men by the death of V. E. Beauvais. For twenty years Mr. Beauvais was the agent for the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., in Quebec City. He returned to Montreal two years ago to fill the position made vacant by the retirement of Lieut.-Col. A. E. Labelle, to assume the position of the local manager and secretary of the St. Lawrence Flour Mills Company, Limited.

Ontario.

C. Fenwick, grocer, Toronto, sold to P. Maitland.

W. F. Barr, grocer, Ottawa, succeeded by O. Bowland.

J. F. Honor, Port Hope, Ont., has sold his grocery to G. Garbutt.

G. A. Despond has sold his grocery business in Toronto to J. Jeffrey.

W. A. Helsdon, grocer, Delhi, Ont., Ont., has been succeeded by W. H. Sweet.

R. Hewins has sold his general store at Ballinafad, Ont., to Farnell & Gardiner.

John Hughes, Prescott, Ont., will open a grocery business in the Gray block of that town in the near future.

Thieves entered J. A. McIntosh's store at Hamilton on Wednesday last, and stole $3 in coppers, a quantity of cigars and some canned goods.

The merchants of Sarnia, Ont., have formed an association to carry on a buy-at-home campaign. Officers will be elected at once and a policy will be drawn up that will tend to keep as much business in Sarnia as possible.

The Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association will hold their annual picnic this year on July 17. This was decided upon at their last regular meeting. President Ed. Hazell occupied the chair and three new members were added.

Western Canada.

P. W. Rowe, Winnipeg, has sold his grocery to M. C. McBain.

F. Demetre, grocer, Vancouver, B. C., has sold to Lopriore & Fivre.

J. H. Bertram, grocer, Saskatoon, Sask., has sold to McDonald &McPhee.

J. H. Hazelwood, Glenboro, Man., has sold his grocery business to F. W. Downes.

Bay & Co., general merchants, Grayson, Sask., succeeded by Heather & Thompson.

T. J. Scanlan, a Nelson, B.C. dealer, has disposed of his business. Mr. Scanlan has been a reader of The Grocer since 1899.

Findlay & McNaughton are erecting a grocery and men's furnishings store at Briercrest, Sask. Both have been in business in Eastern Canada.

Recent grocery changes in Vancouver, B.C., include H. Hartford to John Hollingshead, A. E. Jarvis to E. P. Outram, and H. Y. VanWart to Mills & Co.

Saskatchewan wholesale grocers will form a provincial guild. A meeting of wholesalers was held in Regina recently when this decision was arrived at. S. C. Burton, of Cameron & Heap, Regina, and R. M. Alexander, of the Moose Grocery Co., Moose Jaw, were named as an executive committee.

CANADIAN GRAIN ON HAND

Ottawa, May 9.—Reports of correspondents to the Census and Statistics office show that out of a yield of 215,851,600 bushels of wheat harvested last year, 188,255,000 bushels or 87 per cent. were merchantable and that at the end of March, 58,129,000 bushels, or 27 per cent. of the whole, were yet in farmers' hands. At same date last year the quantity on hand in all Canada was 33,042,000 bushels or 22 per cent. of total crop of 149,989,600 bushels.

The quantity held by farmers in the Maritime Provinces on March 31 was 329,000 bushels; in Quebec, 350,000 bushels; in Ontario, 3,874,000 bushels; in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, 53,626,000 bushels, and in British Columbia, 48,070 bushels.

Oats last year gave a yield of 348,846,600 bushels and quantity on hand at the end of March was 153,846,000 bushels or 44.18 per cent. A year previous amount on hand was 127,587,000 bushels.

FROM THE WEST INDIES.

Dear Sirs:—Herewith please find enclosed $2.00, my subscription to Canadian Grocer to October, 1912.

It is certainly worth more money, and is of great service to me in ordering my goods.

Montreal, May 9.—Wholesalers report a slight improvement in collections, but some are inclined to believe that considerable speculation is hurting this part of the business. General trade throughout the country seems to be showing greater activity.

It is noticeable, however, that the large majority of dealers are following the markets closely and are only buying certain lines in small quantities. As far as sugar is concerned such precautions are necessary, one wholesaler emphasizing this state of affairs by stating "If there came a 10c decline there would be an avalanche of business."

With the navigation open things are somewhat livelier. Retail grocers are particular enough about prices, but they do not seem to take much stock of the low freight prices offered by steamship lines. Why?

SUGAR.—Towards the end of last week raws in New York firmed up owing to different reports from Cuba and the south. A cable from the former, stating that grinding had ceased owing to rains, was followed by another to the effect that weather was simply doubtful. But we may rest assured that the breaking of the levees in Louisiana by the flood, even though much damage was not anticipated by trade, had some effect in making the market bullish, and if extensive damage has been done to the cane crop, the market will become decidedly bullish, as refiners will have to look to other sources of supply to fill their wants.

At the present moment dealers are buying from hand to mouth, and the majority of them are agreed that the market will soon change. At time of writing there is little to indicate a decline.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.—Owing to the arrival of new crop molasses, same being somewhat plentiful, a decline in prices is recorded. But we might state that the crop was not as large as expected. The yield of juice from a quantity of the cane was disappointing. The latter can of course be explained by bad weather.

Owing to a decided shortage in the maple crop, corn syrups should be in even better demand. They are selling freely now, but better turnovers are looked for.

DRIED FRUITS.—Fine filiatras currants have dropped this week owing to the fact that there are fairly heavy stocks held, and prices were kept high. With competition from green fruits which are now offering, currants will weaken, and though they are not expected to drop very much lower just now, nevertheless a downward movement is indicated.

The demand for prunes in a jobbing way is barely active, no important transactions coming to the surface.

TEAS.—The first cable advice re Japan teas stated that the market opened somewhat high, but a subsequent cable received by one of Canada's largest Japan tea importers on the 2nd inst. was to the effect that the current cost was 10 per cent. higher than last year, which is considered favorable for future operations, seeing that it is 10 per cent. lower on the opening. A high opening does not affect the Canadian market, as the quantity of early packed teas imported is practically nil, whereas in the United States there is an eager market for them and high figures are realized.

The opening of the China tea market is awaited, and there are many to be found contending that the recent hostilities during which Hankow City was burned, will have some effect on prices. The question, however, is a difficult one and would have to be treated very carefully before a definite statement would be advisable.

A report from India states that owing to the break up of the drought by much needed rains, supplies during March showed a slight increase over last year's total. The estimated total for the month is placed at nearly one million larger than last year's shipments for the corresponding period, and the prospects point to the estimates being well justified. Since the beginning of the year prospects have altered somewhat. Russia and Great Britain are the only two countries showing a reduction in imports, and although Russia's requirements may not reach even those of last year, the general good demand throughout all countries will in all probability counteract the effect on the Ceylon market of the smaller Russian demands. Forecasts at the beginning of the year are therefore quite likely to be realized, viz., that still higher prices will prevail in 1912 than in 1911.

COFFEE.—Business remains of the hand to mouth order. The Rios and Santos remain high and firm. RICE AND TAPIOCA.—The market for both is quiet, with all grades being taken for current requirements. The arrivals are light. Many mills in the South are reported closed down, and the majority of the stocks are held by the combination.

The market had a tendency to become bullish as a result of reports on damage by flood, but this has worn off.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Apricots—Lower.

Brazil Nuts—Quoted at 13 to 15c.

Beans—Firm.

Toronto, May 9.—So far local wholesalers appear to be pretty well satisfied with volume of May trade. Things were not as bright during April as some would have wished, due to delay in opening of navigation and general backward season, but now with goods beginning to move out by lake routes and with house cleaning essentials in demand, jobbers feel that they have little reason for complaint.

"There is no doubt," commented one wholesaler, "that high prices on many lines have somewhat restricted trade, but on the whole business has been quite fair, and we are looking forward to a good year."

One line which has been moving slowly for some time is sugar, but stocks in second and third hands are now small, and more buying should soon set in. Refined is quoted at $5.45, compared with $4.70 one year ago.

Complaints are heard on all sides regarding slow freight service, which appears to be getting worse instead of better, although opening of navigation should assist somewhat in removing the congestion.

SUGAR.—Sugar was regarded as in a weak position a week ago, but during latter part of last week took a slight upward turn, and refiners felt it expedient to protect themselves to some degree, while speculators came into raw market at slightly firmer figures. These operations were based on reports from Cuba giving less favorable news of outturn of crop, although there are still indications of estimated 1,800,000 tons yield. There is some difference of opinion as to immediate situation.

Bullish factors point to small European supplies, and fact that Europe is 90c per cwt. above New York. While New York market has lowered considerably from high point of early year, it is pointed out by Canadian refiners that New York market cannot be taken as guage of Canadian situation, as our refiners are restricted mostly to B.W.I.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.—As far as prices are concerned there is no change in local situation in either of these lines. New make maple syrup has not been offered in large enough quantities to have any adverse effects on consumption of corn syrups. On the contrary, it is argued that during maple syrup season all syrups are brought into greater prominence, and that corn syrups are for that reason benefitted.

New molasses from Barbados is arriving on Eastern markets, and an easier feeling is noted on Montreal and St. John markets, but there has been no change here.

DRIED FRUITS. — Differences of opinion are expressed regarding demand for dried fruits. Some firms say that prunes have been moving freely, while others declare them slow. "Whatever the reason," said one jobber, "prunes are not going into consumption as freely as one would expect." Demand is principally for immediate requirements.

Both choice and slab apricots are quoted lower by local firms, following trend of values at coast points. High prices for this line have naturally made demand smaller than in other years.

It seems to be becoming a recognized thing that wholesalers are unable to judge what supplies of figs will be required each year. "It is either a feast or a famine," commented one wholesaler. Last year found an overplus of figs on market, but this year stocks are in rather small compass. Some dealers are next to cleaned up on better grades, while bags and tapnets are gradually cleaning up.

There is no change in evaporated apples, which remain steady.

TEA.—There has not been a great deal of interest as yet directed towards new crop Japan tea by local dealers. Market has opened rather high, but may not be a reflection of situation when season becomes more advanced. As season advances and trend becomes more settled, greater interest is expected.

London reports that at last auction practically all kinds of Indian tea sold firmly at recent rates, with exception of a few parcels of very red and stalky teas. Ceylon also sold at rates fully equal to previous auctions.

COFFEE.—The liberal receipts from coffee plantations to Brazil coffee ports so late in the crop year has had a depressing influence on the market, and prices in New York last week took an easier turn, although some slight steadiness is again reported.

The facts appear to be that receipts in Brazil far outrun the usual quantity at this late period, coming forward in such a quantity as to upset all previous estimates and overthrow all data of previous years as to a sharp falling off in receipts.

Steadying factors in situation are small stocks generally carried which require constant replenishing, and also dearth of good drinking coffees.

The next crop begins its outturn on July 1, and a great deal depends upon its size.

There is no change in local prices or general situation.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.—Trade in these lines is up to normal. This is a good season for use of these lines, and dealers would do well to put some extra selling efforts behind them.

There is no change in market values. Despatches from rice producing sections in East do not possess any particularly new features. Situation in United States is firm. One firming factor there is floods in Louisiana, which are interfering with planting of rice.

NUTS.—With heavier supplies of Brazil nuts arriving and on way, prices are more in buyers' favor, some firms quoting as low as 13 cents. There is, however, a steadier undertone, the result of some packers having withdrawn prices. Brazil nuts are more reasonable than for past couple of years. Other lines of nuts are unchanged.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—Here and there a certain line of canned goods will make a sudden spurt but business is mostly of a steady nature, retailers in most cases buying for immediate wants only. Fruits move steadily at unchanged values.. Corn is quoted at $1, tomatoes from $1.55 up to 11.75, beans at $1.20 to $1.30 and early June peas around $1.30 to $1.35.

Another sardine packing season has opened up on east coast, but so far the amount put into cans is said to be rather small. Spot canned fish are steady. Lobsters as pointed out before are scarce.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Beans—Advance further.

Syrup—Firm.

Sugar—Steady.

Winnipeg, May 9.—Trade generally is active and dealers express themselves as well satisfied with the outlook.

Much interest is evinced by the trade in the work of railroad commission, as regards Western freight rates, and that an equitable adjustment when arrived at will have a most beneficial effect is admitted on all sides.

In Manitoba, labor conditions continue most satisfactory, but in Saskatchewan a threatened strike of building trades, affecting practically whole province is cause for much anxiety. A tie-up of building activity in Western towns where plans have been formulated for large expenditure in improvements would be little short of a public calamity.

Wheat seeding is practically finished, and never in West was the grain got in the ground under more favorable conditions.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, May 9.—Local market is reported to be in none too steady a condition, and several of the staple commodities are in a nervous state, with a tendency to advance at practically any moment. Wheat market has developed considerable strength, and before the new crop of Manitoba and Ontario wheat is harvested higher prices may be looked for, particularly since advices received here indicate that quite a quantity of the grain has been spoiled in some Western sections. The situation in cereals is strong, and this applies to all kinds. Oatmeal and cornmeal are especially steady at recent advances. An increase has been made in molasses of one cent a gallon. Local wholesalers are finding it difficult to forecast what further developments are likely to follow in molasses.

What is a feature new to the local market is fact that yellow eye beans are selling cheaper than hand picked, and a new record has been established in hand picked pea beans, which are now quoted at $3 a bushel. Lard is another article in which an increased figure is asked, and it is selling at a price unknown before in this city.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, May 9.—Wholesale grocery dealers report spring business opening up in good volume. Travelers now on the road are sending in good orders, and prospects for future are excellent. There has been some improvement in receipts of butter, and as result prices are a little easier, being about two cents lower than they were two weeks ago. Eggs are in good supply, and are now selling at 20 cents per dozen, a drop of three cents. Cheese is a little easier, twins selling at 16½ cents, and large at 16¾.

Flour prices are a shade firmer, Ontario 90 per cent. being quoted at $5.25 and Ontario Blends at $5.50 to $5.60. Cornmeal is five cents higher, at $1.90 to $2.

Smoked hams have been advanced one cent to 17 cents, and green are selling at 16 cents.

This week the first shipment of Bermuda onions was received. They are much higher than last year, $3 per crate being asked. Price, however, will ease off with the next shipment.

EARLY CLOSING BY-LAW.

The Hamilton, Ont., city council will pass a by-law to compel dealers in certain lines to close early on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights. The trades affected are those who have sent in petitions for same. The grocers did not do so, and are not included in the list. The matter was discussed at great length at the last meeting of the Grocers' Association, and it was decided that owing to the large number in the business, and the competition of the fruit and ice cream stores, it would be better not to attempt it.

Greater Interest in Confectionery

Spring a Good Selling Season—Preparing for Victoria Day Trade—Big Increase in Consumption of Confectionery in Recent Years—Flour Maintains Its Steady Position—Seeding Progressing Well in Canadian West.

Confectionery is being given a good deal of attention by retail dealers at present time. Spring is agreed as a good selling season for most lines of confectionery, and those dealers who are putting some selling effort behind these lines are finding a good trade in this department. The approach of May 24 is also cause of more interest in this line, as around the holiday, when holiday spirit is in the air, there is more business done.

Dealers point to the big increase in consumption of confectionery in recent years, and it still continues. Another feature of interest is the larger consumption of better grades which is quite noticeable in recent years. No small portion of this is due to retail dealers who have recognized in better goods, greater satisfaction to customers as well as more substantial profits.

Flour is unchanged, but holds a steady position, as wheat has continued strong and higher during week. Strong market in wheat had as its basis adverse crop reports from various parts of United States. May wheat in Chicago on Monday reached a new high level for season. Winnipeg also strengthened a little, while other markets felt secure. Demand for flour is not brisk, although some dealers describe it as normal for season.

A few weeks ago there were certain dealers expecting a firmer tendency in flour. They set forth the argument that with coming of grass, millfeed would likely recede in price, and that this would throw greater strength on flour. However, bran and shorts have continued to maintain a fairly steady position.

The May crop report of United States Department of Agriculture, which was being awaited by grain men, shows average condition of winter wheat on May 1 as 79.7 per cent., as compared with 80.6 on Apr. 1, and 86.1 on May 1 last. At this figure it is a bullish factor on the whole, while compared with predictions which were for a much lower condition, the report was bearish for the moment.

Seventy per cent. of spring wheat seeding is finished in Manitoba, and 85 per cent. in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—The market is quiet at present, there being no change in prices to note. There were some bids from the United Kingdom for Manitoba spring grades, but as they were away out compared with prices here, no new business was transacted.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—There is little change in general flour situation during past week, market maintaining a steady tone in sympathy with strong wheat situation. While opening of navigation means a lower freight rate on wheat, general strength has about balanced this at present.

Offerings of winter wheat flour are not large, and situation is firm. Ontario wheat has continued strong, with gradual upward movement, and is drawing closer to values on Manitoba wheat. Ontario is now quoted at $1.04 to $1.05, and No. 1 northern Manitoba at $1.12 at lake ports. In consequence millers' views are higher.

FLOUR IN MILK CHOCOLATES.

A jury in a New York United States District Court decided that putting four or five per cent. of wheat flour in milk chocolate did not constitute a violation of the pure food law. The case was that of the United States against D. Auerbach & Sons of New York, large manufacturers of confections. The government contention was that milk chocolate bars should contain nothing other than milk, chocolate and sugar. The defendant showed that the product contained more of the genuine cocoa fat or cocoa butter than the government standard for crude chocolate, and contended that the manufacture of a confection, so long as he used only wholesome ingredients, had the right to use such formula for the selection and mixture of constituent parts as would produce a palatable and marketable chocolate bar. That as a matter of fact there had been no adulteration or misbranding under the law.

Strawberries and Pines to the Front

Arriving in Larger Quantities and Being Given More Attention—Strawberries Coming in Car Lots — Pineapples Tend Downward in Price—Temporary Steadiness in Tomatoes—Celery is Fast Coming to An End—New Potatoes From Florida.

One of the features of the week is larger supplies of strawberries and pineapples arriving and the greater attention being given to these lines. There is also a somewhat healthier tone to most markets, probably due to larger supplies in some lines and better selling weather which has prevailed of late.

Canadian markets received their first carload lots of strawberries last week and on most markets they quickly found their way into consumption, as quality was generally good. Berries are gradually coming from points farther north giving us fruit of firmer quality with a shorter distance to transport them. North Carolina is present field of production.

Pines are also arriving more freely and are getting considerable attention. Prices have not shown much change but tendency is downward and accordingly as prices reach more reasonable level, demand can be expected to increase. Both Porto Rico and Cuban stock is now coming along. Florida will later assist in supplies.

Florida is not as flush with tomatoes as dealers would like. At least supplies are not large enough to bring about any concessions in price. East coast is about done while west will begin to ship in a week or so. It is expected that prices will be more reasonable then, although this is not exactly certain, depending on volume of supply and demand. Around the middle of the month, some hot house tomatoes from Ontario points will be offered.

Celery is fast coming to an end, being practically cleaned up on some markets. Florida will now be sending along new potatoes and prices on new product can be expected to ease. Cabbage is in larger supply and lower in price. Bermuda onions of Texas origin are now offered on Canadian markets.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—The first supplies of strawberries have come to hand but they have proved too many for even those who were most sanguine about the markets. Some local dealers have so far lost money on the berries they have brought in. They, however, look for better luck within the next week. Cranberries in barrels are a thing of the past but there is a steady demand for the box variety. No more Tangerines can be had, while Baldwin apples are also marked off the wholesalers' circulars.

The market may be regarded as slow generally except for bananas which are in real good demand, but the prices are pretty high. This can best be explained by the fact that about this time there is little small fruit on the market except strawberries and oranges, and the banana demand is heavier than the supply.

VEGETABLES.—Were it not for good supplies of vegetables coming from the south, the market would be decidedly dull. Cabbages are now quoted by the crate the barrelled being practically off the market. Florida celery amounts to a scarcity and while price is $3.25 to $3.75 it is very likely that within another week dealers will ask a much higher figure for any they have left.

GREEN FRUITS.—First carload lots of strawberries to this market were of good quality and were cleared out in record time. Supplies are continuing to come by car lots and are selling well at 20 to 22 cents for quarts. North Carolina is at present supplying us.

In keeping with firmness noted in grapefruit last week, quotations have been slightly increased. Supplies are mostly Cuban stock, although there is odd lots of Florida fruit. Pines are coming along freely with tendency slightly easier. They are being taken up quite well by the trade.

VEGETABLES.—Among the lines offered at better advantage to buyers are cabbage and cucumbers. Cabbage is now quoted at $4 per crate and Boston cucumbers are considerably easier at $1.50 per dozen. There is quite an array of tempting new vegetables to be had. Green peas at $3.50 per box is a recent addition.

Egyptian onions are unchanged at $3.75 per sack. Texas Bermuda onions have arrived and are quoted at $3 per 50 lb. crate. New potatoes from Florida will arrive shortly and while they will be cheaper than Bermuda stock, early shipments will be somewhat high.

Celery is cleaned up or the next thing to it. Florida tomatoes are steady but west coast will commence to ship in week or so.

Arrange Fruit Display for Victoria Day

Window With Patriotic Setting and Neatly Arranged With Fruit Should Bring Large Amount of Business—Remind the Public of the Visitors Expected—Make an Early Start.

Two weeks hence, Victoria Day will again be with us. An edict has been issued from the Capital that May 24 is again to be set aside as a public holiday throughout the Dominion. This may bring pleasant smiles to the faces of grocers, head clerks, window trimmers and on down the line to the youngest of the staff, by reason of the "good time" to be had upon that day. But there is another reason why the approach of this holiday should be given some thought by members of the staff. As on every holiday or special occasion, it gives an opportunity for something special in both interior and window display.

An attractive fruit display used at time of death of King Edward VII. By substituting a picture of our late Queen Victoria this would be appropriate for Victoria Day.

Fruits For The Holiday.

One of the best lines to give prominence to on this occasion is fruits. There are many reasons why this is true. The holiday spirit is in the air and people are naturally more liberal with their money than at other times. There are visitors in every town and these feel like purchasing something for those they are visiting and fruit is a line that their minds naturally turn to. On this day people want something special for the table and fancy fruits will readily find sale.

There is quite an extensive variety of fruits to offer at this season. The weather is favorable for their sale and people feel like eating fruit at this time of the year. Therefore fruit is a splendid line to push during this holiday season. One of the best methods to promote sales is by attractive window display.

In arranging a window for this occasion, what should be aimed at, is something of a patriotic nature, combining if so desired a commemoration of our beloved departed Queen as well, in memory of whom the day has been set aside. The whole window should not, of course, be given over to this idea alone, but will merely use a picture or bust as a setting. The balance of the window will be used as a display that will assist in the store's sales.

The simplest suggestion for a background is merely a large Union Jack. A picture of the late Queen might be placed in the centre and a flag draped down from either side. Whatever additional decorations in keeping with the idea that the grocer has at hand may be used. The various kinds of fruits may be arranged as the trimmer sees fit. Goods should be arranged systematically and attention given to color scheme.

Here is one suggestion: Place a row of pines along the rear and in front of this, and in the centre a pyramid of oranges. On either side, boxes of strawberries could be arranged in diamond form and grapefruit, apples, etc., shown in balance of the window.

Make Displays Early.

The window should be arranged in plenty of time before the 24th. It is well to get the public imbued with the holiday spirit as early as possible. Victoria Day comes on Friday and Monday is none too early to get started. Of course, the line shown being fruit, it will likely have to be changed and rearranged during the week.

More Varieties of Fish to Be Had

Supplies of Lines Already on Market are More Extensive—Fairly Large List of Fresh Fish Available on Most Markets—Lake Trout and White Fish Make Appearance — Trade Turning to Fresh Varieties.

There is now a larger variety of fresh lines available while supplies of fish already at hand are in many cases on a larger scale than for some little time. At many centres list of fresh varieties has now reached fairly extensive proportions and this should mean more trade for the man operating a fish department.

Shad and fancy stocks of fresh salmon are coming on to the markets but weather on east coast has not been exactly favorable for fishing. White fish and trout from inland lakes are now being offered and with the several other new lines available, trade should now reach more substantial proportions.

There is still some frozen fish to be had but stocks are quite small and demand is now gradually turning to fresh varieties.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—In spite of the hot season's approach dealers find things generally satisfactory although there seems to be a shortage of some of the fresh lines. Fancy stocks of fresh salmon are coming in, while there is a fair supply of haddock. There is a more generous supply of dressed bullheads and perch, and prices are somewhat lighter.

TORONTO.—Fresh white fish and lake trout have been welcome additions to the fish list. They come from the large inland lakes and are quoted at 12 cents per pound. There is now a fairly extensive list of fresh fish and this should work for a little greater activity. Trade will gradually turn to fresh varieties. Local stocks of frozen fish are on a small scale.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.—Heavy winds have been responsible for falling off in receipts of several kinds of fish in demand in local markets, and warmer weather with less wind is desired before shad or salmon are to be had in large quantities. It will be well toward the middle of May before either makes an appearance in fish stands here. Haddock and cod have been scarce during past week owing to cause stated above, and same may be said of Gaspereaux, the run on which seems to be nearly closed. Halibut was in brisk demand, and the supply was fair. Lobsters are being received in larger quantities, but are still none too plentiful, although prices are easy, from 10 to 20 cents being asked. Both pollock and codfish are easier in the dried lines, and smoked herring are lower, while pickled stocks remain unchanged. Finnan haddies are not to be had at all. All frozen stocks are now done.

HIGH PRICES PREDICTED.

A New York produce and provision dealer claims that the coming year will see high prices for meats, eggs and butter. The hens have been backward, due to the cold season, and the increase in butter production has not until recently been meeting actual demand. The price for potatoes would go to $8 a barrel, he adds, if it were not for Irish and Belgian importations. The cabbage crop is short, and cabbages like artichokes are becoming luxuries. Poultry is the one product, he declares, that has not risen in price by leaps and bounds.

Produce & Provisions

Strong Undertone to the Butter Market

Although Production is on Increase — Export Business to New York Steadies Market—Difficult to Size up at Present—Eggs Show No Change—Some Supplies are Being Stored—New Cheese Steady; Old is Firm.

Butter situation during past week has changed around to a position that requires some study in order to correctly size it up. As indicated last week, values at many centres continued to show concessions under increased supplies. Toronto has shown further reduction while St. John, N.B., which seemed immovable in face of general decline broke sharply due to heavy arrivals on the market.

An unlooked for feature during last week was export of a lot of creamery butter from Montreal to New York where prices had moved sharply upward. This brought a check to downward movement in price. As we pointed out last week tendency would be easy until prices reached a level which would allow of surplus supplies being worked off.

What is the future of butter? It is true that production is steadily on the increase and supplies are accumulating in hands of receivers. On the other hand values across the line are holding a strong front while demand from West has relieved supplies somewhat on Eastern Canadian markets. At Cowansville, Que., on Saturday last butter sold at 27 cents as compared with 26 cents the previous Saturday.

Canadian people are apparently becoming large consumers of eggs. While production is on the increase, demand is at such a good level that prices refuse to be moved downward. There may be waverings at some country points due to temporary accumulations of supplies but most larger centres maintain a steady tone. There is no doubt that some eggs are being put into storage but at present prices it either means that some one is taking big chances or that next winter's eggs are going to be in the jewelry class.

Values on new cheese have held steady during past week. The season is late this year and it will be end of May before there is any full grass cheese. Meanwhile old cheese holds firmly.

MONTREAL.

Provisions.—A feature of the provision trade on Monday was the easier feeling which developed in the market for live hogs, and prices declined 10c to 20c per 100 lbs., on account of the more liberal offerings. At this reduction the demand from packers was active.

There is no change in the condition of the market for smoked meats, prices being well maintained under a good demand, both for local consumption and for shipment to outside points. Consequently a fairly active trade is passing.

BUTTER.—Creamery blocks are selling at 29c, and in pretty fair demand. The market on the whole is steady, and is expected to remain so, even though there are reports to the effect that record prices will be reached in the U.S. A. Will Canada be affected? That is a question for our readers.

CHEESE.—There is a good demand for Quebec cheese. It has been proven by close calculations that the Hebrews are the heaviest consumers of honey about this time, their taste being for the brown variety. So fond are they of this strong flavor that they prefer it to white even if the latter were offered at the same price.

BUTTER.—Production of butter both creamery and dairy continues to increase and prices in sympathy continue downward movement which has been in order for past two weeks. Another couple of cents has been lopped off prices and tendency is still one of easiness. While most firms, at least at the beginning of week were holding prices around values quoted, there were reports of sales of creamery as low as 25 and 26 cents. This indicates what can be expected of future although dealers do not look for "really cheap" butter. Indeed there is a firmer feeling reported from some centres of the Dominion under stronger tendency in United States markets and more interest in this line from Western Canadian points.

EGGS.—Past week has practically brought forth no change in egg prices or situation. Local wholesalers are quoting new laids at 23 to 24 cents. One firm notes price as 22 to 23 cents. One year ago they sold at 19 to 20 cents.

Dealers still agree that prices should be lower, putting forth same reasons as before but still values maintain a position little below the Easter level. Receipts are on a fair scale. Demand is good. A certain number are apparently being stored.

CHEESE. — Old cheese maintains steadiness, while new product tends slightly in opposite direction, although values at country boards have shown little easiness during past week.

Old cheese is scarce and nothing but continued steadiness is anticipated. New cheese does not appeal particularly to cheese consumers and even when it has become seasoned to certain extent, there is always a certain percentage who demand the old article.

"Be sure you sow good seed corn," says the farm journal. And be sure, Mr. Grocer and General Merchant that you sell good seed corn.

Took Advantage of the Butter Decline

How a Dealer Sells Large Quantity Through Window Display—Almost Every Order Included Butter—New Customers Secured—Emphasized the Decline in Price and Got Them Coming His Way—Never Had a Better Butter Day.

When a market has been high for a long time and is coming down, is often the psychological moment to strike out for new business. This has been illustrated many and many a time, and now that butter, after the record prices of the past winter, is on the downward trend, capital can be made out of it.

This was well illustrated in the business of W. C. Miller, Yonge Street, Toronto, during the past couple of weeks. Mr. Miller had the opportunity a couple of weeks ago to purchase at a favorable price a large quantity of butter — between two and three hundred pounds— and was able to offer it somewhat below the regular price and still have a good profit.

Quantity and Price Alluring.

He arranged a window display containing nothing but butter. It was piled in pyramid style at the back with heaps of butter in large and small rolls in front. In the window were also placed a couple of cards bearing the price. On Saturday morning it was soon seen that the passing public was much interested in butter. With the price all winter around 38 and 40 cents, and butter so scarce, it was evidently a treat for many. The new price was appealing and early in the day there was a fair sized run on the butter. Unlike a run on the bank, however, it was welcomed.

"Scarcely a delivery went to anybody's house that day," states Mr. Miller, "that didn't have a pound or two of butter. We delivered butter to residences we never sold before, and with many of these orders were included other groceries."

Orders From a Distance.

Not till late on Saturday night did the orders cease coming in. In fact phone messages came from distant parts of the city, where people had probably never heard of his store before. Customers had evidently passed the word along to their friends, and on Monday there was a big hole in the butter window.

Mr. Miller intends repeating the same method as long as he can get the butter. It has already brought him new business, and he expects to gain a number of permanent customers in this way.

The Psychological Moment.

There are many such psychological moments throughout the year. A decline in the butter market was inevitable in view of the increased production, and in the above mentioned dealer's case, this condition of affairs was forcibly exemplified in the display of such a large quantity, and at prices from 7 to 10 cents cheaper than had been paid during the winter. The tightly drawn purse-strings of the economically inclined, could withhold purchases no longer. This is human nature, and the same results can be secured in similar ways at any time.

SITUATION WANTED

TRAVELLER—SPECIALTY MANUFACTURER's traveller knowing wholesale and brokerage trade from Regina to Halifax would consider proposition for summer. Could handle output of first-class canning factory or other good quality line. Best references. Write Box 426, Canadian Grocer.

SITUATION VACANT

WANTED—TRAVELLER — BY LEADING Hamilton wholesale grocers. Ambitious young man with experience on road, or good retail clerk. Good position for a worker. Western Ontario territory. Confidential. References. Box 424, Canadian Grocer, Toronto.

BUSINESS FOR SALE

FOR SALE—RETAIL GROCERY AND Crockery Business in Manitoba City; also doing small Jobbing Trade in Confectionery and Tobacconists' Goods. Annual turnover about $125,000.00, which should easily be increased at least 50 per cent. Established twenty-five years, and have proprietary brands and valuable connections, which makes business best of its kind in Northwest. Store completely fitted with solid oak counters and cases and most up-to-date fixtures generally. Aside from book accounts, which represent only one month's business, other business assets amount to about $25,000.00. Cash preferred, but would consider 50 to 60 per cent. cash with reasonable arrangement for balance; or would sell as retail concern, taking out surplus tobaccos, etc., which would make it easier to handle; no exchange considered. Reason for selling, owner wishes to retire. This is a rare opportunity. Apply Box 425, Canadian Grocer.

CREAM TARTAR

GROCERS: Every Grocer should consult the Government Analyst's reports on Cream of Tartar, which show the strength, quality and Purity of the different kinds on the market. The analysis in every instance shows Gillett's Cream Tartar to be chemically pure. The latest bulletin on Cream of Tartar issued by the Inland Revenue Department is No. 222, and will be found to be both interesting and instructive.

LARD

Demand for pure Lard has been very good and indications are that prices will be higher. In the Summer of 1910 Lard sold at 16½c. per pound in tubs and it looks to us like history repeating itself. "Star Brand" Lard is nothing but pure Lard from good, well fed Canadian pigs and is made under Government inspection.

Facts Concerning Bovril

The fame of our immense manufactory has been built around just this one product. There are numerous imitations, but there is nothing that enjoys the reputation of BOVRIL, or that possesses its vitalizing power, or that can give the same appetizing flavor and toothsomeness when added to other foods.

The BOVRIL estates cover: in the Argentine, 438,082 acres; in Australia, 9,261,400 acres.

The Flaming Torch

CLEAN advertising—advertising as straight and true as the word from mother to son—must soon be the only advertising to which men may justly apply the name. "These goods are advertised" must carry a meaning equivalent to the sterling mark on silver. The leaders in advertising thought and merchandising efficiency are agreed that nothing less can be permitted.

A spark was struck centuries ago from which the torch of clean advertising has been lighted. "Thy neighbor as thyself" is the heart—the glowing, lambent fire whose warmth makes the blood of commerce flow with invigorating strength through the body of civilization. Who trades fairly may trade freely.

Would that every man and every woman could know the earnestness with which advertising men are passing on the torch. Men and women who were present at the public meeting in Boston last year, during the seventh annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, caught the spirit of the work. Those who are privileged to be in Dallas, Texas, while the eighth annual convention is being held in May, will thrill to an intensity of purpose not to be denied.

Leaders of thought and molders of opinion will be gathered in the beautiful southern city from May nineteenth to twenty-third. The magnificent progress of the advertising world in putting its house in perfect order will be made known by men whose work has been akin to that of the Crusaders.

Business or professional people who find it possible to attend will be given a welcome that will throw new light on what "Texas Hospitality" really means.

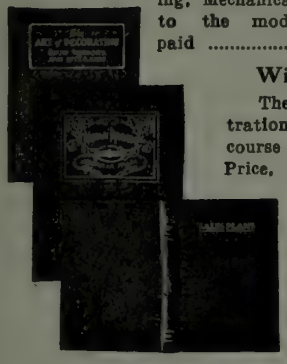
WHERE KNOWLEDGE IS POWER 'TIS FOLLY TO BE IGNORANT

Particularly

if that knowledge can be acquired at a very low cost.

Merchants, Salesmen, Ad-writers and Window Trimmers will find their efficiency greatly increased by a careful perusal of the following books.



The Art of Decorating Show Windows and Interiors

The most complete work of the kind ever published, over 400 pages, 600 illustrations; covers, to the smallest detail, the following subjects: Window Trimming, Interior Decorating, Window Advertising, Mechanical and Electrical Effects, in fact everything of interest to the modern, up-to-date merchant and decorator. Price, post paid $3.50

WindowT rimming for the Men's Wear Trade

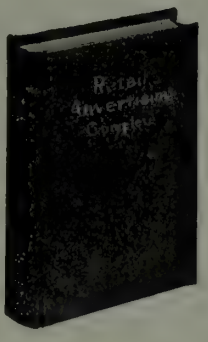
Sales Plans

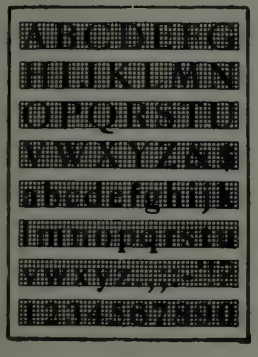
A collection of 333 successful ways of getting business, including a great variety of practical plans that have been used by retail merchants to advertise and sell goods. Sent prepaid to any address. Cloth binding $2.50



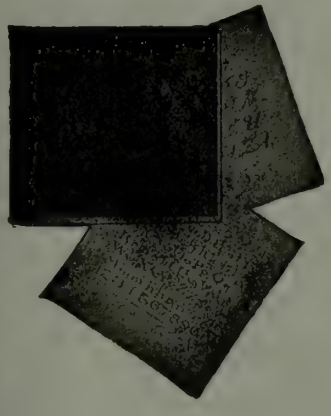
Retail Advertising Complete

This book covers every known method of advertising a retail business; and an application of the ideas it expounds cannot help but result in increased business for the merchant who applies them $1.00

Card Writers' Chart



A complete course in the art of making display and price cards and signs. Beautifully printed in six colors and bronze. Includes specially ruled practice paper. Some of the subjects treated are: First Practice, Punctuation, Composition, Price Cards, Directory Cards, Spacing, Color Combinations, Mixing Colors, Ornamentations, Materials Needed, etc. Price post paid $1.50



50 Lessons on Show Card Writing

The lesson plates are printed on cardboard and fit into the book loose leaf. This system has the advantage of enabling the student in practice to work without a cumbersome book at his elbow.

Besides the fifty lesson plates, this book contains over seventy instructive illustrations pertaining to this interesting subject and over three hundred reproductions of show cards executed by the leading show card artists of America. Bound in green cloth. Sent postpaid for $2.50

1000 Ways and Schemes to Attract Trade

A book that swells sales and increases profits. There has never before been published a book like this. It gives brief descriptions of over 1,000 ideas and schemes that have been tried by the most successful retail merchants to bring people to their stores and to sell goods. If you try a scheme every day, there will be in it enough separate and numbered suggestions to last you nearly three years without repeating a single one. A few of the ideas in one chapter: An Anniversary Scheme with Excellent Points—A Sign That Made Money for its Maker—Advertising Dodge and a Clever Salesman—A Contest that Boomed Trade—Giving Unique Publicity to a New Department—A Baby Day that Drew a Crowd—Money Makers in Many Different Lines—Plan for Introducing a New Brand of Goods that Proved a Winner—Artistic Ways of Displaying Goods—Days Devoted to a Particular Class of Customers—Many Window Trims Out of the Ordinary—In this chapter are seventy-four separate and distinct ideas that have been successfully carried out by as many different merchants. There are 13 more chapters and 934 more schemes just as good as these, 208 Pages 9½x7, and 180 Illustrations. Printed on the best white paper and bound in a handsomely ornamented cover. Price postpaid, $1.00.

For Advertising Men Only!

Will You be the Guest of Texas?

In Dallas, May 19 to 27, there will meet the strongest assemblage of advertising men ever brought together. The eighth annual convention of the A. A. C. of A. will be attended by men from every corner of the continent. The progress of the year and the problems of the day are to be made known by those whose names stand for leadership in advertising efficiency.

There is serious work to be done. Grave questions of policy are to be discussed. The advertising man who cannot be present will do well to charge some good friend to watch events closely; there'll be much of value that the printed reports will never get. The man who comes will have an opportunity to "sense" conditions and futures that will pay him twice over for the time and money represented. Many of the great national advertisers will have their captains at Dallas just to get that "sense"—to listen for the significant overtones in the roar of debate, possibly even more than to the debate itself.

Texas hospitality is to other hospitality as the big commonwealth itself is, in size, to lesser members of the Union. The native son of the Lone Star State rises to the occasion when strangers are within his gates. To say that he "entertains" them is hardly to do justice to the multitudinous dinners, smokers, auto rides, boat trips and singfests of every sort that are showered upon the happy guest. But the spirit of welcome running through all the fun is the best entertainment and the thing that sticks longest in memory. One is made to feel that "Glad to see you," in Texas, is no empty formula.

A New Idea

It is a common experience of men attending conventions to derive more benefit from a single chance conversation than from the whole round of set discourses. The talk one picks up by the way constitutes, in fact, the real value of these gatherings. Conventions, like the "lunch conferences" which Carnegie introduced in the steel business, afford an opportunity for busy men to meet and clean up a lot of ideas of the discussive kind that have accumulated in their minds. Again, the occasion is handy for long-postponed business interviews between men from different cities.

In order to systematize the coming together of men who want to meet, or could profitably meet, it is requested that those interested in special subjects, or anxious to see any one person in particular, send their names to "Texas Secretary, Room 1020, 381 Fourth Avenue, New York City." Every effort will be made to get them in touch with the individuals they name or with delegates known to be well informed on given topics.

As to Arrangements

The four days "swing around the circle" to Fort Worth, Houston, Waco, and San Antonio will be without expense to delegates, as they will be during that period the guests of the Texas Advertising Clubs. Full details regarding transportation, hotels, and the like may be had by addressing Secretary,

Facts That Speak For Themselves

LAWRASON'S SNOWFLAKE AMMONIA

London, March 13, '12

To Messrs. S. F. Lawrason & Co.
City.

Dear Sirs,—

At a meeting of the London Retail Grocers' Association last evening, a resolution was passed in which the Association expressed its appreciation of your selling policy; keeping your goods out of the cut-rate stores and the liberal advertising you are doing to our mutual benefit, and it was further resolved that each member should push the sale of your goods as much as possible.

Yours truly,
Jas. MacKenzie
Secretary.

Jno. Diprose,
President

THE GIANT FIVE CENT PACKAGE

SPRING CLEANING TIP:—All wood-work should be thoroughly washed with Lawrason's Snowflake Ammonia before painting or varnishing, to remove grease and dust. The paint or varnish will spread easily and dry quicker, also take one half less to do the work.

S. F. LAWRASON & CO., - LONDON, ONT.

A Tempting Addition to the Table will quickly appeal to all good housekeepers, and for this reason a TABLE PRODUCT requires little introductory work.

But first think of the importance of featuring an article of assured quality so that each initial sale means a Repeat Order, and then think of

DOMOLCO

The Table Molasses without a Peer.

Quality always Uniform. Package always Sanitary.

This suggestion will help you secure increased profits if you will consent to place a trial order.

DO THIS TO-DAY

Instruct your Wholesale Grocer to forward a case each No. 2 and No. 3 or write us direct.

The Dominion Molasses Co.,

LIMITED

HALIFAX, - NOVA SCOTIA

DO YOU KNOW

Why we are able not only to maintain our sales but also to increase them?

Why in spite of intense competition we continue to receive orders from the best dealers from all over the Dominion?

BECAUSE

Our guiding light in the past has been quality and it will shine as brightly in the future. On that you can rely.

Ramsay's BEST BY TEST Farm Cream Sodas

Delightfully wholesome. Are made in the "Sunshine Factory" of Canada. Their appearance on the market signalized a revolution in the biscuit industry, because dealers were formerly unable to secure sodas capable of maintaining for any length of time that crispness and delicacy which appeal to the palate.

Don't hesitate to write if our travellers do not call. We will appreciate your business and know that you will be satisfied with the goods.

OUR AIM IS TRUE

The Packers of "Thistle" Brand of fish aim only to produce the best in canned fish.

CANNED WHERE CAUGHT

The "Thistle" Brand of Canned Haddies, Fancy Lobsters, Kippered Herring and Herring and Tomato Sauce, are canned right where they are caught—at the water side. How better could you preserve the natural and delicate flavor of the fish? IMPOSSIBLE!

But that is not all, because Captain Austin has the unequalled skill of a lifetime of experience. THERE IS NO DIRT OR SLIME—NO UNCLEANLINESS TO BE FOUND IN THE "THISTLE" BRAND. Auto Delivery Curtails Delivery Expenses

Service is one of the main features which determines a merchant's patronage, with delivery the most important part. Merchants are more and more beginning to realize the many points in favor of automobile delivery, because it brings them more business and because it is cheaper than any other method.

The Menard Commercial Car

has been designed to meet the demand, and is a quiet car of great reliability, reasonable speed, with a large reserve of power and a frame of strength and size capable of carrying a load of considerable bulk and up to 1500 lbs. weight.

The design of tires used on the Menard Commercial Cars reduces the cost of maintaining tires to a nominal sum. There are many other features of the Menard that will impress it upon merchants for its superiority above all others.

Be Sure You Get the New

REDPATH

WINDOW PENNANTS

To help you "cash in" on the splendid selling features of the new 5-Pound Carton of Redpath Extra Granulated Sugar, and the vigorous advertising which we are doing for it, we are preparing a special Window Trim for you.

This consists of very attractive "Pennants" to be gummed to the inside of your window in pairs, two or three on each side. The Pennants are handsomely printed in colors, and they show the new Redpath Package in striking relief. Each Pennant is about two feet long, and as they taper toward the centre of the window, four, or even six, Pennants can be shown without blocking the view of the goods you are displaying. In fact, their bright colors catch the eyes of passers-by and set off the other goods, while they proclaim that you handle "Canada's finest sugar—at its best."

If you want your full share of the big Redpath Sugar trade you need these Pennants in your window. The supply is limited—fill in the coupon aud mail it to-day, to

MONTREAL—CARDINAL—TORONTO—BRANTFORD—VANCOUVER

Ontario R.G.A. Formulate Their Policy

First Executive Meeting Held at Brantford When Various Planks of Platform Were Laid—Many Legislative Reforms to be Gone After—Cost of Doing Business Will be Studied—To Work for Fairer Profits.

Staff Correspondence.

Brantford, Ont., May 16.—The first executive meeting of the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association was held in this city on Wednesday night of last week. There was a good offering of practical suggestions put forward by every member present for the welfare of the grocery trade throughout the province.

What is considered to be a strong platform, embodying the aims and ideas of the association was drawn up, each plank being accorded careful discussion.

Work to be Attempted.

A stand aginst wholesalers selling direct to consumers, an attempt to amend the present debtors' law with regard to the garnishment of wages, as well as that whereby merchants have to bear the cost of inspection of scales are some of the headliners in the formulated platform.

The grocers also want an agreement with wholesalers whereby retailers will receive 1 per cent. discount for accounts paid by 15th of following month, and they believe manufacturers should allow a profit to the grocer of at least 20 per cent. of a popular selling price. Encouragement of home trading, more careful study of cost of doing business and greater co-operation among members of the trade are other things advocated.

President D. W. Clark called the meeting to order shortly after eight o'clock, pointing out that they were there to formulate the policy of the association. The need of a good strong one, as well as the co-operation of every member in carrying out the policy adopted, was emphasized.

Suggestions and discussion on "what we stand for" were next taken up, resulting in the adoption of a policy. The platform will be printed and distributed to the trade throughout the province with a letter urging dealers in different centres to form associations and affiliate with the provincial body, so that they may be strong enough to be of weight in matters taken up with manufacturers, wholesalers and legislative bodies.

"What We Stand For."

The following was the policy formulated:—

"We believe that all groceries and general merchandise should be distributed to the consumer through the channels of the retail merchant who maintains a store and carries a stock of goods, and that a strong association of retailers will impress the manufacturers and wholesalers with the advisability of refusing to sell to hotels, restaurants and other consumers.

"We believe that peddlers and transient tradesmen should pay a liberal license for the privilege of competing with established merchants who are bearing their share of the taxes of the community, and that local organizations should be most zealous in having local by-laws enacted and enforced to this end.

JNO. DIPROSE, London, Ont.

Who Becomes First Vice-President of the Ontario R. G. A. to succeed E. J. Ryan Who Has Resigned to Go Into Manufacturing Business.

Opposed to Parcels Post.

"We believe in encouraging the developmest of home-trading and in opposing in every legitimate way, the mail order houses, particularly are we opposed to extending the parcels post priviliges.

"We believe the retail grocers should co-operate for the purpose of adopting more uniform rules of credit and establishing better facilities for obtaining information as to reliability of debtors.

Uniform Early Closing.

"We believe in adopting uniform early closing hours and better observation of public holidays, so that merchants may have more time for enjoyment and recreation.

"We believe that an agreement should be entered into with wholesalers, whereby retail grocers will receive 1 per cent. discount for accounts paid by the 15th of following month.

Study Cost of Doing Business.

"We believe in encouraging retail grocers to give more careful study to the matter of cost of doing business, so that they may see the folly of selling goods on too close a margin over invoice price.

"We believe that whereas the inspection of weights and measures is for the protection and benefit of the public, that the costs of inspection should be borne by the Government and not by the merchants, as at present.

"We believe that the existing debtors' law with regards to the powers of garnishment of wages should be amended in the interest of the merchants.

Want 20 Per Cent. Gross Profit.

"We believe that manufacturers of goods of proprietary brands should see that the price of these goods to retailers will allow of a profit to the grocer of at least 20 per cent. of the popular selling price.

"We believe that through the medium of association work retail grocers can derive great educational benefits. By coming in contact with other grocers, each is enabled to secure the benefit of the experience of fellow dealers and profit by their ideas on trade problems of mutual interest.

"We believe that when strongly organized, the retail grocers can exert a powerful influence in local, provincial and Dominion affairs to the improvement of the conditions under which their business is carried on.

In Application for Charter.

Added to this are the following purposes and objects as set forth by the application which the association is making for a provincial charter:

(a) Promotion of the industrial and commercial interests of retail grocers of Ontario.

(b) The collection and publication of information and statistics relating to or concerning such interests.

(c) The procuring and furnishing to its members of information as to the solvency of persons who deal with any of its members.

(d) The arbitration and settlement of trade disputes arising between any of its members.

Fifty Years' Business in the One Store

Story of How a Country Merchant Built Up a Profitable Trade in Cross Road Establishment—A Reputation for Honesty—Methods Followed to Attract Business—How Mail Order Catalogues Were Handled — What Taking Discounts Meant.

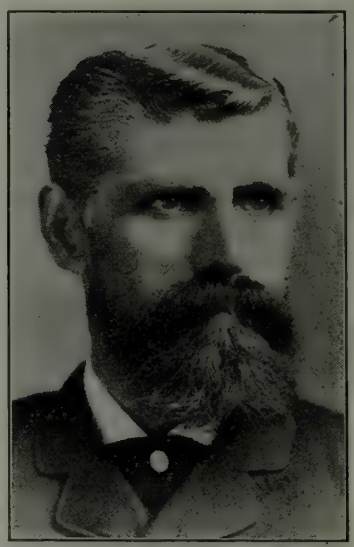
"When I bought this business from D. G. Case I paid him $2,000 cash for the stock. There was no inventory taken; none was necessary. As a customer I dealt with him all my life, and my father before me dealt with him, and no one ever knew of a dishonest act he has ever done."

Although D. G. Case, of Glanford, Wentworth County, Ontario, does not say so himself, yet it is quite apparent from the above words of his successor, Jas. T. Marr, that this matter of honesty has had much to do with the success he has made in the retail business during the past fifty years. Mr. Marr admits that if the usual strict methods in business dealings had taken their course, he would have seen the value of the stock tabulated, piece by piece, but Mr. Case had told him $2,000 was a fair price—in fact the fairness leaned a little the buyer's way—and that was enough. The man's word was as good as his bond.

Fifty Years in One Place.

Fifty years in business? Yes, that is the time Mr. Case has been an active general merchant; and, moreover, this half-century was spent in the one spot—the little village of Glanford, some seven or eight miles from Hamilton, on the Caledonian Road.

Now climbing up in years towards the octogenarian mark, this man has seen many changes in business methods come and go, as well as changes ordinarily expected among the inhabitants of his township made by the ravages of time. He was born in Wentworth County, and it was in 1862, when in his early twenties, that his uncle persuaded him to open the store he was destined to operate so long. It had been previously run by a man named McLean, the father of W. F. McLean, M.P. Things began to prosper from the beginning, and soon he bought the location from his uncle. Since that time, year in and year out, for fifty years, he made it his endeavor to build up the business on fair, honest, sound principles. He retired on May 1st, and to-day his neighbors say his holdings can be estimated somewhere in the six figure column. The original investment was a very modest few hundred.



D. G. CASE, Glanford, Ont.

The Business Foundation Stones.

Mr. Case ascribes "close attention to business," "stocking good goods," "selling at reasonable prices," and "holding small stock, but a good assortment," as the principal reasons for his success. It must, of course, not be supposed that what he is worth at the present time are the bank deposits from the cash register. As the money came in it was wisely invested, chiefly in mortgages.

One of the biggest competitors Mr. Case has had to deal with have been the mail order houses. With his place of business so close to Hamilton, and with Toronto mail order concerns sending their catalogues into the district regularly, he naturally had to study the problem. By attending to the business closely, studying the wants and likes of the community, and buying carefully, he was able to supply his customers with the goods he knew they should have. Always careful in the selection of his stock, he kept a good assortment, and arranged goods in the store so that they could be easily seen.

Studied the Catalogues Himself.

While the farmers looked over mail order catalogues, they also studied his goods and prices, and found the goods he carried in the grocery, dry goods, hardware, and boot and shoe departments to be on the whole cheaper than they could purchase elsewhere. Once a customer was convinced of this he always remained one. Then again no mail order house could give the attention and personal service that Mr. Case could. He acted in an advisory capacity, and as he had long since got the name of acting on the square, his selections and advice were weighed with care. He, too, studied the catalogues and knew all about the prices and goods of the mail order houses.

Undoubtedly, in a larger community, Mr. Case's progress, based on his business ability, would have been more rapid. With a stock running at various times all the way from $3,500 to $5,000, this was turned over quarterly. Considering the small size of the place and the fact that Glanford is just a cross-road village surrounded by a farming community, this must be taken as a good showing.

Annual Discount Savings.

Expenses in a store so located are not great, and besides every opportunity was taken to save money on buying.

"I have made it a point," states Mr. Case, "to take my discounts ever since I have been able. I paid cash and got the best price going."

He calculates that each year he saved in this way $500. In ten years that would mean a saving of $5,000—quite a substantial sum.

Gave the Farmers the Best.

It was a good many years ago that he discovered farmers were more interested in good goods than in the inferior. Since that time it has been his policy to get the quality goods and give his customers the best he could buy. Too many merchants, he maintains, purchase inferior goods, and while they may be able to fool some people some times they can't fool everybody always. Once the customer knows he is not getting the best going, he is inclined to give his trade to the catalogue houses.

So far as competitors' prices were concerned, he paid no attention to them. He ran his own business. He bought for the best prices he could, marked the goods at a fair but not extortionate profit, and didn't have to cut prices to beat out the mail order houses. In a country store like his, operating expenses are low, so that he could figure fairly closely above cost.

Tendency Towards Cash Trade.

Business methods have changed since Mr. Case entered his life's work in 1862. Forty and fifty years ago two-thirds of the business was done on credit. Farmers bought almost everything on time, and settled once or twice a year, usually in the autumn when the harvest was threshed. They exchanged produce for goods. The science of farming has, however, made much progress. Mixed farming is in vogue, and money can be secured more frequently, so that when he retired from business, Mr. Case found that not more than a tenth of his sales were on credit.

Farmers, he says, are going out of the butter-making business. It is some years since cheese factories became a factor in Wentworth County, and then the majority sent their milk there. In more recent times some of the cheese factories have gone out of business, and now the milk and cream are taken into Hamilton every day to be used there or shipped on to Toronto. The difficulty of getting hired help on the farm—both male and female—has been one reason for the evolution to the present system. Instead of buying butter from the farmers to send on to the city, Mr. Case last winter had to buy it from the city for sale to the farmers.

Dealings With One House.

It is an interesting fact that when Mr. Case gave up active business life the other day, he was dealing with the wholesale house of Balfour, Smye & Co., Hamilton, with whom and whose predecessors, Brown, Gillespie & Co., he has dealt with for the past half century. Every week, as regularly as the seasons revolved, he was accustomed to make his weekly trip to Hamilton, and his friends there will certainly miss his familiar and welcome figure. He has purchased a neat little home less than a stone's throw from the old store, and there will enjoy with ease the fruits of his lengthy labors.

GIVING PROMPT ATTENTION TO CUSTOMERS

A Dealer Who Makes It a Point to Drop Everything Moment Some One Enter Store—Has Trained Clerks in Same Way—The Customer First, He Says.

Dresden, Ont., May 16—(Special).—"The first and most important item in the grocery business," declared a leading grocer the other day, "is the customer. At least, that's my view of it; and I have always aimed to give every customer the promptest possible attention, and to train my clerks to do the same thing.

"I've noticed on going into other stores that clerks, and merchants too, are often dilatory. The trouble seems to run throughout the entire staff of a store, rather than to just crop out in individual clerks. I daresay the clerks imitate the proprietor. Now, I think that if there's anything a customer appreciates, it is a merchant who gets a hustle on the minute the buyer enters the store, and proceeds to transact business without needless delay. Most men and women, even if their time is worth precious little, object to having it dawdled away by the individual behind the counter.

Not a Wise Theory.

"Of course I know that quite a few merchants go by rule. Their rule is to finish one task before they tackle another. If the clerk is arranging some canned goods on a counter, and a customer comes in when the job is half done, the clerk is required to finish the canned goods before waiting on the customer. Now, that's a really beautiful theory—finish one thing before you tackle another—but it's merely theory, and if it has some advantages in actual practice, it also has a lot more disadvantages.

"My way of doing things is different, and it brings me business, which is the actual test of any method. I have just one rule—it is that the customer comes first. If there are two customers, the first customer comes first. Suppose I'm back here in the office, opening the mail, when a customer comes in, and all the clerks are busy. I drop the mail at once, go to the front, and attend to the customer. Or, if a clerk is brushing off a show case, he drops his brush the minute the customer opens the door. He doesn't wait for the customer to come down to him—he starts at once, and meets the customer half way. And generally it's the chap behind the counter that speaks first, too. I want every person who comes into the store to feel that he's welcome, even if he only comes to use the phone.

Welcomed by Nearest Clerk.

"I have another practice, and that is, if we're all busy and an extra customer enters, the nearest clerk speaks to the newcomer at once, and then goes on to finish waiting upon the customer in hand. Of course, that wouldn't work out in a big store, but my place is small, as you see, and my store people know pretty nearly everyone by name, so it comes natural."

SELLING MORE GOODS IN SUMMER.

There are certain grocery stores in Montreal which sell more goods in summer than in winter. Rather than discharge some of their employes when the warm weather arrives, they take on more assistants to look after the increased trade.

This is because these firms go after the campers' and cottagers' trade. They have made a deep study of how best to serve the people who patronize some of Quebec's summer resorts and the natural outcome is that they are kept busy.

While it may not be possible for every dealer to do more business in the hot season than during the fall and winter, those favorably situated can secure a great deal of the trade of cottagers, campers and tourists by going after it. On another page of this issue are some suggestions on the goods that can be readily sold and pointers on how to go about it.

The Montreal grocers above referred to go to the trouble of packing and shipping to points of destination. They know just what to do and how to do it, and thus relieve the tourist and traveler from all onus and worry connected with transportation. They get paid, of course, for this service, as well as make a profit on the goods themselves and do a good summer trade.

There is a great deal of this extra business going every summer. It won't come to anybody of its own accord, but is quite susceptible to gentle persuasion if gone after.

MONEY IN THE BY-PRODUCTS.

A good deal of money is being made by some grocers out of the by-products that accrue about the store. J. McParland, of Gananoque, Ont., has a method of making a little extra money out of one of these by-products which perhaps is news to a great many. It is lead paper.

Many of the packages received have lead paper for packing, and this sells to the local junk dealers at from 1½ to 2 cents per pound in the raw state. But Mr. McParland does not sell it in this way. He has a large soap kettle in the back yard, in which he refines the lead paper. There is always a certain amount of wood lying around from broken boxes, etc., and this is the fuel used. At the same time the back yard is regularly freed from any unnecessary combustible material.

When the lead paper boils the refuse, which rises to the top, is skimmed off and the residue, lead, is sold for four and five cents per pound. Mr. McParland sells in the neighborhood of 200 lbs. in a year.

There are many other methods by which the by-products can be disposed of with profit. A few years ago dealers used to give away soap, biscuit, canned goods, boxes, etc. Now they sell them and make a litle extra money, which usually is clear profit.

Waste paper is still another means of getting an extra income. The T. Eaton Co., Toronto, who are continually out after new and economical methods, make probably $9,000 or $10,000 a year out of waste paper. They have paper baling presses in a separate room, and all waste paper is promptly baled.

If every advantage is taken to market the by-products in the grocery store, a considerable sized nest egg will be the result at the end of the year.

A VETERAN IN THE TRADE.

Any man who has been in the retail business for half a century and who has remained in the one store for that length of time, must necessarily command attention. When he has made a big success of the business; when by constructive methods he has secured and held trade that has been going to mail order houses and other competitors, his methods are worth close study.

D. G. Case, of Glanford, Wentworth County, Ontario, was such a merchant. On the first of May, when he stepped out of the store he had operated for fifty years, he could look back on a successful and honest business life. His trade was not large, his store being located on the side of a country road. But this makes it all the more interesting that he is now in a position to retire from active business life and enjoy the reward of his work.

The story is told in this issue of methods he used and of the changes in conditions since he first began business. The fact that he has been a general merchant for fifty years in the one spot constitutes pretty nearly a record. The Grocer would be glad to hear of other successful veterans in the trade who have overcome the difficulties that beset the trail of the retail dealer.

STUDYING COMPETITORS' METHODS.

The advantages of a retail dealer getting out among his competitors cannot be questioned. There are some, however, who do not take full benefit from their experiences. They visit other towns and stores, but instead of studying methods, displays, etc., closely, take a superficial view of everything, and return with nothing.

No keen business man can step into another's store without learning something. If he is observant, there will be features about the store interior, the equipment, the attitude of the dealer in serving customers, the display of goods or the store appearance, that will teach him something new. Many a man who cannot see faults in his own methods will readily detect them in other stores and profit thereby.

The writer knows of one dealer who, whenever he is away from home, always makes it a point to call on as many confreres in the trade as possible. He observes the equipment, the display, the character of goods handled and notices the movements of the men behind the counter. He learns from both their commendable methods and their faults, and returns better equipped in knowledge of his own business.

Methods of doing business are more important than simply a history of progress. Readers of this paper will no doubt long since have noticed the value we attach to the methods of men — how they have done this and that to make their business successful — rather than a history of when they began business, how often they have enlarged their stores and how many clerks and delivery men they now employ.

Money makers and time and money savers are what every dealer wants to know about, and he should study these with every available opoprtunity.

PROFITS MUST BE MADE.

No dealer should be a slot machine. Some undoubtedly are, but the trade is gradually working away from this characteristic. Merchants are realizing that their own interests must be considered if they are to make business successes, and they are getting profits on the goods they sell.

The business dealer now-a-days is selling profitable goods, and good goods, regardless whether or not they are known to the consumer. The reason is, he has the confidence of the people of his community. He is considered an authority on food products by his customers and his advice is taken.

In order to live, the dealer must undoubtedly get a fair profit. Is a business dealer likely, therefore, to oppose his own interests by stocking, displaying, advertising and handing out those goods which do not bear him a just profit, turnover considered? Manufacturers have found this out in many cases to their sorrow. While at first they may make some success and a good margin of profit, there can be no permanent success without the expenditure of huge sums of money in a campaign to "force" the dealer.

The Canadian retailer is as big and broad a class as exists anywhere in the community. Only the weaker section of the trade will conform to the manufacturer's wishes when he tries to force it to sell at a loss. The manufacturer who allows a fair profit to the dealer, who co-operates with him in every way, and who interests his customers in his product, is the one who reaps permanent advantages. When such goods are asked for, the dealer has no right to substitute if their quality is known, but he certainly cannot be supposed to get behind any product the manufacturer of which uses him merely as a tool to hand over the goods when called upon.

The grocer who gets some new goods in and sells them at a certain price, only to receive the delayed invoice a few days after to find he has sold them at a loss, will no doubt have feelings somewhat akin to Mark Twain on one occasion. When Mark Twain was editor of a Nevada newspaper somebody sent him a turkey with no card attached. The editor ate the bird. Next day he received a letter saying: "Can you tell us what the turkey we are sending you, died of? There's a bet on about it."

Beating Competition--Blow Your Own Horn

"Do to the Other Fellow What He Would Do to You, But Do It Fust"—Advertising Against Price Cutting — Methods Suggested for Dealers in Towns Closely Connected With Each Other.

*By Henry Johnson, Jr.

I am using my title advisedly. I ask you to note it carefully. Too much is said about "meeting competition." You want to beat it. In thinking this out, too, remember the pugilistic "four rules," which run about this way: 1. Hit first. 2. Hit first. 3. Hit first. 4. Keep on hitting. David Harum expressed it in another way, as noted above, and he was just as correct in his suggestion. The man who gets there in any endeavor does not wait to see what the other fellow will do. He sets the pace himself. Now, here is the story:

A grocer in Waterloo, Ont., writes as follows: "Berlin, our neighboring town, soon to be a city, has its share of grocery stores as has Waterloo, also. I am giving you a few statistics, then you can judge for yourself. Berlin has a population of 15,200. It has 26 grocery stores but no general stores handling groceries. Waterloo has a population of 4,500, with 10 grocery stores and 3 general stores handling groceries. Some of the Berlin groceries have special lists for Thursday which they advertise in Wednesday's issue of the two daily papers. Waterloo has a semi-weekly paper, issued on Tuesdays and Fridays. Up to now none of the Waterloo grocers have regular special lists on any particular day, one reason being that the town paper is not issued on Wednesday. I want to be on the right track to be a successful merchant. Can you give me any light on this problem? That certain Waterloo people are buying groceries in Berlin on Thursdays is a well-known fact among the grocers here. I do not want to plunge into cutting prices and then have a cut rate war on groceries in our town, but something should be done to keep Waterloo shoppers from buying groceries in the larger town."

The Exisiting Conditions.

With this communication comes a big clipping whereon about 175 items are listed as "A Very Interesting List of Specials" for the coming Thursday. All of these seem to be listed at cut prices though I am not familar with most of the brands.

Thus we have an outline of the actual condition and, as we must face the situation and find a way out, we must analize a bit to begin with. So let us do what my correspondent does not seem to have done—size up what we have to work with.

We have one town of 15,200, with 26 grocery distributors. That gives us one store for each 585 of population, which is more people to the store than the general average throughout the country. We have another town of 4,500 with 13 distributors, or 346 to the store. That is much more nearly the general average. But, while all this is true, we are better off than we appear to be, so far as Waterloo is concerned, because these towns are separated only by a bridge. Thus, for mercantile purposes, they are one town. Figuring that way we have a population of 19,700, with 39 distributors; an average of 505 people to each store. That is one point.

Three Newspapers to Consider.

Next, because of this condition, there are actually three newspapers at hand—two dailies and one semi-weekly. These are open to all merchants in both towns. Note that carefully. Do not overlook the fact that, if you plan to use Berlin papers, Berlin merchants can also use Waterloo papers. Thus, you must carefully analyze the character of all those papers and use the one, or two, or all three, depending on the conclusion to which your analysis may lead you. Again, you must study the character of the readers of all papers, because ads. suitable for one kind of constituency are not necessarily the most effective with another kind. For instance: Short, snappy offerings are generally best for the morning papers—offerings to be glanced at and gone after promptly. Evening ads. may be more detailed, more talkative, more intimate; because the family circle is thus reached when the day's work is over, and the atmosphere is one of quiet leisure. Evening is the time for "good, easy reading." It is the proper time to tell pleasant little stories about your store.

Necessarily I make these suggestions generally. It must be up to you to study conditions and get the true character of your papers down fine, so you can use them each to its best advantage.

A Resume of the Past.

Now, go back a bit. I amagine that there was a time when the Berlin merchants did not advertise weekly bargains. Then they began to do it. In the beginning there was little permanent effect. That is, goods were sold on those offerings, but it was sometime before any habit was formed which led people to plan to purchase specially on those bargain days—to save up their wants for Thursday. During that time, I take it, Waterloo grocers paid little attention to what was going on. Gradually the effect was apparent, and Waterloo awakened to the condition which presently obtains.

Advice on Taking the Lead.

Now note: Conditions are of comparatively slow growth, and they are always the result of growth and develop- Those Berlin men kept their plan going, persistently, until now they seem to have Waterloo "going" in another way. What to do? Follow the lead? By no means. Make a lead of your own. Have the patience and persistency to dig until you hit the right lead. Then have the same kind of patience and perseverance to follow that lead steadily until you hit the "pay dirt." After that, continue to keep just ahead of the other fellow, hunting new leads all the time.

Again, Berlin adopted the very obvious, easiest and therefore most vulnerable policy of price-appeal. All through the list submitted I find emphasized just one thing—price, cheapness, cheapness, price. I say this after careful scrutiny and notwithstand that I find here and there the usual, stereotyped reference to quality, because such references are wrong, if they have to purchase goods like the rest of us. For instance we see:—"Finest quality sardines, regular 15c; special, per tin, 10c." We all know that the finest quality of sardines cost more than 15c per tin, and if any profit at all is to be made this statement is wrong; and any statement that is wrong is a chicken that will surely be plucked and come home to roost minus all its pin-feathers on some sad day. Again; "Mince meat, extra high quality, nothing better, special per pound, 10c." Any comment called for on that? Another: "Finest quality citron peel grown, per pound 18c." Does not the really finest citron cost more than 18c? And thus it goes all through this list.

What Would a Customer Do?

To arrive at what you shall do, first put yourself in the position of your customers in Waterloo. You will observe first, that you find a good deal being said by the Berlin men while you get no information whatever from Waterloo merchants. Therefore, you are apt to conclude that Waterloo has nothing to say, and you naturally look toward Berlin.

Jump back into your own shoes again, after having taken that glance into the psychology of your customers, and your first thought will be that you must throw off your dumbness and become articulate—you must tell your friends what you have to sell. But do not for a moment think of cutting prices. No: your customers will not respond to that nearly as quickly as to offerings of greater varieties, including always the best you have. Say it is prunes. The Berlin man makes a point about prunes at 7c, probably calling them "the best." You have 7c prunes also, but you do not call them the best—you call them the cheapest you have. So offer your 15c prunes, with a neat description of their quality. Explain how 30-40 prunes got their description—so many average, to the pound. Explain further that 30-40 represents the most economical division between fruit and pits. Recommend these as the very best and really cheapest to use. Below this description list your others as "best of their respective sizes." Note that I start at the top and work down. That is the right way to list all your goods.

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met.

Will Mean Steady Growth.

Work along this line all through your stock, listing up-to-date goods at fair prices, being careful to make your statements accurate and always absolutely true. Very soon you will begin to feel the effect—no hurrah about it; no great "rush" of trade, but something very much better than that—a good, steady growth in your circle of reliable, desirable customers. Remember the duck. She lays the larger, sweeter, richer egg. But she says nothing about it. The hen lays the smaller egg, but she persistently advertises—tells what she has done. Hence the hen gets full credit, while the duck comes in a slow second. Be a hen in your business. Let some other fellow play the duck. Only, be sure that your egg is worth all the advertising you give it.

It is not possible for me to more than skim over these suggestions within the limits of this article. If I have not helped enough, ask me again. But, as the parable teaches by analogy, I am going to try to hint through another story how you may work things out.

Sold the Better Oyster.

Moorehead, Minnesota, and Fargo, North Dakota, are contiguous towns with only a river between them. I had the pleasure of visiting them one time when in the West. A merchant in each of those towns bought the same kind of oysters, from the same grower, of the same size and quality. The Fargo man added a moderate quantity of water to his stock and continued to sell at the old price of, say, 40c a quart. The Moorhead man sold his stock just as he got it, for 60c a quart. Pretty soon the Fargo man seemed to be getting the better of the trade. Did the Moorhead man follow his competitor? He did not. He took a certain proportion of his oysters and added water to them—just about the same proportion as the Fargo man. Then he labeled them: "Fargo Style Oysters, 40c Quart," while retaining the old description on his remaining stock. So his best oysters were labelled: "Absolutely Unwatered Oysters, 60c Quart."

Then he noticed what any observing grocer will notice in similar circumstances—that very few buyers wanted to purchase water at 40c a quart; that, having both kinds, he was on a par with his competitor whereas if he had only one kind he would have been a "high-priced man." See? Try this thing out in your own store on eggs, butter, onions, potatoes, anything you like.

ONTARIO R. G. A. FORMULATE THEIR POLICY.

(e) Generally all such other lawful and similar objects for promoting the trade interests of its members, as may from time to time be determined by the association.

Will Begin Campaign Now.

Toronto was decided on as the head offices of the association, while it was decided to leave the assessment system, on which there was some discussion, as set on at organization meeting. A resolution was passed that matters dealt with in "What we stand for" be taken up at once, and a continuous campaign be maintained to bring about the objects aimed at.

Work of Organization.

Other resolutions passed were:

"That expenses of members of executive to all meetings be paid out of provincial association funds.

"That attendance of some members of the provincial association be tendered free for organization of local associations, and that expenses be paid by provincial association.

"That the secretary write the secretary of Wholesale Grocers' Guild informing that body that the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association has been formed and that it is now prepared to deal with all matters pertaining to the grocery trade.

"That the secretary communicate with Wholesale Grocers' Guild, urging that body to again adopt 1 per cent. discount for payment of accounts by 15th of month. He will also advise each local asociation to take the matter up with local wholesalers."

First Vice Resigns.

During the evening the resignation of E. J. Ryan, of London, from the first vice-presidency of the association was read. Mr. Ryan is leaving the grocery business to enter into a cigar manufacturing enterprise, and his resignation was received with deep regret by the executive, as he was considered to be an active advocate of the provincial organization.

John Diprose, of London, who is president of the London association, was elected to fill the vacancy. The appointment of a member to executive to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Diprose's promotion was left over.

Members of the executive in attendance at the meeting were: D. W. Clark and Wm. C. Miller, of Toronto; Thos. Shaw and Jno. Diprose, of London; J. A. McIntosh and Jas. Main, of Hamilton; W. J. Mellen, Jas. Burns and J. E. Church, of Brantford; J. D. Wisdom, Barrie; Jno. Scott, Woodstock, and Chas. McCausland, Paris.

Note and Comment.

Legislation committee under Jno. Forth, of Hamilton, are to look after drawing up of by-laws and constitution.

Members of executive have offered their services in organizing local associations.

All members of association are welcome at executive meetings, whether they are members of executive or not.

Everyone regretted withdrawal of E. J. Ryan, of London, from 1st vice-presidency.

A WELL REASONED ANSWER.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—In regard to your question, For how much must a dealer sell a dozen of preserved fruit that cost him $2, in order to make 10 per cent., after allowing 15 per cent. for cost of doing business. Selling price always consists of: Cost of goods, cost of doing business and the profit desired, and that this selling price always is a hundred per cent.; therefore if cost of doing business amounts to 15 per cent., and his profit desired shall amount to 10 per cent., there would be only left 75 per cent. for the cost of the dozen of fruit.

Therefore if 75 p.c. is equal to.....$2.00
Then 1 p.c. would be..... 2.00

75

And 100 p.c. or selling price will be:

$$\frac{$2.00 \times 100}{75} = $2.666,$$

Or, answer: The dealer must sell the dozen of fruit for $2.67.

Lesson 15---Course in Cardwriting

Presenting the Up-and-down Style of Roman Lettering Executed With the Round Writing or Square Pointed Pen—Favored Style of Lettering for Fine Show Card Work and Price Tickets.

J. C. Edwards. Copyrighted, Canada, 1911.

LARGE glaring letters make good signs, but not show cards for modern, refined advertising. Some stores, of course, want bold, black letters, but the up-to-date store that caters to the better trade does not want such screaming announcements with their display. This is where pen lettering comes in for a goodly share of recognition.

The Pen for Small Work.

For price tickets and for the finer grade of work the round writing or square-pointed pen, in its various sizes, is a prime favorite with up-to-the-minute card writers. There are two different makes, but practically no difference exists between them, so that a cardwriter cannot make any mistake in asking for the square-pointed pen for show card lettering.

It is Not Mechanical.

Pen lettering has not the mechanical appearance that the shading pen, that double-pointed impractical contrivance, has. Like other pens, the lettering pen is steel, but there is not the mechanical, ready-made look about the work that the shading pen work has, whether poorly or well executed.

The Pen and the Sizes.

In style this pen is made much the same as ordinary pens, with a fairly deep hollow of oval shape in the centre which retains the ink. The point of the pen is square, but not square across. It slants a trifle to the right as you hold it in position. This allows for the natural position while writing with the right hand. A left-handed person would find considerable difficulty in learning to operate the pen owing to this fact. The pen is made in about eleven sizes ranging from 1, the broadest, which is about one-eighth inch wide, to No. 6, a pen practically no wider than a narrow stub and of little use to card writers.

The Best Sizes to Use.

For the larger cards, where a letter stroke is needed about one-eighth inch wide, the No. 1 pen is the best; then I would suggest Nos. 1½, 2½ and 3½, and for very fine work a No. 4; anything smaller than that is little better than an ordinary pen. You will notice in the illustration the sizes of the work done by the different pens. This picture, of course, is greatly reduced, but you can get an idea of the comparative sizes of the strokes each pen makes.

Holding the Pen.

Take the pen holder (any ordinary holder with sufficient grip to insure against slipping) in your hand as illustrated above without cramping the fingers. Allow the hand to rest lightly on the side of the small finger, between the tip and the first joint. Let the pen rest firmly on the cardboard at the angle suggested by the illustration. Note the stroke and the position of the pen point. The fine line of the stroke is made by the edge of the pen and the wide part by the width. Don't turn the pen to accomplish this. Just practice. Practice a sure, quick stroke and you will get cleaner edges on your lines.

Eccentric Letters Not Practical.

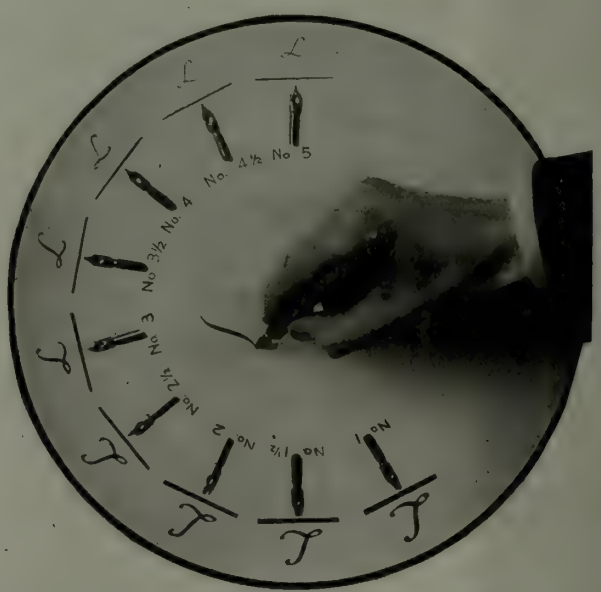
You will notice in the plate that the letters "L" and "X" are eccentric, or are carried beyond their usual face area, either over or under the line. This may be used to some extent, but it is not practical for all styles of show cards. The right hand strokes of "V" and "Y" may also be made the same as the "X."

The first or top ticket shows the inscription and the price of equal strength. In this case one is as important as the other and should catch the eye at one time. To do this, it is unwise to have a long catch phrase; something short and crisp is better. The second ticket gives prominence to the price, which stands out larger and is the first to attract one's attention. The lower ticket, while it quotes the price, does not tend to bring it out as the main feature, but rather invites your attention to style or quality of the article. A ticket like this is quite in keeping with the first style showing.

Many and varied are the styles and sizes of price tickets attached to articles on display, but the regulation ticket is made according to a scale. A full size sheet of cardboard measures 22 inches by 28 inches, a half sheet measures 14 inches by 22 inches, the longest way being divided in each case; the quarter size is 11 by 14 inches, eighth size is 7 by 11 inches, and the sixth, as shown above, is 5½ inches by 7 inches. The last named is the best size for ticket for large articles such as clothing. Every card writer should use his best judgment in selecting tickets for the various articles and it is often advisable to vary them by way of relieving monotony.

Always carry out one idea throughout an alphabet. When you commence to make one style of letter such as ending the first stroke of the lower case "a" with a spur, always carry this point out in such letters as "h," "d," "k," and so on; but if you make it rounding, do the same with the rest of the letters where a letter ends with a complete stop for it is one of the card writer's best friends.

Try this lettering with the square-pointed pen as shown above and practice it diligently until it is mastered, as the above mentioned.



The pens here shown with the size of each marked and the comparative width of work done by them. The proper position of the pen in the hand while lettering is demonstrated.

Current News of the Week

Quebec and Maritime Provinces.

A. B. Dupuis, Limited, wholesale grocers, Montreal, have been incorporated at $50,000.

Hudon, Hebert & Co., Limited, Montreal, have found it necessary to add to their premises, and have secured additional space.

The remains of F. W. Thompson, late 1st vice-president and managing director of Ogilvie Flour Mills, Limited, are expected in Montreal on Sunday next. It is also expected that the funeral will take place on the following day.

The Canada Gazette announces the incorporation of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refineries, Limited, with a capital stock of $10,000,000. A. Baumgarten, the president of the St. Lawrence Company, will not leave the business, as was stated some time ago by some. He has been connected with it for more than 30 years—since its inception in 1879.

The matter of early closing in St. John, N. B., for the summer months is again being considered. A meeting was held last week at which the promoters of the early closing policy expressed themselves as being hopeful of seeing all stores in the city with few exceptions closed after 7 p.m. every day except Saturday and during the period of activity about Christmas time. At the recent session of the local legislature an amendment to the early closing enactment which last summer by the police magistrate was declared ultra vires, was made by which it is thought there will be a more definite understanding and more general sympathy with the movement than was the case last year. The smaller groceries, the corner shops, so-called, are provided for in the enactment, and special provision is made regarding them.

On Thursday, May 16th, Montreal had an opportunity of inspecting the "Made in Canada" train, while at Ottawa today the Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden is expected to inspect it. The "Made in Canada Train" is truly Canadian right from the front of engine to last car, having been constructed at the C.P.R. Angus shops, and the exhibits it will carry will all be of Canadian make and will be furnished by manufacturers from the various provinces. One car will be furnished as a nome, the car having been divided into a parlor, living room, dining room, bedroom and kitchen. The object lesson of this is that a home can be thoroughly furnished from "Made in Canada" goods. Montreal exhibitors catering to the grocery and allied trade are:—The Edwardsburg Starch Co., the Walter M. Lowney Co., and the Smart Bag Co.

Ontario.

Thomas Vance has been appointed manager of newly organized Toronto Fruit Auction Co., Herbert England is auctioneer.

The Drummers' Snack Club executive are holding a meeting to-day (May 17) at Georgetown, Ont., to talk over their annual outing in July.

T. E. Ryerson & Co., fruiterers, Brantford, are adding groceries. Harry Weeks will have charge of the grocery department.

R. J. E. McCrea, of J. A. McCrea & Son, Guelph, Ont., accompanied by his wife is on a holiday trip to Winnipeg.

H. J. Colwill, general merchant, Arthur, Ont., is a great horse fancier. At four different horse shows at which he has exhibited his horses he has carried off three firsts and one second prize. He also has some excellent prize winning Jersey cattle.

The Dominion Abattoir, Limited, a newly organized company, will erect a $75,000 building at Pottersburg, near London, Ont., on the site of the Canadian Packing Co., wiped out several years ago by fire. The company is headed by E. Rechnitzer, formerly manager of the Canadian Packing Co.

The grocers in London, Ont., decided on a half-holiday on Wednesday afternoon during June, July and August. When they began to circulate the petition many were in favor of closing during May as well, so that this month was also included and is being observed by all those except in very central portion of the city. There is also considerable talk of extending it to include September, the grocers in South London having already decided on this.

Western Canada.

Cecil Porch, grocer, Winnipeg, has sold to McKenzie & Reeve.

G. S. McNaughton has taken over the grocery store of A. G. Todd, Ardath, Sask., and is remodelling the premises.

F. R. Collins, general merchant, Radisson, Sask., has sold to J. B. Sample.

Bay & Katz have succeeded A. Bay, general merchant, Pelly, Sask.

Tees & Persse, Ltd., wholesale commission merchants, sustained a loss by fire at their Winnipeg branch.

Two grain elevators of the Maple Leaf Milling Co. were destroyed by fire at Brandon, Man. One just recently erected cost $60,000. Both were covered by insurance.

The Western Canada Cold Storage and Packing Company, Limited, has been incorporated at $550,000. The head office is in Winnipeg. They are to acquire the plant of the Central Canada Meat Packing Co. (in liquidation) situated at Medicine Hat, Alta.

The Merchants' Association of Chilliwack, B. C. have again this year decided on the weekly half holiday. They began with the first Thursday in May, and every store in the town, including four groceries, five dry goods and millinery, two tailors, three men's furnishings, four jewelers, three hardware, Ashwell's Departmental Store, two flour and feed stores, and all the real estate offices. The afternoon was pleasantly spent in games and other recreations, several going to New Westminster on the electric tram.

DEATH OF JOSEPH IRVING.

Was 10 Years With Wm. H. Dunn as Toronto Manager—Known As Great Athlete.

Toronto, May 16.—Death after two weeks' illness has removed a well known figure from among the Toronto grocery trade, in the person of Jos. Irving.

During the past 10 years Mr. Irving has been connected with the Borden Condensed Milk Co. as Toronto manager of Wm. H. Dunn Co., the Canadian agents, and during that time periodically covered Canada from coast to coast.

He was 48 years of age, and in his youth enjoyed great success on the athletic field. He is still remembered as the star fielder of the Toronto Lacrosse Club of 1885, when this old organization was an all-star aggregation.

He was also a crack sprinter, curler and bowler—in fact, he was always among the leaders in whatever game he turned his attention to.

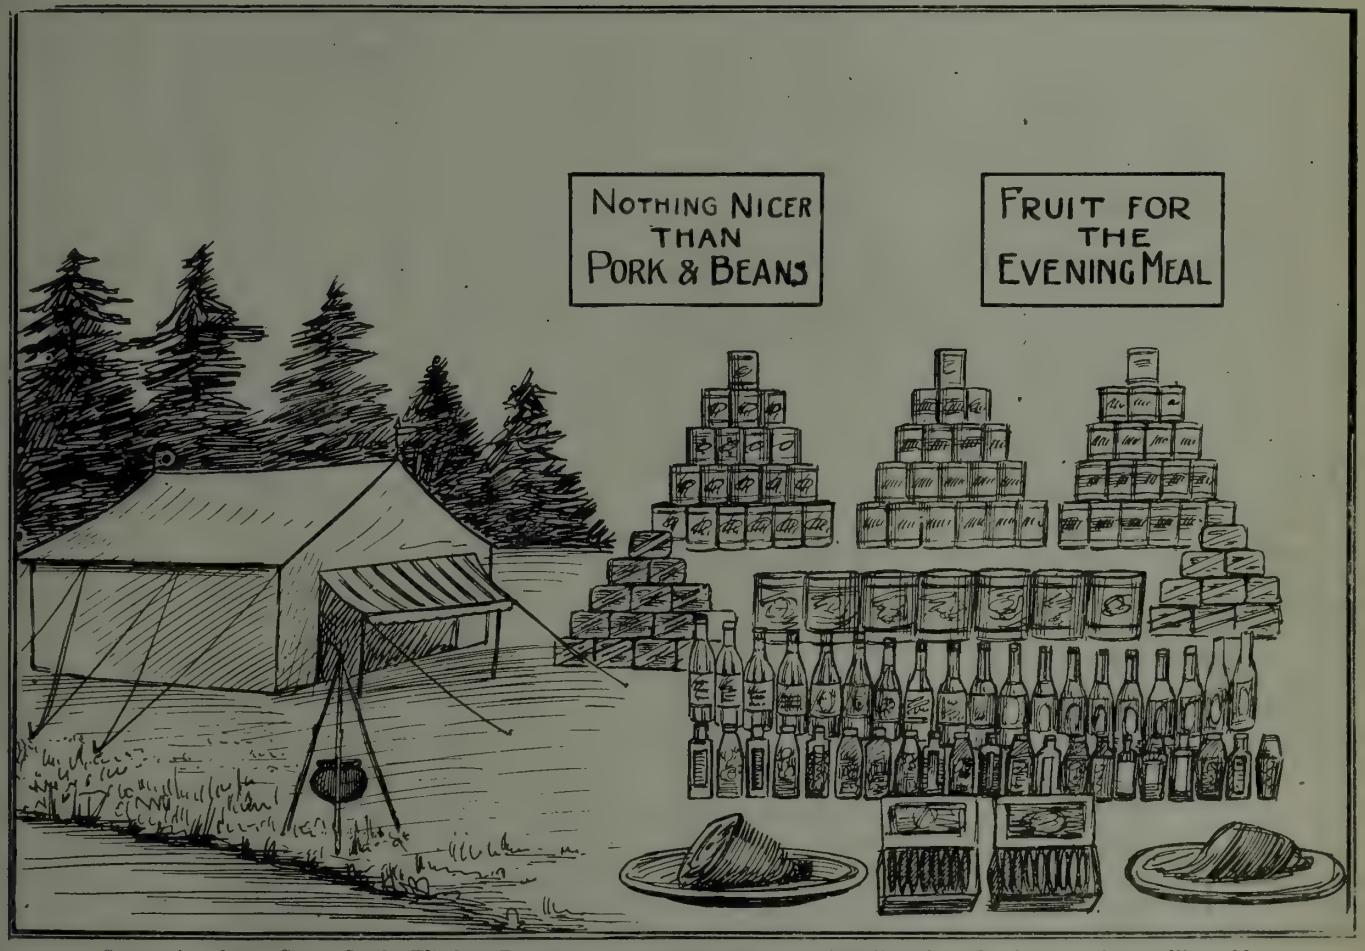
The late Mr. Irving's funeral took place in Toronto on Saturday, the 11th inst., and was largely attended by his many friends, a large number of whom were from among the local grocery trade.

Goods to Be Shown to Get Camping Trade

Every Dealer Who Has Any Opportunities in This Direction Should Plan Early—Prepared Foods the Variety That Can be Readily Sold—A List of Those to Display—A Few Show Cards in the Window Will Help.

Already in summer resort districts people are beginning to open up and renovate their summer homes in preparation for the warm weather. Soon, too, the exodus from the big cities will take place for the lakes and streams. All of which has a bearing on the trade of the retail grocer, since it means there will be big opportunities to sell prepared foods.

The time to plan for this business is now. Every dealer who expects to get any of this business should make his arrangements early. Adopt a definite plan of campaign in window dressing and advertising, and beyond a doubt, if progressive methods are used, new and profitable business will be the result.



Suggestion for a Camp Goods Window Display. Accompanying article gives list of goods that can be readily sold.

Class of Goods Required.

When people go off to their summer cottages or camps, by the river, they want foods that can be made ready for the table with the greatest despatch. Slow dishes find little or no favor in the camp. It takes too long a time and too much fire to prepare them.

From now on window displays should be made regularly, at least once in May and twice in June, July and August. One does not have to look far afield to determine on the goods to show. Canned foods immediately suggest themselves. With little care and attention they keep a long time and are always preferable to fresh fruits and vegetables on an outing trip.

Canned Foods Popular.

Pork and beans always are a part of the summer larder. They are practically indispensable, being so easily prepared for a meal. Canned tomatoes, corn, peas, beets, etc., are other lines that should not be neglected. The same applies to canned and concentrated soups which have gained so much favor in the homes in recent years in view of the rapidity with which they can be served and the original flavors which the best of them retain.

Not so many years ago campers had to go without milk in their tea and coffee except where they happened to be in the vicinity of some farm house. Condensed and evaporated milk have now overcome this. They are always included in larder outfit and should have a prominent place in every window display. They solve the problem of taking a chance on getting milk while on the trail and have been invaluable to prospectors, forest rangers, construction camps and cottagers.

The Dessert Problem.

A passing reference to the importance of canned, preserved fruits, jams and marmalade is all that is necessary here. That they are a necessity to the morning and evening meals goes without argument. They frequently are used for dinner dessert and for these reasons every camper and cottager should be urged to take liberal supplies.

In canned fish there are sardines, kippered herrings, lobsters, etc., that will sell readily if displayed. There are also some attractive lunches gotten up in glass which should be given prominence. These include potted bloater, turkey, tongue, veal, etc., all of which can be sold. Pickles, catsups, olives, meat sauces, cooked ham, bacon and macaroni

Latest Review of the Grocery Markets

Sugar Holds Rather Weak Position—Supplies of White Beans Are Small, and Prices Firm—Firmer Feeling in Salmon at Toronto—Prunes Still Slightly Lower in Montreal—Sugar Down 10c in Winnipeg.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Prunes—Varieties ½c lower.

Currants—1 lb. packages ½c lower.

Sugar—Needs attention.

Montreal, May 16.—With navigation now open the port is beginning to assume its old-time activity, and wholesalers are all reporting quite good business, the volume showing a decided increase.

Some dealers feel that sugar will soon decline, while others state positively that there is nothing to indicate any weakness. It is generally agreed, however, that a decline coming on a pretty bare market would result in many large orders.

Some complaints have been registered about the quality of molasses now on the market. Undoubtedly the sap has not been of as high a quality as last year's, and this may account to some extent for the lack of attention it is receiving in some quarters.

SUGARS.—The market at present is in a thoroughly interesting condition, and needs careful attention, as there are many inclined to state that before very long a drop will take place. The market truly is pretty bare, and a decline would certainly cause more than ordinary activity. It must be remembered, however, that the refiners are holding a large quantity of high-priced sugar, and even though New York is selling considerably below Canada, we must not take this as likely to bring about a reduction here, as not very long ago New York was selling higher than Canada, and still prices dropped here to the extent of fifteen cents. However, on reviewing the New York market of last week we notice a downward trend in both raw and refined. The main cause was the report that the Cuban crop would be much larger than last year, when, it will be remembered, the hot, dry weather caused prices to go up quickly. It is a known fact that Cuba has 200 more centrals grinding cane than two years ago, and at that time the crop reached 1,800,000 tons. In Germany and other Continental beet-growing countries, everything points toward a good harvest, so that refiners will more than likely conclude that they can afford to wait. Be that as it may, the trade will make no mistake in buying in small quantities, as something may develop within the next few days to change the whole aspect.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.—Syrups still receive good and satisfactory attention, the prices remaining unchanged.

The demand for maple molasses is growing, but it is felt that a still greater volume of business would be done if the quality had been as well up to standard as last year's crop. It might be a good idea for the Government to look into the molasses question, as it seems that considerable mixing is going on. All grades of last year's molasses have been cleaned up, and the new crop is now securing attention, some few sales of the new having been made for first open water.

DRIED FRUITS.—Currants in 1 lb. packages have fallen off again, while certain varieties of prunes are also a half cent down. Interest in all Californian fruits is growing, but not to such an extent that attention is given to more than present requirements. If speculation goes on in prunes as it did last year, we may certainly expect a slump, and it is not likely that the trade will forget for some time the shadow which was cast over all lines of dried fruits. However, at present prunes are keeping in the limelight, the small decline mentioned above being due to a surplus in New York.

Future peaches are dull, no heavy business being transacted, but apricot futures are in a little healthier condition.

It would be no harm for the trade to keep their eyes on future raisins, as there seems to be an upward tendency, as a number of growers are said to be holding out for higher prices.

TEAS.—The local Japan tea market has remained much about the same since last report. A little more enquiry, however, has been noted for teas around 21 to 23 cents, which are scarce at this period, particularly in first hands. A sample of the earliest picked leaf this season was received by a local firm on the 6th inst., and circulated among the trade throughout Canada, and was generally pronounced upon as being of excellent cup quality. This augurs well for future deliveries.

COFFEE.—Prices are high as usual, and we can see no possible decline for some time to come, as there is no available surplus. Of course, if the new crop is an unusually good one, prices may begin to totter, but any prediction in this respect would be fool-hardy at present. Indeed, there are a number of authorities who have no hesitation in stating that coffee may go a few points higher still, arguing that Brazil held up well in spite of heavy receipts. They further claim that large roasters have been buying in Santos freely, and that as a result the situation is healthy. On the other hand, some who are not altogether talking higher prices lay stress on the fact that a fine flowering is likely next fall, as the weather during recent months has been ideal for coffee growth. But is it likely that the market will take notice of such a contingency? We are quite satisfied that a hand-to-mouth business will be the chief feature of trade for balance of season.

SPICES.—The markets are still high, and the demand unusually good, due to the rapid growth of the country. Of course, owing to the scattered families in various parts and to the small business done in Canada compared with the U.S.A., there are not many spice mills, and the output is pretty nearly always well taken care of. There is just now no sign of a lowering in prices.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.—Prices remain steady, the volume of business passing being fairly satisfactory. The trade is optimistic about the situation. The supply at present is moderate. It is hinted that there may be more rice in primary hands than appears on the surface, but local authorities claim that the situation is legitimately strong.

Brooms—Some quoting lower prices.

Toronto, May 16.—Compared with this time a month ago, wholesale trade shows considerable improvement. Better roads and opening of navigation have been factors in increasing activity. There is no doubt that an adverse factor is that farmers are busy in the fields, but just now he must frequently come to town to buy seeds and tools, and this helps the sale of general groceries. Reports from country towns indicate that major portion of business is crowded into latter part of day, while there is also generally active business on Saturdays.

Some firms are quoting lower prices on brooms in face of strong broom corn situation. Rumor has it that this is due to competition.

SUGAR.—Refined sugar has shown no price change, remaining at $5.45 on Toronto market, as compared with $4.70 a year ago. General situation is easier than at last report. Cuban raws have continued weak, receipts being quite as satisfactory as anticipated, and confirm crop estimates of at least 1,800,000 tons.

Besides this, European beet crop reports are improving, and beet quotations are on a lower level.

There is some difference of opinion as to whether a decline in Canadian refined is probable, but it appears that Canadian refiners have considerable high-priced raws on hand, while holders of British West Indies supplies are firm in their ideas, and as Canadian refiners are restricted to a considerable extent to this sugar, it is a steadying factor in the market. On account of uncertainty of market, business is mostly of hand-to-mouth order, but stocks carried are quite small.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.—There is not quite as active a market in maple syrup as when new crop was at its height, but a normal volume is being done. New crop article is quoted locally from $1 to $1.25 per gallon. One firm quotes single gallons at $1.25, and five gallon lots at $1.10. There is a seasonable trade in corn syrups reported.

There is not a great deal of interest in molasses. New Orleans, in barrels, is quoted at 26 to 30 cents. There was an easier feeling in Barbados on Eastern markets on account of arrival of new crop, but reports from primary market of late indicate firmness.

DRIED FRUITS.—There are no important changes to report in dried fruits. Business is none too brisk, although fair movements are recorded in some lines. Retailers' stock in many lines are getting into small compass, and naturally some business must follow.

There is still quite a range in prices quoted by different firms on certain sizes of prunes, although general situation appears no weaker, nor yet any firmer. While spot dried fruits on the coast continue weak there is a somewhat improved feeling in futures of late.

Currants on primary market show a solid statistical position. "The feeling prevalent is confidence," says one report, "and there appears no prospects for a decline." Local wholesalers are displaying little interest in currants just now, however, as most of them carry sufficient stocks.

TEA.—Although Japan market has opened and at quite a high figure, there has been little interest as yet displayed in new crop tea. The early crop teas are the finest and command a high price, and as little of finest is used in Canada, opening of market holds little of interest to Canadian dealers. Towards end of June or first of July, when pickings of ordinary qualities begin, there will be more attention given.

Reports from Colombo say that common Ceylon teas have been easier to buy, but mostly of the stalky and undesirable sorts. Quality has shown a decided falling off generally, and quite accounts for lower quotations at recent sales. "The quantity of fine grade is much reduced," says a report, "owing to deterioration in quality of teas from nearly all estates where fine tea is grown. For any teas with really fine quality, there has been keen competition and prices were consequently forced up in some cases many cents. Fine teas bought a month or two back are now worth considerable profits."

COFFEE.—Coffee market has probably recovered all the ground lost during recent depression. Tendency at moment is steady and situation in strong hands. It was the rather indifferent spot demand, coupled with continued liberal Brazilian port receipts which caused the easier turn.

Santos markets continues to rule firm, considerably above prices ruling in consuming markets, which would indicate that holders there are confident of realizing steady prices later on, despite the close approach of the new crop movement. New crop outurn commences on July 1.

SPICES.—There is a steady to firm tone to general spice markets, a number of lines having quite a marked steady tone in sympathy with strength in primary market. Cloves is one line mentioned by local dealers as showing strength. While the last crop was fairly good, it came on a bare market, and conditions of supplies now point to higher values. Pepper, both black and white, are also rather firm. Cream tartar, while rather steady at moment has been on easy side, and some dealers consider 25 cents per pound a fair price to retailer.

Trade in spices is reported as good by majority of local houses, demand being pretty well spread over list in general.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.—There are no changes in prices on rice or tapioca, and no particularly new features have developed. Fairly steady tone appears to prevail in both lines. Rice situation in producing sections of U. S. is quite firm, floods in Louisiana having interfered materially with planting.

Barley, both pot and pearl, continues steady to firm, with some firms quoting slightly higher prices. Pearl is generally $1.00 per cwt. above pot, but premium on this variety just now appears to be somewhat larger.

Stocks are small in compass, but one large local buyer has some Austrian beans due in few weeks, which will sell at lower figure than Canadian.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar reduced 10 cents.

Coffee—Firm.

Winnipeg, May 13.—Wholesale grocery business continues satisfactory. City trade is very active and country orders show no declines. Collections are also reported to be decidedly better than in March.

Sugar has declined 10 cents. Coffee is reported to be firm and advances would not occasion surprise.

In dried fruits there is nothing special to report but curants are reported as scarce and liable to go higher. California peach crop is said to be in good shape and past all dangers from frost.

As regards the general business outlook, it is good. Labor is a little scarce, but that means that no man need be idle, and as a matter of fact few are. The immigration movement continues heavy, and much money is coming into the country with them. Investors are still placing large amounts in various Western Canada resources, and large industrial corporations are spending vast amounts from which all classes of community reap benefit.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Halifax, May 6. — Vegetables are scarce in Halifax at present time. Stocks have been cleaned up earlier this season than ever before. Only small quantities of carrots, parsnips and turnips can be obtained. Wholesale dealers have no difficulty in disposing of carrots and parsnips at one dollar per bushel. Stocks of potatoes are light, and they are selling at one dollar per bushel. Dealers predict that they will go higher before new stock arrives.

Stocks of dried fruits and canned goods are running low, but it is thought that there is sufficient of latter on market until new crop arrives. Sugar market is quiet and demand is reported light. Extra standard granulated is quoted at $5.50, and United Empire at $4.40.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, May 16.—Flour is steady and market indicates so firm a feeling, that there is every reason to believe there will be other advances following that of twenty-five cents made this week in Ontario patents. Local grocers are a unit in declaring that Manitoba will not be far behind in the jump. Wholesalers' advices are that the heavy floods in the United States have qeen responsible for much of the condition of wheat market and steady rise for past few weeks, but they say that there has apparently been no consequential damage done in the Canadian West.

Molasses is higher and shows firmness. Feed has a steady upward tendency while both cornmeal and oatmeal are firm as well.

Village Merchants Form an Association

Progressive Spirit Shown by Western Ontario Men—Dealers In It From Radius of Twenty Miles — Representatives of London R. G. A. Attend Meeting and Give Addresses on Organization Work.

London, Ont., May 16—(Special).—The grocers and general merchants of Harrietsville, Avon, Gladstone, Dorchester, Belmont, Mossley and Evelyn met at the Chittick House, Dorchester, on Wednesday evening of last week for the purpose of talking over trade matters. The merchants at the above places state they have been selling tobaccos at a loss for years past.

G. B. Drake, of the London Retail Grocers' Association, in talking the matter over with some of the merchants of Dorchester, advised them to get together and discuss the question with their fellow merchants. The outcome is they have formed an association which extends over a radius of twenty miles. They realize that they should be getting a profit on all goods sold and will work to that end.

W. J. Coates, of Mossley, is president and W. Vollick of Dorchester is secretary. At the invitation of the president and secretary, G. B. Drake, E. J. Ryan, Adam Palmer, J. McFarlane and T. J. Ranahan, of the London Association attended the last meeting of the newly organized association and gave their views on association work. The above gentlemen were all called upon by the president, and they gave their experience along the different lines of organization work and brought out some good points, which their fellow merchants from the country were not slow to grasp. Many questions were asked and answered.

After everybody had partaken of luncheon which was provided for by the new association, the party adjourned to the smoking room, where speeches were made by H. J. Scott, of Gladstone; G. B. Binkley and W. Demary, of Avon; A. Hodden, W. Vollick, and J. Talbot, of Dorchester; J. Mahon, of Evelyn; C. R. Eden and C. B. Adams, of Harrietsville, and also by the London grocers. Songs were sung by E. J. Ryan and chorus. President Coates moved a vote of thanks to the London grocers, and expressed a wish to have them come again. The vote naturally was carried. E. J. Ryan responded for the London grocers and asked the other London merchants to rise and sing "For they are Jolly Good Fellows," which they did with enthusiasm. The gathering then adjourned.

Some of the country merchants certainly enjoy themselves by the look of the autos and fine buggies and horses. And that black team of Gordon Drake's can step some.

Tom Ranahan wants a combined picnic at Dorchester.

J. McFarlane has a fast one, but but Mack says she has no use for the delivery wagon. She detests the working classes.

W. T. Coates, president of the new association, says he would not be without The Canadian Grocer for three times the price. His son, 19 years old, looks forward every week for The Grocer, and for hours after its arrival he is busy "drinking it in." Mr. Coates claims his son has learned more out of The Canadian Grocer about his business than from any other source. He puts many ideas into effect which he gets from the pages of The Grocer.

GOODS TO BE SHOWN TO SECURE CAMP TRADE.

are other easy selling lines, as well as soda and fancy biscuits, chocolates, lemonade powders and liquids, and soft drinks.

Last but not least, remember to suggest to any purchaser of camping foodstuffs that you have some good cigars and tobacco on hand. No smoker departs on his vacation without enough tobacco or cigars to carry him through the trip—and add matches to the suggestion.

In the window shown herewith, besides foodstuffs a camp by the stream is suggested. A small tent can easily be secured and with a few evergreen trees in the background and imitation grass around it, the scene can be made realistic. Water can be suggested by using a mirror on the floor of the window with sand strewn along the edges and grass on the shore.

The probability of a merger of Western Ontario flour millers does not appear so bright as a few weeks ago. A Milverton, Ont. man some time ago secured options on about 50 mills in Western Ontario for English capitalists. However, it is said that at a recent meeting the capitalists made an offer of only 40 per cent. of option price in cash, balance to be taken out in bonds of the new amalgamation. This was not looked on with favor by many of the millers, who did not consider it a satisfactory basis for sale.

Several meetings of those interested have been held but as yet there has been nothing definite done.

Cornmeal Maintains a Firm Position

Ideas of Millers at Several Centres at a Higher Plane Than Heretofore—Raw Material Holds Steady—Mill Feeds Have Shown No Recession—Flour Continues Steady With Fair Demand Generally Reported.

About the only price movement of the week is a slight increase in values on cornmeal and even this advance cannot be said to be general. However, this commodity maintains a firm position in sympathy with trend of raw material and ideas of millers at more than one centre are on a higher plane than formerly. It will be remembered that corn both in United States and Canada made substantial advances for a time, and having held steady at higher figure, cornmeal is regarded as being steady to firm.

There are no general price changes in Manitoba flour to record although west of Winnipeg, following an anvance of 10 cents per barrel made a few weeks ago, another 10 cents was later added and has become general in the West. In East, however, there has been no change, although in sympathy with general trend of values on good milling wheat, market is regarded as holding a fairly steady position. There has been some talk that firmness might develop into an advance but that opinion does not appear to be general as yet. "The tone of market is quite firm," said one miller, "but I am not expecting any change unless mill feeds should take a decline in which case greater strength would be thrown on flour."

At the moment mill feeds show no indication of any break, values for both bran and shorts being well maintained. The past season has witnessed rather record prices for these lines, due to general scarcity of feeds throughout the country. It was thought probable that with advent of spring and coming of grass, demand would fall off and recessions in price follow, but pastures have been tardy in growth and demand for feeds has continued large enough to maintain prices. It cannot be said, however, what the future may hold in this regard.

Opening of navigation has augmented supplies of wheat in Eastern Canada but this was quite badly needed. Ontario wheat is quite scarce and prices have ascended to a level that does not fall far short of values on Manitoba. For this reason values on straight roller and blended flours are quite steady to firm. Domestic trade is said to be fair for season but export business is dull.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—Manitoba flour shows no important change in past week but a firm tone is maintained in sympathy with steadiness in raw material.

Ontario wheat maintains a strong front and winter wheat flour is firm in sympathy. There appears to be considerable difference in prices quoted by different mills making it extremely difficult to get an exact line on values. In blends for instance, quotations of different mills may vary because of amount of different wheats used in the blend, although there is not a great deal of difference between Ontario and Manitoba wheat prices at present. Again certain mills will have a better advertised brand and consider they should get more money for it. Others consider that they turn out a higher grade product than their competitor and therefore ask more money for it.

Quotations are changed this week on straight roller from an export figure to that asked for domestic consumption. At present time for straight roller under manufacturers' brands, around $4.80 is being asked. Straight rollers and patents are, sold for pastry purposes. One firm quotes a fancy patent at $4.90 and a second patent at $4.70. Another firm quotes a 40 per cent. patent at $4.60.

Higher Tendency in the Banana Market

Due to Big Demand at This Season of Year—Red Bananas In Greater Favor—Look for Easier Tendency in Pines—Tomatoes Hold at High Figure—Strawberries Lower and in Good Supply.

There has been a firmer feeling to prices of bananas of late and quotations have been extended at more than one Canadian market. The reason for this is the big demand for this fruit during spring and early summer. At this season of the year, there is not a very extensive list of small fruits, and as pines and strawberries are still rather high, there is a big strain thrown on bananas with accompanying firmer feeling. Opening of fruit stalls and debut of push carts on the streets all work for a larger consumption. There is an increasing demand for red bananas in this country but limited supplies keep prices at firm figures.

Pineapple trade has been hampered somewhat by rather light shipments due to longshoremen's strike in Cuba. For this reason prices have ruled steady but with a settlement of this difficulty it is expected that values will be easier. Cuba and Porto Rico are present sources of supply. Florida is commencing to ship this week but movement this month will be light.

One delicacy now coming forward is California cherries. All markets, however, have not been receiving supplies as prices range in the jewelry class. First shipment to Montreal brought $5 per box. Strawberries are coming northward in goodly quantities at reduced figures. They come from Carolina and are selling quite freely.

Tomatoes still cling to a high figure, east coast of Florida cleaning up fast on supplies. West coast has not really got under way but when it does, there is a possibility of slightly lower prices.

Celery is all but done, cabbage is more plentiful and easier, Texas and Bermuda onions in 50-lb. crates are arriving while Florida cucumbers are in better supply. Florida will also be sending along new potatoes at prices below those which Bermuda stock commands.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—Interest is now centred round the S. S. Fremore, which has arrived from the Mediterranean with a fine cargo of oranges and Messina lemons, same being unloaded at time of writing. Bananas are still high, and will pretty soon be cleared out, the higher tendency being brought about by the upward trend of oranges. The arrival of above shipment of the latter fruit would seemingly work toward an easing off in oranges, but advices from the coast to the effect that four packers were closing down, made it pretty evident that fewer supplies would be forthcoming, and so the higher levels prevail. Of course, it must be remembered that all cars from California have now to be iced, and this means an extra charge of 25c per box. At any rate, prices of oranges have not gone so high as expected. Strawberries are selling freely, while all southern fruits are arriving in good condition.

A shipment of California cherries has reached Montreal already, and has fetched the record price of $5 per box. They were received, needless to say, by express, as the Californian cherry season has not yet opened.

Strawberries have fallen considerably, being sold all the way from ten to twenty cents. The quality of the berries which have come to hand this week not being quite so good.

VEGETABLES. — Cucumbers and cabbages are selling freely at reasonable prices, and the market on the whole is pretty satisfactory. Celery, of course, is practically off the market, while Spanish onions also are finished.

New Egyptian onions are moving out well at 3¼ cents per lb. Grocers will and these a fine stock, as they do not sprout so quickly as the Spanish and consequently keep longer. They are just cured, and will keep at any rate for three months. Home onions have been rather late this year, while the onions used in the U.S.A. from Bermuda and Texas are not arriving as freely as expected, so that the price for Egyptians is keeping up, and a considerable increase will take place before June 1st, which is practically the end of the Egyptian season.

Valencia onions in cases commmence to arrive in England about July 1. They are, however, a summer crop, being soft, and by no means in good condition, so that they cannot be shipped to Canada or U.S.A. But about thirty days later a second crop of Valencias arrives, the whole being good, hard and sound, keeping for months. The Spanish onion shipments start about the 2nd week in August. These dates should be of interest to grocers in securing stocks. Our advice re Egyptians, in short, is to buy now. A fairly good business is passing in Green Mountain potatoes, prices so far being unchanged.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS.—Fairly active tone characterizes local fruit market. Weather has considerable influence on volume of trade.

Pineapples are coming in for considerable attention, and are easier this week, with still further indications of this tendency. Price for 24's is now around $3.75. Strawberries are moving quite freely, coming from Carolina. Price is now down to 15 to 17 cents.

Stocks of apples are not large, especially for high grade stock. There is some fancy stock on market at $4.50 per box, having been imported from across the line. Oranges are easier under increased offerings.

Bananas have developed a firmer feeling, and quotations have been raised. There is not a great quantity of small fruit available just now, and greater weight is thrown on bananas, and thus the firmness.

Outside grown rhubarb is now available at 50 to 60 cents per dozen bunches.

When west coast gets in full swing there may possibly be an easier tendency. Just at moment there are only New Bermuda potatoes on market, but some Florida stock will probably arrive towards end of week. One firm quotes Floridas in barrels to arrive at $7.50.

New radish and green onions in hampers are easier. There is a tempoary scarcity and firmness in lettuce, but they will be easier. New cabbage and Egyptian onions are other lines that are easier. Green peppers and egg plant are now offered, while Bermuda onions are available in 50 lb. crates at $2.50 to $2.75.

JOTS FROM THE FRUIT MARKET.

Grapefruit are fast cleaning up.

Limes are in limited supply.

Florida has sent forth its first watermelons.

Navel oranges were easier in New York last week, due to heavy offerings.

As far east as Winnipeg, California lemons are used, while east of that city it is mostly Sicily stock. Of course, at times Eastern Canada gets California stock, while West sometimes takes Sicily lemons.

The annual direct steamer to Montreal from Mediterranean carrying oranges and lemons arrived this week. Amount of lemons was smaller than usual.

The Toronto Fruit Auction Company held their first auction on Monday. Another was held on Thursday.

The Lino Fruit Company, Limited, with head office in Toronto, has been incorporated at a million and a half. The incorporators are a legal firm acting for other parties. The company is given authority to raise, market and trade in fruit and natural products. It has been rumored that New York capital is behind the new company, and that it will be virtually a subsidiary company to the Atlantic Fruit and Steamship Company, which does a big fruit business in New York, and has an agency in Toronto. Any knowledge of this is however denied by G. H. Ward, Toronto agent of Atlantic Fruit Co.

THE UNCHANGED ADVERTISEMENT.

Here are some thoughts handed out by a manufacturer to his customers:—"The advertisement that stays unchanged for weeks is not an advertisement, but a monument. The reader does not think of the house behind it, but under it. The present is the 'four-track' era —the era of electric force and dynamic resource—the era of schemers 'on the firing line,' instead of dreamers in the barracks—the era of making money, and of making money make more. The 'single track' merchant is dead, but doesn't know it. His store is his tomb and his sign is his epitaph. He's a 'dummy' and a mummy, self-anointed and self-embalmed."

Small Pack of Canadian Sardines Expected

Two Years Ago Pack Was Light and Last Year Rather Heavy—This is Considered to Be Another Lean Year—How the Sardine is Caught—Sail Boats Being Displaced by Motors.

Black's Harbor, N. B., May 16.—(Special)—The sardine packing season along the coast of New Brunswick and Maine is again under way, and another year's supply of fish is being prepared by canners.

The sardine season commences about April 15, and ends around the first of December. Packers do not look for a large run of fish this year.

It will be remembered that two years ago the pack was rather inclined to the small side, and during the year prices went above the normal figure. Last year there was a large run of fish and prices again returned to an average level, and therefore packers do not anticipate a large run this year. It is seldom that there are two large seasons in succession.

Catching the Sardine.

These small fish called sardines commence to come on the shores about the month of April, the grounds which they frequent extending from what is known as West Quoddy, in eastern part of Maine, along the New Brunswick shores to St. John, N. B., and including Passamaquoddy Bay.

The fish are caught in weirs or traps of which there are a great number, each one being attended to generally by two or three men. At low tide the men seine them out—that is remove them by means of a net.

Motor Boats Now Used.

In former years these fish were carried from the fishing grounds to the packing factories in Maine and New Brunswick in sail boats, but in recent years, motor boats have been displacing the sail, and are now entirely used for this purpose, as they possess decided advantages over the sail boat for this work.

There is now upwards of 100 of these sardine boats carrying fish from the traps to the factories. They have a capacity of anywhere from 20 to 70 hogshead.

More Active Tone to the Fish Business

Since Larger Arrivals of Fresh Fish on Market—Demand is Now Principally for Fresh Varieties—White Fish and Lake Trout Prominent Features—Larger Supply of Western Halibut —Newfoundland Sealing Season Poor.

Speaking generally, there is greater activity in the fish trade of late. The larger supplies, as well as the new lines that have recently been added to list of fresh fish available has no doubt been responsible for a portion of this improvement. Demand is now largely for fresh varieties, although smoked lines are not lacking in attention, while some markets still have frozen fish to offer.

White fish and trout from inland lakes are now prominent features of market. Halibut has been in quite good supply, with prices showing no particular change. There are indications of a larger supply of western halibut.

While codfish has been offering fairly freely, haddock has been in light supply and bringing firm prices. Salmon has also been scarce and prices have ranged high. There has been an improvement in lobster catch along Eastern coast, with slightly easier prices.

Monday marked the close of one of the most unsatisfactory sealing seasons that Newfoundland has known in many years. Twenty steamers engaged in fishing and reported a total catch of 175,128 seals, valued at $329,104. This is hardly more than half the number taken last year, when the steamers reaped 304,291 seals, valued at $493,635. Falling off this year is due in a large measure to the abnormal ice conditions which have prevailed.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—Fresh halibut and B. C. salmon is arriving pretty freely, haddock and cod also being plentiful. Shad herring to hand so far are bright and large, and should sell well. The price for dressed bullheads and perch is somewhat lower owing to extra supplies. New Gaspe salmon and brook trout are now on the market, while fresh lake trout and whitefish are also quoted by wholesalers.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—There is more life to local trade since arrival of larger assortment of fresh fish and in larger quantities. Major portion of trade is now in fresh varieties, although smoked fish are being given considerable attention for season. As for frozen lines, decks are pretty well cleaned, one local firm reporting that only variety of frozen fish that they now have is gold eyes.

Lake trout and white fish are two of the prominent lines now on sale. While some supplies are received from Lake Ontario, Georgian Bay is now yielding the greater portion. Pike come mainly from eastern end of Lake Ontario. Cod, haddock, flounders and halibut come from the coast, the latter being a favorite line.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Halifax. — Local markets are now well supplied with fresh fish. Halibut is coming along in better supply, so are codfish, but haddock are showing some falling off. There is a marked improvement in catch of lobsters along the shore. The lobsters that are now on the market are larger and price is lower. Good sized lobsters can now be bought for $1.80 per dozen. Shipments from Nova Scotia points to the American market are now heavy.

Gaspereau are now running in rivers, and some shad are also being taken. Trout are fairly plentiful, but salmon are scarce and price so far is high.

A vessel arrived here this week from Newfoundland with a cargo of 3,500 quintals of dry codfish for a local firm. This cargo, coming on the market when local stock was about cleaned up, helped the situation out.

Produce & Provisions

Pure Lard Down Half Cent in Montreal

On Account of Overstock—High Prices Curtailing Consumption—Eggs Brought in From United States Market—Dealers Contract For Storage Supplies—Butter Steady, with Slightly Easier Undertone—Provisions Are Steady.

United States markets have been exerting some little influence on Canadian products during past few weeks. It will be remembered that two weeks ago when our butter market was in a rather shaky condition, New York dealers made excursions to this side of the line in quest of supplies, and their purchases steadied the situation. Unfortunately for them the New York market broke sharply before they got their purchases marketed, and caused considerable loss to some dealers.

This week Canadian produce men reciprocated by going into United States markets for supplies of eggs, or at least dealers at more than one centre did this. They found they were able to purchase in Chicago, pay 3 cents per dozen duty, and still have something to the good over the price of the Canadian article. Not only have supplies been brought along for immediate use, but dealers have been making contracts for eggs for storage purposes This new feature has had a somewhat easing tendency, although quotations have shown little or no change at most centres. Demand for eggs continues good.

"Country merchants have been making good out of eggs this year," said one wholesaler this week. "They have been looking for lower values right along, and therefore have been paying lower prices, while figures which they have been receiving have remained steady. Generally they figure on getting just the price which they pay in trade, but of late they have been getting 1 to 2 cents more."

With prospects of exports of butter to New York removed by break in prices there, speaking generally, there is an easier undertone to market, although quotations for week have shown no great change. Butter at Cowansville, Que., on Saturday last brought 26⅜c, as compared with 27c one week before.

The pastures have had the benefit of some splendid showers of rain, and this should work for greater production of butter, although it will be late in month before we have full grass butter. It would seem as if prices would have to ease until they reach a level that dealers feel satisfactory for storing, although if West continues to take supplies from the East, it will prevent any great accumulation on any of the markets.

There seems to be a general tone of steadiness to pork products, with a fairly good demand, although Montreal reports pure lard down ½ cent on account of overstock. Pure lard is pretty high, and this may be responsible for curtailment of consumption.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—The high prices prevailing have to a certain extent curtailed trade, but packers advise that business has been and is pretty satisfactory.

Pure lard, on account of overstock, has fallen ½c per lb. all round, but, nevertheless, the prices still are considered a little on the high side.

BUTTER.—A weaker feeling developed in the butter trade on Saturday evening last in the country, showing a decline of ½ to ⅝c per lb., as compared with a week ago, in spite of the smaller offerings. This was entirely due to a number of factories shipping their cream to the U.S.A. There is no actual change, however, in the local market, prices being steady under a fair demand for supplies from local and Western buyers. As a result, stocks are being well cleared up daily. Indeed it is rumored that supplies are not coming forward fast enough for dealers to fill orders promptly.

EGGS.—The receipts for eggs show an increase compared with corresponding period of last year. There are no new developments, however, prices being steady under a continued active demand for consumption, and in addition to this packers are busy putting as much away as possible for winter requirements.

CHEESE.—A stronger feeling is developing right along, and there is an upward movement noticeable. The demand from exporters for supplies to fill cable sales is very keen, and to this may be attributed the increasing tendency.

PROVISIONS.—Prices range at about same level as a week ago, although there is an undertone of firmness. There is a good seasonable demand reported by most firms, smoked meats coming in for more attention. As season advances cooked meats will also be in good demand.

Live hogs are a little firmer this week. Supplies are only normal, with a good enquiry.

BUTTER. — Butter has shown no change since last week's decline, and just at moment presents a somewhat uncertain outlook. At least with some predicting firmness and others easiness this would seem so. One dealer who looks for steadiness points to the firming that took place at several centres last week. He also says that creameries will be starting to pack in solids now, and any surplus can be stored. There are others who think it is too early to put away butter yet. They also point to fact that grass is appearing and production of butter should increase still further. "There will be more butter coming along," said one man, "and it will have to go lower before dealers will store it."

EGGS.—Situation in eggs is slightly easier, with wholesalers selling at around 23 cents per dozen. Most dealers think there are prospects of lower prices. This is a prediction that has not always come true during past six weeks, but there is a new feature to market, namely, the import of eggs from United States markets, which is not quite a usual occurrence at this season of year. Dealers have found that they could bring them from Chicago, pay the duty, and still easily compete with home produced article.

Not only are U.S. eggs being used for immediate consumption, but are being purchased across the line for storage purposes. There are said to have been between 30 to 40 cars contracted for by local dealers for storage purposes. Most of these are being left in storage on other side of line. There is also a certain quantity of Canadian eggs being stored.

New laid eggs	....	0 23

CHEESE.—Old cheese is being quoted ½ cent higher again by a number of local dealers. As is well known to trade, supplies are on a small scale.

New cheese has wavered during week and steadied up again, but quotations are ½ cent lower. "I expect market fairly steady this month but lower in June," said one dealer.

POULTRY. — There is not a great deal of business in poultry at present. This is the between season. Business is mostly confined to fowl, with some turkeys and spring broilers. The latter bring 50 cents each.

There is also quite a trade in storage poultry at present. Purchases of storage goods were confined mostly to hotels and restaurants at one time, but there is quite a lot of business done through the retail grocer now.

"The public," remarked one dealer, "are looking with more favor on storage goods than formerly, when there was a strong prejudice against it. Poultry stored at right time and in proper condition comes out in excellent shape."

WINNIPEG.

PROVISIONS.—Provision market, as is usual at this time of year, is extremely unsettled and it is hardly possible to give quotations that will hold for more than a day or so. Lard and cured meats are still on the up grade. Butter and eggs are cheaper, and from now on will be weaker. Live hogs have gone beyond all records, having been quoted as high as $10.50. The supply is altogether inadequate to meet demands.

MAGIC BAKING POWDER MAGIC BAKING POWDER

Grocers: It is not necessary nor advisable to handle too many different brands of the same class of goods. Quicker sales and larger profits are made by handling a few well-known brands of standard quality that your customers are familiar with, and which have the confidence of the manufacturer to the extent of a large advertising appropriation to assist you in increasing your sales.

LARD

Demand for pure Lard has been very good and indications are that prices will be higher. In the Summer of 1910 Lard sold at 16½c. per pound in tubs and it looks to us like history repeating itself. "Star Brand" Lard is nothing but pure Lard from good, well fed Canadian pigs and is made under Government inspection.

"Standard Goods Sell Best"

The fame of our immense manufactory has been built around just this one product. There are numerous imitations, but there is nothing that enjoys the reputation of BOVRIL, or that possesses its vitalizing power, or that can give the same appetizing flavor and toothsomeness when added to other foods.

The BOVRIL estates cover: in the Argentine, 438,082 acres; in Australia, 9,261,400 acres.

quickly pay back its cost in the large profits it makes and clear a handsome net profit thereafter. If you own a store put a KINGERY out in front. Positively you have no idea what great amount of cash it will take in during business hours. In some cases they have earned more net profit than that of the business of the entire store. Furthermore its attractiveness turns the eyes of passersby upon your store. Often it is the agent of sending them in. It helps the business in the store. The Kingery Peanut Roasters and Corn Poppers are of many kinds and styles—Steam, Electric, Spring and Hand Power. Ranging in price from $8.50 to $350.00. Sold on liberal instalments.

A Greater Net on the Same Gross

To increase your gross sales, you advertise. To increase your net on the same gross, you systematize. The most important department of the grocery business—the one that is likely of the biggest leaks that rob you of your profit is the accounting department.

THE McCASKEY ACCOUNT REGISTER

is based on experience. It gives greater results with the same work—and the same results with less work.

This system is doing these things for the merchant all over the broad land. It can do all these things for you. You need it—you must have it. And you will get it once you understand what it achieves.

The one writing system, without books, without disputes. Errors are caught as they occur, not by overtime working at the month end. The McCaskey system is adapted for your business.

Send for catalogue and know all the advantages it gives the retailer.

HAVE you noticed the difference in the taste of a Perfection Cracker which distinguishes it from every other soda biscuit?

The difference, we attribute, to the better mixing of the choicest materials and by the better baking in modern sanitary ovens.

It is these differences over other makes that commend Perfection Crackers to the housewife. They are immensely popular with your best paying trade.

Excellent packing protects and preserves the quality and crispness from the factory to the table.

Sterling BRAND

CATSUP

Produced from the finest ripe Tomatoes, is just one line of the pure Sterling Brand Fruit and Vegetable products, that have held the favor of the buyers for many years.

Purity in foodstuffs has become the first consideration nowadays, and the dealer should hold high his reputation by selling only goods that are guaranteed to contain no adulterants.

Promote the sales of Sterling Catsup—the profits will please.

Imitation Is The Sincerest Flattery

THE GIANT
5-CENT PACKAGE

The popularity of a package can often be judged by the number of imitators it has. Beware of these masquerading brands which are following in the wake of the leader of all 5c. Ammonia Powder.

LAWRASON'S SNOWFLAKE AMMONIA

It has been commended by all classes of people as the only pure and satisfaction-giving ammonia powder on the market. Our selling policy has been appreciated by the grocers from coast to coast. Again we reiterate the whole-souled popularity of Lawrason's Snowflake Ammonia.

THE WOMAN WHO KNOWS says:

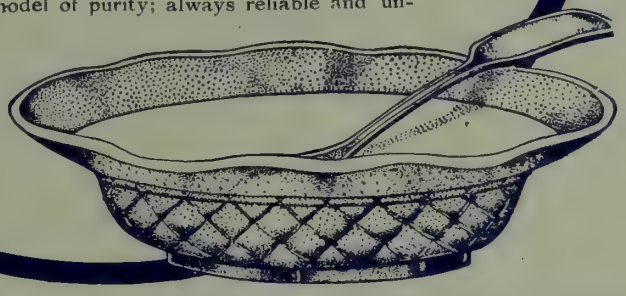
"For a dainty Custard there is nothing to equal Foster Clark's Cream Custard." She is right; it is the Cream of all Custards. She can pay more, but she knows that she cannot get a more perfect Custard.

FosterClark's Cream Custard

THE CREAM OF ALL CUSTARDS

Foster Clark's Cream Custard is rich in nourishment, delicate in flavor, and deliciously creamy. It is prepared under the most ideal conditions, and kept clean all the way from the factory to the kitchen by a sealed sanitary package. FosterClark's Cream Custard is a model of purity; always reliable and unvarying in quality.

No other Custard is so good



Every one of your customers is a prospective buyer of FosterClark's Cream Custards. Every tin sold of FosterClark's Cream Custard means a satisfied customer, and every wide-awake business man knows the value of that.

If you are handling FosterClark's CREAM CUSTARD you know from experience what satisfaction every sale gives. If you are not handling FosterClark's CREAM CUSTARD there is a triple loss—yours, your customers, and ours.

Your Questions, Our Answers

What is LAURENTIA milk?—An absolutely pure, natural milk, having the exquisite taste of cream, and which may be kept indefinitely, in perfect condition.

What distinguishes it from most other milks?—Homogenization.

What is Homogenization?—It is a purely mechanical operation, by means of which the cream is mixed with the rest of the milk, in such a manner that it can never separate nor be separated again, even by the most powerful cream separator. It keeps indefinitely.

How does this operation take place?—By means of a machine through which the fresh milk is passed, under high pressure, through capillary tubes (of the diameter of a hair); the effect of which is to divide the globules of cream and of caseine into infinitesimal particles and to mix, intricately and permanently, all the ingredients of the milk,

Your customers are thus assured of always having good milk, the cream is just as abundant at the bottom of the bottle as it is at the top.

A good seller—Good profit.

Your Trade Wants Protection or rather, your trade will insist upon their groceries proper refrigeration — or trade elsewhere.

Do you know that the process of taint may be administered to food stuffs through defective refrigeration equally as destructive as no refrigeration.

THE ARTIC REFRIGERATOR

safeguards you against danger of loss either through defectiveness or refrigeration. It is a model for the grocer and with it you add to your store, not only a trade drawing force, but a plant that gives your trade protection and safeguards your profits in the hot weather.

THE TEST OF SERVICE

Few electric coffee mills develop trouble in the first year of their service. To the new owner, enthusiastic over the beauty and convenience of his new mill, what is out of sight is more than likely to be out of mind.

But to the level head buyer the value of foresight in what is out of sight needs no explaining. He knows that on these parts depend the life and service of his mill. Many a COLES mill is to-day, after three or four years service, giving just as good satisfaction as when it came fresh from the factory. Is this kind of service worth anything to you?

Nature Favors "Old Mill" Tomatoes

The surpassing feature of "Old Mill" canned goods is the quality. The true, actual flavor of the fruit is predominant in this brand. The geographical position of the factory enables us to use spring water, clear as crystal, from the celebrated St. David's Spring. This feature with highest quality fruit and expert cooking and packing will make it "sure" with your customers and repeat orders will follow.

Talking to the Point

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS get right down to the point at issue. If you want something, say so in a few well-chosen words. Readers like that sort of straight-from-the-shoulder-talk, and that is the reason why condensed ads are so productive of the best kind of results.

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS are always noticed. They are read by wide-awake, intelligent dealers, who are on the look out for favorable opportunities to fill their requirements.

How Men Go Astray in Profit-Figuring

Problems Showing How Simple it is to Make Errors—Case Where Dealer on Strength of First Month's Business Lost Money When He Figured on Cost in Second Month—Why it is Safer to Calculate From Selling Price.

That this problem of figuring selling price is one that is considered more than any other by the average dealer, is demonstrated by the keen interest shown in it by the trade. Recently The Grocer has received a number of letters from readers revealing in no uncertain terms their interest in our articles on cost of doing business and profit, and how profit should be figured to be on the safe side.

It is too common an occurence for a merchant to say that selling an article for $1.25 which cost him $1 originally allows him a profit of 25 per cent. Yet this system of figuring profits is disappearing rapidly. It does not permit of safety in business, and therefore it is not proper to use it.

Expenses are Forgotten.

In the arithmetic there are examples of figuring profit, while scientifically correct, yet they omit anything about the cost of doing business having anything to do with the profit. This has led many astray. If a man, for instance, buys a horse for $50 and sells him for $75, the arithmetic would say he made 50 per cent. profit. He would, too, if he bought the horse one minute and sold him the next, without ever having to feed him.

But suppose a man has in contemplation a horse for sale on the basis of this transaction. A horse broker offers to carry out the negotiations. He asks a commission of 33 1-3 per cent. Now, the owner of the horse, believing he can get $75 for him, and having a profit of 50 per cent. in sight, agrees, and the broker completes the transaction and renders a bill as follows:—

Sold horse at	$75
Commission 33 1-3 per cent.	25
Due Seller	$50

Where Profit Disappears.

This bill shows to the owner a profit of 50 per cent. eaten up by a commission of 33 1-3 per cent. It illustrates the folly of anyone leading us to think of the percentage of profit from a standpoint that makes many men think they are making much larger profits on the business they are handling than they really are. It makes them prodigal of expense and often leads to failure, which with a more thorough knowledge of expense from a practical, everyday standpoint, could have been avoided.

For the sake of argument, let us suppose a man starts in a small grocery business, and that a large expenditure is necessary to cover his expenses, etc. The amount of percentage, of course, has nothing to do with the principles involved in the computation.

Ahead at End of Month.

Suppose the dealer buys his stock of goods and, as is usual in such cases, he prices them at what the wholesaler says he ought to get for them.

At the end of the month he finds he has done a business of a thousand dollars.

He has kept a close track of all the sales and finds the goods he has sold, at invoice cost, cost him $680.

He finds that his total selling expenses, etc., are $220, and thus he has $100 as a profit.

He does a little figuring.

He assumes that his cost of doing business is 22 per cent. of the total amount of business that he has done, that being the easiest way to figure it. He has made a profit of 10 per cent. of the total amount of business. This is quite the natural way for the average man to figure it. Let us suppose, therefore, that he proceeds to replenish his stock with exactly the same kind of merchandise that he had before, and he thus buys another $680 worth of goods. (This is simply assumed for the sake of illustration.) He gets the goods in and says: "I'll mark these to make 32 per cent. over cost, because I want to make 10 per cent. profit, and 22 per cent. will cover the cost of doing business,' etc."

On Wrong Basis.

What does he get? He finds at the end of the month that he has sold the same amount of merchandise, but he has received only $897.60 for it. In other words, he hasn't made his $100 profit, but has actually paid out $2.40 more than he received.

Had the retailer's knowledge of percentage been more thorough he would have realized that while the $320 was 32 per cent. of his sales of $1,000, it would be necessary to add 47 per cent. to the cost of his merchandise to get selling prices to total the desired $1,000.

He has been guilty of two fallacies in his methods. In the first place, he has based the percentage of profit and cost of doing business on his volume of business, but applied these percentages to his cost price when it came to making new prices; and in the second place, he is not trying to make any money on the amount of capital paid out for rent, clerk hire, advertising, etc. It is just as real capital that pays the clerk to hand out the merchandise, as is the capital which it takes to pay the wholesaler for the merchandise, and a man should make money on both, because both are part of the service which his capital procures for the purchasing public.

How to be on Safe Side.

After determining on his rate of profit and cost of doing business, he could easily have figured his selling price, to be sure of a reasonable net profit. His cost of doing business is 22 per cent., and he wants a profit of 10 per cent. Assuming that 100 per cent. is what he gets, he should have deducted 32 per cent. from that to determine what per cent. of the selling price the cost price is, because the cost price will be that portion of the 100 per cent. which is left after deducting the percentage required to pay the cost of doing business and the profit. It is found, therefore, 68 per cent. of any selling price, where the cost of doing business is 22 per cent. and the profit desired 10 per cent., represents what any article costs. Suppose a certain article cost $1. Divide 68 into $1, after adding two ciphers, and get $1.47 plus as the selling price.

This is easily proven. If a man sells the article for $1.47, and is allowing 22 per cent. for cost of doing business, he gets 32 cents plus, for expenses. If he has figured on 10 per cent. of his business as profit, he finds that he gets 14 7-10 cents or 15 cents profit. Deduct your 32 cents cost of doing business from your $1.47, and you have $1.15. Deduct 15 cents profit, and you have the $1.00 left.

An Eye on Overhead Expenses.

The matter of keeping close tab on expenses is another important phase of accounting. A Barrie, Ont., dealer has a system whereby he knows exactly what his overhead expenses are for any day, week, month or year. These overhead expenses include such items as wages, rent, fuel, light, water, taxes, stationery, phone, stable, insurance, express, freight, etc.

He arrives at these expenses by keeping a special expense ledger, in which are posted all items daily, and at the end of the year finds an average cost of doing business by comparing it with cash receipts, which figure is used as the amount of business done each year.

A Problem on the Salaries of Partners

To What is the Partner Who Spends Only Short Time in the Store Entitled—A Co-operative Store Business Statement to be Criticized—Definition of a Safety Deposit—The Buying of Bonds and Where They Can be Secured.

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

Letters have come to me very fast lately. They have poured in much more rapidly than I have been able to handle them. This is gratifying—shows that I am hitting the right points. It also clearly indicates that you find this department valuable. The embarrassing thing about it is that I cannot do justice to each without some delay. So I beg you to bear with what may sometimes look like neglect. For I shall carefully handle every letter just as nearly in rotation as circumstances will admit of my doing. Meantime, let me have your inquiries and comments. If need be, I shall take more space to cover everything fully.

Want Statement Analyzed.

Here, for instance, is a letter which I can only acknowledge this time and must handle in detail later. This because the statements which accompany it are voluminous and must be given more time than I have yet been able to give them:

Glace Bay, Nova Scotia, Mar. 15, 1912.
Henry Johnson, Jr.,

care of Canadian Grocer: —

Dear Sir.—We have been very much interested in your different articles and analyses of grocery costs, and herewith enclose you balance sheet of our society for the past six months. We should be pleased to read your criticism or commendation of it, and assure you we shall find same profitable and instructive, whatever lesson you may read from it. Our society has been in existence about five and one-half years, starting business with $3,500 capital. We know we have quite a number of problems and also weaknesses in our organization, and shall be very much interested in case you think the balance sheet worth reviewing, to see how close your views may coincide with ours.

Yours very truly,

Glace Bay Co-operative Society, Ltd.

The date will indicate how long I have had this letter; but the statements go into such minute detail that they cannot be handled offhand. They look good to me for careful study. More about it as soon as possible.

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met.

A Question of Salaries.

——— March 21, 1912.

Henry Johnson, Jr.,
care Canadian Grocer:—

Dear Sir.—Like many others, I am a reader of The Grocer, and with great interest do I read your information in answer to questions put to you. I have one which I would like explained to me from your idea. I suppose you answer without publishing same in Grocer; if so, I would just like to get an answer from you, and if not, why publish without names of persons or place.

We are in partnership as "Rahway & Raritan," groceries, etc. I draw a salary of $75 per month, or at least this is agreed to. I have never drawn this amount in full yet; there is still about $150 coming to me up to the end of February, 1912, to make my amount come right. We both charge our groceries up at retail prices, and the proportion of money coming to me, of course, looks large, as I draw salary and he does not, or has not yet. My partner is an accountant with business outside the store, and does not work here except on Saturday nights, or when we may be extra busy. We took stock on January 1st, and we had a fire on January 17, so we took stock again on March 1st, and on finding out we were in fairly good shape, we intended to settle up in every way we could. We had been in business 18 months on Feb. ruary 29, and my partner wants $25 per month, and as I said before, he is not here in the store one-sixteenth part of the time I am, because I am always to be found at the store, and he wants one-third of my salary, and I have not agreed to this yet, and I don't intend to, but I hardly know just what arrangements to make for the coming year. I consider that he is really not entitled to any wages at all. He gets half profits, as we both put in an equal share of capital, but I am willing for the eighteen months past to agree to $180. This would be $10 per month, and he has drawn $25, so if he got $205 for the first 18 months I consider he would be doing well, and this would be unfair, so I would like your views on this subject. Hoping to hear from you in return,

Yours respectfully,
R. J. G.

N.B.—We may have come to a settlement before you answer, but I won't agree to anything for the year until I hear your opinion.

What a Partnership Is.

One difficulty with a partnership is that it is like marriage—the law regards the partners as one. Thus either partner is "the whole thing," legally, and either can take all the resources, or any part thereof, and do about as he likes with them, even to the ruin of the business, so long as there is no distinct limitation of the rights of each. Just what may constitute such mutual boundaries as make up a limited partnership, I am not competent to say. A good local attorney is the man to consult on that question.

It seems evident that in this case there was a distinct agreement that G should draw $75 per month as a salary. It is unfortunate that he did not draw it regularly and fully. He should do that in future, without neglect or failure. This because an accumulation of $150 belonging to him on back salary is apt to look like so much "velvet" to the partner who draws little or nothing. So envy and jealousy creep in. This is one great danger of partnerships, that the partners begin in good fellowship and too great mutual trustfulness, and then, because of unbusinesslike divisions, not properly made as they go on, begin to doubt and distrust each other. Partners should always carefully and exactly observe pure business rules on the sound Scotch theory that "short accoonts mak lang freens."

Begin on Definite Basis.

In the absence of a definite agreement, when an unforeseen contingency arises, the right plan is to seek a settlement on a fair basis, and settle up and start over with a clear agreement as to what shall be done in future. These two men put in an equal sum—how much is not stated, nor does it matter. The outside man was not provided with any salary allowance. Maybe it was not intended that he do any work whatever. But he has done some work, and the work was done on Saturday nights and at busy times. Thus his time was extra valuable to the business when he put it in. It looks right and proper, therefore, that whether it was agreed or not, he should have some payments for that time, aside from the consideration of his share of the profits. If he had not been handy at those rush times, probably the business would have been under added expense for some extra help, so it is as broad as it is long. If he has put in 1-16 as much time as G, he is entitled to 1-16 of G's salary, or approximately $5 per month. But again, he came at extra busy times, so maybe payment for the

The Made-in-Canada Exhibition Train

Now Touring Through Western Canada—The Purposes of the Exhibit—About $50,000 Worth of Manufacturers' Samples on Board—Those of Interest to the Grocery Trade.

Goods estimated in value at $50,000 are being shown in the Made-in-Canada exhibition train which left Montreal on Thursday of last week, and Ottawa on Friday on its long trip to the Rocky Mountains.

The train is the undertaking of a number of manufacturers banded together under the name of the Canadian Home Manufacturers' Association, and its purpose is of an educative character. It is intended to demonstrate to Western Canadian towns and cities the quality and importance of some of Eastern Canada's manufactured products and to suggest the possibilities of development along similar lines in the West.

On Saturday the train lay on the C.P.R. tracks at North Toronto, and it was estimated that 25,000 people walked through it. Among the visitors were His Royal Higness, the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, who officially opened the train of ten cars for inspection.

An Expensive Exhibit.

As above state the Canadian Home Market Association have sent out samples of goods to the value of $50,000. It is stated that the average cost per day of the undertaking is $1,000 not including salaries, cost of train, etc.

The exhibits are arranged in ten standard baggage cars with side aisles and fitted with various sized compartments. In order that goods should not be displaced when cars are shunting, they are securely fastened. Some goods are displayed in silent salesmen. In all about 50 manufacturers are represented and there are few if any duplications of exhibits. The train is being run on schedule time.

A Lecturer Aboard.

H. D. Scully, secretary of the Canadian Home Market Association, Toronto, is in charge of the exhibition with J. A. Ramsay as assistant. The official lecturer is T. H. Race, who at the different stopping places will illustrate his lectures by lantern slides. The manufacturers exhibiting are represented by demonstrators, who explain to the public the points of interest in their particular goods.

The members of the party on board number twenty-five, including electricians, car cleaners, etc. During a trip lasting fifty days and covering a distance of 6,500 miles the party will live on the train, where every possible facility for a comfortable time has been introduced. It left Toronto on Saturday night for Port Arthur, where it was open to the public to-day. It is expected in Winnipeg on Thursday. It will make 100 stops on the west, and will run as far as Macleod, Calgary and Edmonton. It will not go beyond the Province of Alberta.

Many Lines Displayed.

Besides foodstuffs the exhibition includes household furniture, pianos, carpets, oilcloths, linoleums, bedding, wall paper, silverware, kitchen utensils, stoves, radiators and practically everything used about the home; cottons, woollens, knitted goods, clothing, boots and shoes, besides agricultural implements, traction engines, pumps, hardware, foodstuffs, rubber goods, paints, cameras, automobiles, machinery, etc. The train is electric-lighted by means of a dynamo in the car next to the engine.

Descriptive folders, setting forth the objects of the exhibition are being distributed to visitors.

Among the manufacturers exhibiting of interest to the grocery trade are the following:—Christie Brown Co., Toronto; Canadian Salt Co., Windsor, Ont.; National Drug and Chemical Co., Toronto; Edwardsburg Starch Co., Cardinal, Ont.; and Montreal; National Cash Register Co., Toronto; Pure Gold Manufacturing Co., Toronto; Wm. Davies Co., Limited, Toronto; Imperial Tobacco Co., Montreal, Smart Bag Co., Montreal; John Hillock & Co., Toronto; Stauntons Limited, Toronto, and Walter M. Lowney Co., Limited, Montreal.

The train will arrive in Winnipeg on the return journey about June 30 and will be back to Toronto a couple of days later.

The "Made-in-Canada" Exhibition Train at Toronto, just before leaving for the Canadian West.

Butcher.—Come, John, be lively now; break the bones in Mr. Williamson's chops and put Mr. Ray's ribs in the basket for him.

John (briskly).—All right, sir; just as soon as I have sawed off Mrs. Murphy's leg.

"Mamma," asked the thoughtful little boy, "do cows and bees go to heaven?"

"Why no," replied his mother, "what makes you ask such a question?"

"Cause if they don't the milk and honey the preacher said was up there must be canned stuff."

BRITISH MANUFACTURERS COMING.

That Canada is being looked upon as an important field to cultivate, is well demonstrated by the fact that at the end of this month from 80 to 100 of the leading manufacturers of Great Britain leave Liverpool for this country to study first hand our vast resources. These ambassadors of British industry are coming on the invitation of The Financial News, and, it is estimated, they will represent £50,000,000 in British capital.

The main object of the deputation will be to ascertain the opportunities that exist in Canada as far as erecting branch factories are concerned, the openings for capital in industrial enterprises and the possibilities of extending the market for British goods here. Among various other industries, biscuit and confectionery making, flour milling, and different kinds of food manufacturing will be represented. The tour will include the Maritime Provinces, the chief centres in Quebec and Ontario, Cobalt, and all prominent places in the four Western Canadian provinces as far as Vancouver. On the return, Montreal will be reached about July 26.

That this will be an important era in Canada's industrial history is self-evident. Canada is growing rapidly because there is plenty of room for expansion, and the business outlook is encouraging. It is small wonder, therefore, that outside manufacturers are viewing Britain's first colony as a land of promise. The West has long since begun its development, and no one knows its possibilities better than those manufacturers who have already made a strong bid for business there.

Our Old Country friends, if they haven't visited the Dominion in recent years, will have much to see, and as possibilities are at present practically unlimited, it is reasonable to declare that this country, as an industrial field, will hold a much higher position in Old Country eyes than hitherto.

ADVANCE IN PAPER BAGS.

Paper bags have gone up in price. In the past it has been usual, when advances were scheduled, to reduce the discount but this time it is a positive advance. It amounts on the average to about 15 per cent. while the actual advances range all the way from 10 cents to $1.50 per thousand.

The reasons given are that raw material and cost of production have increased and warranted the rise. A few weeks ago, some manufacturers decided to increase the discount but others claimed this action was not in any way justified by the paper market and cost of production. It was considered to be due to keen competition for business, which evidently was the case, judging from the present advance.

It is stated that this is the first positive rise in paper bags in thirty years as others were simply lessening of discounts.

An advance in roll paper is also being talked of.

COFFEE VALORIZATION SCHEME.

Report has it that a move will be made by United States authorities to break up the Brazilian coffee valorization scheme. In a petition in equity filed in the United States court, the valorization plan is declared to be a violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

It is alleged that coffee to the extent of 950,000 bags is stored in various warehouses of the New York Dock Company. The court is asked to declare the scheme unlawful, to enjoin the valorization committee from withholding the coffee from the market, and to appoint a receiver to sell the 950,000 bags, valued at $10,000,000. The Government also applied for a temporary injunction restraining the valorization committee from removing or disposing of the coffee held in America pending the termination of the issue.

The case will be somewhat of an international affair as the defendants include Herman Selicken of New York, Bruno Schroeder of J. H. Schroeder & Co., of London, Edouard Bunge of Antwerp, Le Vicomte des Touches of Havre, Dr. Paulo de Silva Prado of Sao Paulo, Theodor Wille of Hamburg, the Societe Generale of Paris, and the New York Dock Co. All the defendants except the last named, are members of the valorization committee.

THE CAUSES OF FAILURE.

John J. Dauphin, of Buffalo, in an address before the Credit Men's Association in Toronto last week gave some interesting statistics regarding the causes of business failures in Canada and the United States. They should be of importance both to the man already in business and to the man contemplating entering business.

It is startling to notice that ranging high as a cause of failure is incompetence and inexperience of those in charge of the business. Undoubtedly if statistics of failures in the grocery business from these causes were available the figures would be even more startling. Although unfortunate, it nevertheless cannot be denied, that there are a great many men engaged in the grocery business who do not understand it. There are countless stores being conducted at a loss by men who did not remain long enough as clerks to learn all the essentials of the business and its management and also by men who have gone into the business with absolutely no training or experience. Some of these have been successful but the majority have not.

Among other causes of failure, lack of capital is a prominent one. In these days of high prices when goods in many cases have to be purchased a considerable time ahead and in large quantities in order to get right prices, it takes a good deal of money to successfully finance a grocery business.

Extravagance, neglect, competition, speculation, fraud and failure of others are some of the other causes. The merchant already in business would do well to give careful attention to this list that he may guard against them. The man who has some thoughts of entering business should give even greater consideration to these causes which are liable to prove a stumbling block in his path to success.

SEEDING IN WESTERN CANADA.

One of The Grocer's Western Canadian correspondents writes from Elm Creek, Man., that seeding in Manitoba generally is fairly well advanced, but the wet weather of the last two weeks has to a certain extent retarded operations. On the lighter and higher lands the wheat is nearly all sown and most of the oats.

Upon the heavier soil there is considerable yet to do, but the weather is fine, at time of writing, and has the appearance of continuing so. With favorable weather nearly all the grain will be sown by the week of the 20th. The flax, of which there is a largely increased acreage, is not sown yet, and will not be for a few days. There have been a great number of tractors purchased by the farmers this spring, but owing to the wet weather they have not been largely used except for braking.

An excellent feeling is prevailing through the West generally and prospects are very bright.

A conservative estimate shows that fully 50 per cent. of seeding in Alberta was completed last week. The seed was put in under favorable circumstances, the seeding period being followed by unusually fine weather. It is, of course, at this stage, impossible to make any crop predictions, but on all sides, particularly among old and experienced grain growers there is a feeling that conditions are favorable for a bountiful yield. Stock throughout the province has wintered well, and the spring found the farmer in a splendid position. Owing to the fact that mixed farming will be more prominent this year than before, it is not expected that the average will be largely increased. It is confidently expected, however, that the yield per acre will be larger than in 1911.

A BIG CLOTHES PIN DEAL.

Many retail dealers who are accustomed to see the humorous side of human life, get not a little amusement from the questions and requests asked of them by certain members of the feminine sex.

To illustrate the point a story is told of a young bride—and the bride tells it on herself—who prior to the first wash day went to the grocery store for a supply of clothes pins.

"I want a dozen clothes pins, please," she politely remarked to the dealer.

"A dozen madam," he inquired with a twinkle in his eye, "you know they are three dozen for five cents."

"I said I wanted one dozen clothes pins," returned the new wife with bluntness and annoyed that the grocer should question her ability to look after her own affairs.

The dealer gave her the dozen. But when wash day came round there was found to be quite a shortage in clothes pins. A dozen didn't go very far with the result that the mistress of the newly organized house was a much wiser individual. She was too ashamed to go back to the same dealer for the required number but henceforth always made it a point to listen to his advice.

The profit figuring problem submitted by The Canadian Grocer a few weeks ago has been taken up by The Modern Grocer of Chicago. The problem, states that paper, was one which enters into the business of merchants, and every merchant, many times every day. A similar calculation must be made whenever a bill of goods is received. In practically all instances, the incorrect answers erred against the merchant.

Need of Proper Attention to Delivery

Halifax Dealer Lays Stress on Delivery Man's Intelligence and Cleanliness—Deprecates Promising Goods at Certain Times When Promises Cannot be Fulfilled.

"A satisfactory delivery is one of the most important items in the grocery business," remarked a Halifax grocer the other day. "I give especial attention to my deliveries, and I find that it pays.

"I believe it pays, too, to have a good man in charge. By man, I don't necessarily mean a grown-up, for some boys are better than some men; but intelligence counts for just as much in delivering goods as in selling them.

"I always try to get a man who will take pride in his work, who will see that the conveyance is clean, and who realizes that the way he looks after things is important to the store. There are such a lot of little things in connection with delivering that may do harm that it is worth while to have a person equipped with intelligence do this work. For instance, a man with a craze for reckless driving, or for needlessly lashing his horse will give a store a lot more bad advertising than most people think. Most of my customers are women; and what a woman thinks of a driver who ill-uses his horse, even to fill a hurry-up order, wouldn't look well in print.

Drivers Must be Clean.

"Then there's the matter of cleanliness. I keep my store spick and span. That means money to me. But if I send out a driver who is slovenly, or who handles his goods in such a style that they look dirty when they arrive at their destination, it counteracts a great deal of good work in the store. A dirty vehicle isn't a paying advertisement, either.

"'Never disappoint a customer' is an important axiom. For that reason, I try never to give a promise that I feel can't be carried out. If I say that certain goods will be delivered by three o'clock in the afternoon, they'll be there at three or before three — never later. If the customer wants them by two o'clock, and I know the rig has half a dozen prior calls, I turn down the order sooner than promise something I can't carry out. But I turn down precious few orders at that. I find that most of these people are reasonable, and appreciate a fellow who's honest with them in such matters.

The Way It Is Done.

"Really, it isn't so much what a man does as the way he does it that counts with customers. A dealer who knows his business can refuse a customer's request for a delivery inside of the next half-hour in such a way that the customer will think all the more or him, and will feel that the merchant is anxious to do his utmost. Another man will say, 'I don't know; we're awfully rushed. I wish you could wait, but if you can't, we'll try to get it up'—and the customer will think him a grouchy old cuss, and never give him credit for all the trouble involved in making that particular delivery on time."

Motion to Raise the Association Fees

Toronto R. G. A. Discuss Their Part in Financing the Ontario Organization—Regular Meeting on Monday Night—Think Garnishee Limit Should be Lowered.

Toronto, May 23—(Special).—Climatic conditions were somewhat against the attendance at the monthly meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers on Monday night. The important features to the meeting were probably two notices of motion given, one of a change in the constitution and the other of an amount to be drawn from the trust fund of the association.

Wm. C. Miller gave notice that he would move for a change in the constitution increasing the membership fee of the association from $1 as at present to $2. This is to be done for the purpose of financing the Toronto association's share of the newly formed Provincial organization. The $2 fee which will probably not come into force until January next will allow of $1 for Ontario association, and $1 for the local body. D. W. Clark's motion will be to draw $175 from the trust fund to pay this year's levy of Ontario association of $1 per member.

The Garnishee Limit.

D. W. Clark introduced the question as to what the association thought would be a proper sum for exemption in garnishment of wages. The opinion was expressed by some that it would be well to place it on a 50 per cent. basis although others thought this would be rather complicated. Others thought that if it could be got down to $10 instead of $25 as at present that it would be satisfactory.

After Some of the Druggists.

"Isn't there some possible way to make druggists close the grocery side of their store on Sunday?" was the pertinent enquiry of one member. "I believe you could buy a quarter's worth of soap on Sunday." Others suggested ice cream, candies or cigars as possible purchases in some stores.

"Some one should buy something and make them account for it," declared one member.

"Put the police on their trail," advised another.

The annual picnic will be held to Grimsby Beach on July 24.

TO CANVASS FOR MEMBERS.

Work Decided on by London Grocers—Arrangements for Annual Picnic.

London, Ont., May 23.—(Special).—The regular meeting of the Retail Grocers' Associations was held Tuesday evening, May 14th. There was a good attendance. Pres. John Diprose gave a report of what was done by the Executive of the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association at Brantford. A committee was named to canvass all the grocers in the city who are not members of the association, urging them to join and help the good work just started by the Ontario Association.

G. B. Drake gave a report of the meeting at Dorchester. He was sure the village merchants would co-operate with the Ontario Association. Arrangements were made for the excursion to Detroit on June 19th.

Frank Paull was elected to manage the grocers' baseball team. The boys have entered the merchants' league, and will play every Wednesday afternoon at Springbank. The team will have brand new suits, through the kindness of the Sunlight Soap Co.

The Executive held a business meeting after the regular meeting and disposed of a lot of good work. President Diprose is certainly making a name for himself as a hustler.

ADS. MUST BE TRUTHFUL.

A law against misleading and untrue advertisements has come into force in New York State. The Act pertains to misleading statements in any form of advertising, tending to give the appearance of an advantageous offer to the purchaser. Advertising of this nature will henceforth mean liability to fine of not less than $10 and not more than $500.

Seasonable Time for Selling Jams, Etc.

Home-made Supplies Disappearing—Good Window Will Bring New Business—A Suggestion From Montreal — Items in Display That Should be Attended to.

There can be no question of the value of a jam, marmalade and preserve window at the present time. It was pointed out in our issue of May 10 how the sales of pure goods have increased in Canada during the past eight or ten years. The estimate has been made by competent authorities that there is an annual production of $1,000,000 worth of pure jams, etc., in Canada while we import $400,000 worth from the Old Country. Compare this with ten years ago when the sum total of pure jams sold in this country was only about $25,000 worth, and one has no difficulty in seeing the advantages of featuring these lines.

The public is eating jams and marmalades and dealers are making money out of them in proportion to the actual demand and the amount they sell by the exercise of their own salesmanship methods.

Window From Montreal.

This brings in the point of display. The window should be used occasionally to create sales. A clean, attractive neatly arranged display is bound to gain attention. No one could look at the accompanying window and not be impressed by it. It was dressed by Walter Paul, a Montreal grocer and contains nearly all the elements of good display.

It is a popular opinion among window dressers that a window should contain a single line of goods, goods associated with one another, associated with a particular season or with a particular idea. This Montreal window belongs to the first classification and cannot therefore be criticised. A provision window could, without being criticised, contain ham, bacon, lard, eggs, butter, etc. A Christmas window may include extracts currants, oranges and confectionery, while a house-cleaning display may show brooms, lye, ammonia, and tubs.

Care in Arrangement.

The arrangement of the glass jars in symmetrical fashion in this window is a point to be commended. One could not be considered an artist who merely places a quantity of jars of fruit promiscuously on the floor of the window. He must have his display attractive or it will not hold the attention of the onlooker. In displaying a glass jar, bottle, or package the full benefit of the attractiveness may be lost if the labels are not given attention. A jar with a neat looking and clean label is going to arouse more interest than the one with the dirty label. Labels, too, should be arranged so that the best possible impression can be made on the eye of the prospective buyer. They should not be turned to the inside. Manufacturers go to considerable trouble and expense selecting a label that will help sell the goods and the retailer should, and usually does, as shown in Mr. Paul's window, take full advantage of them.

Why Jams Will Sell Now.

Now that this is a between season, it should be profitable to push sales of these goods. The housewife's shelf of preserves must be getting pretty low, if it has not altogether disappeared, and strawberries and pineapples are about the only fresh fruit on the market. Strawberries are still too high for the average family and everything points to good sales by retailers in preserved fruits. The window should work overtime.

Preserve and jam display shown recently by Walter Paul, Montreal. This is a window that sold goods.

STRONG BELIEVER IN DISPLAY.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—I have been in business for some years and have always contended, a good display as artistically arranged as possible is essential to business success.

The photograph of the canned goods display in the interior of my store you published in your issue of April 19th, (spring number), was noticed by the Dominion Canners, Limited, who sent a representative along to see it, and as a result they presented me with a letter case, and Mr. G. F. Grinyer, who fixed the display, with a bill case.

We wish to thank you for the publication and through you to also thank the Dominion Canners for their handsome presents, and to assure them of our appreciation for the recognition they considered the display merited.

The new company have taken over the building occupied formerly by Campbell, Wilson & Horn.

WESTERN CREDIT MEN'S OFFICERS.

Annual Meeting Last Week—Purse of $500 Presented to Retiring President.

Winnipeg, May 23.—(Special.)—The Canadian Credit Men's Association met at their second annual banquet on the evening of May 16th and elected officers for the ensuing year. The change of officers was occasioned by the resignation of H. H. Piggott, who resigned from the presidency to enter into business on his own account. Mr. Piggot was late credit manager for the J. H. Ashdown Co., and has entered into the brokerage business as H. H. Piggot & Co. At the banquet a purse of $500 was presented to Mr. Piggot as an expression of good will from his associates among the credit men.

W. S. Fallis, western manager of Sherwin-Williams, was elected new president, and R. R. Wilson, of Campbell Bros. & Wilson, vice-president. Henry Detchson was re-elected secretary-trueasurer.

The main address of the evning was by W. J. Healey, of the Winnipeg Free Press, on the subject, "The Fight for Fair Railway Rates."

OUR NEWFOUNDLAND LETTER.

Poor Seal Fishing Season—Salmon and Lobster Appearing.

St. John's, Nfld., May 20.—(Special.)—Newfoundland's introductory industry, the sealing voyage, is over, and the last steamer to arrive, the Neptune, closes the voyage for 1912.

Twenty-three steamers, and 4,179 men prosecuted the voyage, and the total catch was 175,130 seals, weighing 3,965 tons, net value $329,264. The voyage is disappointing and discouraging, and away below an average catch. A good seal fishery for a start gives encouragement and an impetus to the other fisheries, and it is hoped that the poor seal fishery is in no way indicative of the balance of our fisheries for 1912.

Salmon and lobster are just beginning to appear, around the coast, but no codfish yet.

Lobsters made their appearance in one of our nearby settlements on the 14th, and about one hundred were brought to town; they sold at 30c apiece. Next morning they were plentiful in the market, and the price dropped to 15c.

The first salmon came in on the 15th, and fetched a ready sale at 35c per lb.

There is talk of an amalgamation of ten or eleven of the cereal mills throughout Ontario. Negotiations have been going on for some little time but have not taken any definite shape as yet.

Views on Propriety of the Price Ticket

Number of Dealers Assembled Express Varied Views on Use of This Card—All Agreed on Value of Show Card—"People Will Buy More if They Know the Price," Claims One — "They Will Not," Contradicts Another.

To use them or not to use them. That was the question.

A number of retailers were gathered together, and, as is usual on such occasions, they were discussing some different phases of business. The subject under consideration was the merits or demerits or the price ticket as used by retail stores. All did not hold the same opinion.

One grocer was a strong advocate of extensive use of the cardboard to acquaint customers with prices. "I am using more all the time," he said, "because I see that they bring me good business. In a way they take the place of a clerk, and they certainly save a great deal of the clerk's time.

Peculiarities of People.

"You know," he continued, "the majority of people are backward about asking the price of goods, especially of more than a few articles at a time. At least, I find it that way, and I don't think I differ much from the ordinary run of people. I know when I want to buy a tie, I always go to the store where things are marked, so that a selection can be made without asking too many questions."

A Different View.

"Well, I don't believe in using the price ticket," broke in another. "I think it gives a cheap appearance to goods. It may be all right in a bargain store, where people are looking for cheap stuff and not for quality, but I think it gives too much of the bargain idea to put price cards on high class goods."

"If you will take a trip through any of the big department stores," argued his neighbor, "you will see that they use a great quantity of them, and they are supposed to be at the top of the heap in business ideas."

On the Bargain Goods.

"I think you will find," said another, "that it is mostly the bargain goods on which they put prices. When they get in any new or high class goods they rarely put a price ticket on them, although they use show cards. I certainly believe in the show card to work up interest in goods, while whenever I have a special price to offer on any line that customers may know there is a special price on it, I use a price card."

The Two in One.

"Well, I combine both show card and price ticket," came from another. "I use a few words to describe the goods and work up interest, but generally also quote a price."

It seemed here as if discussion would lag, but finally the first exponent of the price ticket came back with another argument.

Under an Obligation.

"When people see the price," he said, "they know if they can afford to buy it. Supposing a person sees an article in the window, but there is no price on it. He comes in to enquire the price. Now it may be more than he wants to pay for it, but after asking about it, he hates to leave without buying. Although he may purchase, he feels he should not have done so, and that is not a good feeling for the customer to have."

He was not allowed to get away with this argument, however, without a contrary view being expressed.

Room for Salesmanship.

"I don't think that argument is sound," spoke up another. "If the price is higher than he has been used to paying, or thinks he should pay, the quality of the goods must be correspondingly higher. In the case you speak of, where the customer finds the price higher than expected, that is where the clerk or salesman should get in his work, by showing that the goods are of higher quality, and are worth more. Now a price card on high quality goods will often scare a customer away, while if he had to enquire the price, the clerk has a chance to point out the high quality of the goods."

They Should be Clean.

"Well, there is one thing we are all agreed on," spoke up one who thought enough diverse opinions had been expressed on the subject, "if you do use price cards or show cards be sure they are clean. A store I was in the other day had a card on some candies which was so faded and dirty that it would certainly never sell any of the goods, at least, not to me."

And here the discussion ended.

RESULT-GETTING FLOUR WINDOW

Here is a flour window display used by a grocer with good results:—In the right-hand corner of the window was placed a small range borrowed for the occasion, the oven door was left open to show the quality of the bread baked from the flour. On top of stove was seen the finished product of the home. To the left was placed a wax figure with her hands in the dough mixing the next batch. On the cabinet shelves could be seen many other articles of food which gave it a true kitchen-like appearance.

A PROBLEM ON THE SALARIES OF PARTNERS.

equivalent of ⅛ time would be equitable. Hence the $10 suggested by G looks fair to me.

Peace in the Family.

I therefore should approve of G's $10 suggestion for what is past, but urge that the settlement be made in a liberal and not a grudging spirit, for in that way the relationship can be made to continue; otherwise probably not. But at any rate, cut it as short as possible, even at some sacrifice, for there is nothing so disastrous to a business as internal strife. Then make a new deal or separate. Get peace into the family or get a divorce. I think a little diplomacy and an honest effort to effect a settlement will clear things up; and I surely hope so.

Safety Deposit—Buying Bonds.

Another letter contains the following:

"In your paper I find many interesting writings—amongst them I find one by Henry Johnson, Jr., page 37—What is a safety deposit? How would you buy bonds?

Subscriber."

A safety deposit box is a section of the safe of a bank or trust company which you can rent for the safekeeping of your valuable papers, bonds, etc. It is private; you hold the key. It is also vastly more secure than any storage with which you can provide yourself. These cost from $3 per year upward—sometimes the smallest ones rent for less than $3.

Bonds can be bought through any reliable banking house. They are best purchased through houses which make a specialty of bonds. It is difficult always to know which are reliable. If this correspondent will indicate to me how much he has to invest in bonds now, writing to me direct, I shall gladly look into his needs and write him recommendations of such securities as are best suited to his needs. These securities will be of the same character as I have bought for years, and many of which I now hold. Every business man, big or little, should know about sound bonds for reasons which I have detailed hitherto, and for other reasons which he will grasp more fully the more he studies this useful and fascinating subject.

Paper Bags Advance--Rice Up 15c. Cwt.

Advance Averaging Around 15 Per Cent. in Paper Bags — Roll Paper is Also Strong—Phenomenal Rise in Celery Seed—Beans are Scarce and Firm—Sugar is Weak—Prunes Down in Winnipeg.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Sugar.—Weak.

Rice.—Advanced 10c per cwt.

Paper bags.—Higher.

Montreal, May 23.—Among the changes of the week is an advance of 15 cents per cwt. in Rangoon rice. In dried fruits, Valencia raisins and dates are steady to firm. Sugar however, continues to hold a weak position and as stocks held are small, it is agreed that a decline in price would result in a good volume of sugar business.

Paper bags have been advanced by manufacturers this week. There has been a change in both the basis price as well as discounts, and advance on the whole will probably range about 15 per cent. The change in prices varies from 20 cents per thousand for 1 lb. and 10 cents in one or two other sizes, up to $1.50 per thousand for 20 lb. bags. There has been no regular advance that could be figured on percentage basis, however, upward move being different on different lines. For instance, 16 lb. light are up 80 cents per thousand while 16 lb. heavy remain unchanged.

SUGAR.—The market has been worked pretty bare and it seems that in spite of large stocks of highcosting sugar held by refiners that a drop of 10 cents at least, will take place before long. Some dealers say that the situation would be much healthier if a decline of 20 cents took place. Our advice is to buy still in small quantities.

DRIED FRUITS.—There is nothing of a lively nature in this market as the Old crop is now pretty well exhausted. Valencia raisins in primary markets are practically exhausted and the light stocks on spot are held for firm prices. Currants are slightly easier although stocks remaining in Greece are reported as insufficient to carry until new crop is marketed. The usual report of rains having damaged Sultana crops has been received but it is too early to predict what the outturn of 1912 will be. Dates are practically exhausted in London and high prices have been paid for recent shipments.

In California prunes the bottom has about been reached. Both holders and packers are asking higher prices than a few weeks ago. The same remarks apply to cut fruits and it is stated considerable purchases of the latter have been made by fortunate buyers.

The local market has found a steady trade for spot stocks at remunerative prices and it looks as if our market will be in good condition to receive the new crops which come along towards the fall.

TEAS.—Early Japan teas are reported to have been executed at the same prices as last year, the cup quality being equal to that of 1911 and the leaf a little longer which will give the teas a better style. On grades from 25c to 21c it is expected the market will be a ½ cent. lower than last year, but the lower grades will figure out relatively higher. Orders given up to the present equal those of last year, and if there be no change in weather the crop will also be about the same.

China teas are said to be pretty firm, the market being open for Packling Congous which are grown in the north, the other districts being chiefly green centres.

COFFEE.—Considerable interest is focussed on coffee as a result of the report that the U. S. A. authorities have decided to sue the valorization interests. The breaking up of this trust would bring about the long looked for drop in prices. It is more than difficult to say just what the result will be at the present moment as it may be proven that no Act in the U. S. A. can justify action against Brazilian interests.

Roll Paper.—Strong.

Twine.—Quoted from 26 to 30c lb.

Toronto, May 23.—"Good and bad in spots," was the comment of one wholesaler on trade conditions. Evidently there might be more activity but a number of the trade appear satisfied with volume of business. Dullness of sugar detracts from volume of sales. It is a question whether rainy weather is helping trade even in the country. While farmers can't do anything on the land and now have a chance to get into town, nevertheless roads are in rather bad condition.

An important change of the week with a bearing on the expense account of the grocer is an advance in paper bags announced on Monday. While increase varies on different lines one dealer said it would amount to about 15 per cent. Reason given is increased cost of raw material, higher wages and some other minor factors. It is general for any incerase to be shown in reduced discounts but this time there has been a change in basis price with slight reduction in discounts as well. The advance varies with different sizes. For instance in lights, 1 lb. are up from $1.10 to $1.30 per thousand, 2 lb. from $1.50 to $1.60, 3 lb. from $1.90 to $2.10, 4 lb. from $2.30 to $2.40, 5 lb. from $2.70 to $3.00, 10 lb. from $4.50 to $5.40, and 20 lb. from $8.00 to $9.50. Roll paper is also strong and there is talk of advancing prices. "We expect an advance," was the answer of one paper firm when questioned regarding wrapping paper.

There appears to be considerable difference at present moment in prices quoted on cotton twine. Cotton has been firming but some firms who bought previous to advance are holding prices as low as 26 cents per lb. Others quote up to 29 and 30 cents. "Present prices of cotton warrant 29 cents per pound," said one man.

In face of strong broom corn market, some manufacturers are quoting prices which compared with two months ago show reduction of 10 per cent While some firms may have bought corn at a good price, it seems that competition is also a factor in easing prices. Fire recently destroyed 65 cars of broom corn at Hutchinson, Kansas, but dealers say this will have no important bearing on market.

SUGAR.—Refined sugar still maintains its position. Toronto price is $5.45 as compared with $4.70 a year ago. Although there is no change in quotations, general situation is weak. While there is considerable talk along the street about expecting lower prices, sugar men say this is by no means a certainty. True it is that Cuban situation is quite weak, but this is no direct gauge of Canadian market, refiners here now operating with high priced B. W. I. raws. In face of some probability of lower prices, trade continues on hand to mouth basis." There has been no big buying movement for some time and stocks in retailers' and wholesalers' hands are considered as well cleaned up.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.—There is not as much interest shown in molasses in Ontario as some of the other provinces. Present movement is considered as up to standard. There is a firmer feeling in Barbados molasses in primary.

While trade in corn syrups is on a smaller scale than some time ago, it is appreciable for season. Demand for this line during summer months is much larger than was case some years ago.

DRIED FRUITS.—There are no changes of importance to record in dried fruits. Situation is much the same as has been previously outlined. Prunes are unchanged but none too strong. Same condition prevails in seeded raisins. Evaps. are not in large supply but exhibit no particular firmness.

Figs, especially better grades are in rather short supply, supplying a contrast to situation a year ago when there was a plentitude. Dates are in the same boat as figs.

TEA.—The samples of new Japan tea which have been received in America show a leaf of fair average for first picking. Canadian interest in this line as yet is small. It is reported that Congou crop will be below normal, which was to be expected as a result of the unsettled conditions that have existed in China for many months.

The indications with regard to Indian tea are that prices will remain steady for the next month or two, as most Gardens have disposed of their season's production and unless the new season's growth comes along fairly early, prices may harden up despite the fact that distributers are reputed to hold fairly large stocks.

With regard to Ceylon tea, the position is somewhat different. The drought experienced during the earlier months of the year, is over: the rains in Ceylon are falling earlier than usual; recent advices show improved yields and shipments from Colombo to the United Kingdom for April are nearly 1,000,000 lbs. higher than in April of 1911; estimates for May also show a further probable increase. Should such prove to be the case, there will be a good supply of Ceylon tea suitable for general purposes, which will tend to keep prices on a parity with those ruling throughout the past month.

COFFEE.—There is no change in local quotations on coffee. Business is considered as on a fair scale for season.

New York coffee market showed a somewhat stronger tone last week. Receipts of Santos at port of shipment are however, running pretty heavy and that the yield will be a full 10,000,000 bags now seems a certainty.

According to reports so far obtainable it looks as if the next crop which begins its outturn on July 1 will be the smallest in years.

Prices on chicory are well maintained and decidedly higher than a year ago. Besides shorter crop last year, demand is on the increase as with coffee prices high, there is a greater consumption of chicory.

SPICES.—This is the season when demand for spices is expected to be more brisk and trade appears to be living up to expectancy. Opening of navigation brought a rush to some houses and since trade has been steady.

Peppers are firm in sympathy with advances in primary markets. "Cloves have been climbing at primary points," said one dealer, "but you know there was a marked easiness for a time, so that compared with some little time ago, there is really no net advance." The general feeling is however, one of steadiness. Cream tartar is quoted from 23 to 26 in tins. One quarter pound packages range around 90 cents.

One of the lines which has shown a phenomenal advance in past six weeks is celery seed. In fact it has about doubled in value. Little more than six weeks ago, it could be purchased at 20 cents. The normal price is around 18 cents. To-day dealers are asking 35 to 37 cents. "Our price is 35c and we hold it open only from day to day," said one firm.

Short crop is primary cause of advance but one local dealer says that market has been cornered and prices boosted. This line is of more interest as pickling season approaches.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.—Standard B Rangoon rice has been advanced 15 cents per cwt. during the week. This is the result of firmer feeling that has existed and brings Montreal milled on a Toronto basis up to $3.68.

It will be remembered that lower prices quoted for May 1 delivery were withdrawn some time before that date. That gave an indication of firmness, which has since developed into present advance.

Conditions in rice producing sections of U. S. have been bad of late. Bad weather has held back planting and crop will be late. It is conditions in East, however, that bear greatest influence on Canadian prices.

NUTS.—There are reports of shelled walnuts being shaded by some firms. Difference in quality makes it hard to compare values.

Some dealers report Brazil nuts coming in for considerable attention. Fact that they are new goods assists in their sale. So does the fact that they are reasonable in price, being lower than at any time during past few years.

BEANS.—Some dealers still quote prunes at $2.75, but there are not a few with higher ideas. They are scarce and prices are at a level that would have scared buyers but a few years ago. With many construction and mining camps in operation, consumption has been steadily on increase while production has not been keeping pace. Potatoes being high also throws strength on beans.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—As announced last week there has been a firmer feeling in salmon, especially in sockeye, stocks of which are small. Indeed stocks of some wholesalers on talls No. 1 are pretty well cleaned up and as high as $2.65 is being asked, although there are quotations below that figure. As has been pointed out before there is an increasing demand for ½'s which are worth $1.65. This is another lean year in salmon and dealers expect the pack of sockeyes will not be large. Cohoes are now bringing around $2.

Although early, there is some interest being taken in this year's growth of vegetables. "This weather doesn't look very promising for vegetables," was the pessimistic comment of one jobber. Wholesalers are pretty well booked up for their orders. It was necessary to book by May 1 this year in order to get best discount. Last year 2½ cents was allowed off orders booked previous to June 1. There is a guarantee of 60 per cent. delivery on tomatoes, peas, beans and corn made by canners this year. According to local jobbers, some independent factories are rather tardy about booking orders except at canner's opening prices.

Market is pretty bare of canned lobsters. New pack will be coming along sometime in June.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Dried Fruits—Cheaper.

Beans—Firm.

Winnipeg, May 23.—Local wholesale merchants report general business conditions as on the whole favorable, but damp cold weather that has prevailed through May has delayed seeding, and if of much longer continuance will have a depressing influence. Wheat seeding is practically finished. The wheat area in Manitoba is less than that of last year. In Saskatchewan there is an increase in acreage estimated at 20 per cent.

There has been a sharp decline in dried fruits during week. Prunes and raisins being the lines affected. Beans are firm and will probably make further advances.

Collections are reported as showing some improvement, and will no doubt pick up after seeding season comes to an end.

DRIED FRUITS.—There has been a decided drop in prices in dried fruits. Prunes have fallen about 1 cent all round, and there is a sharp decline in raisins. Prune stocks are said to be heavy, and season's crop promises well. Further reductions are not improbable.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, May 22.—Local dealers are looking forward with interest to the holiday trade, and expect to have it mark a turn for the better, as business in most cases during past week has been rather quiet. Collections have been up to the average, and outside orders with retailers have been encouraging, but local trade has been quiet for some days. The suburban service is now opening, which generally means increased orders, and this with the holiday and accompanying activity of pleasure-seekers, augurs well for better business.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, May 22.—The local grocery trade continues in good volume. Orders coming in from outside points are quite satisfactory for season. Farmers are now busy putting in their crops and on account of bad condition of roads heavy travel is not heavy but on the whole dealers are quite satisfied, and outlook is favorable.

Dealers here have been notified during the week that Ontario millers have advanced the price of flour 25 cents per barrel, with the probability of a further advance in near future. The local market did not advance for several days after advance in flour was recorded, but it has now fallen into line.

Practically all the Halifax grocery stores now close at 12.30 o'clock on Wednesdays, and will continue to do so until the end of August. The object of this is to give the clerks a half holiday during the summer months, and the trade preferred to close on Wednesday, in preference to Saturday.

Victoria Day Demand Helps Fruit Trade

In Both Fruits and Fancy Vegetables — Pines Arriving in Larger Quantities—Prices are Lower—Florida Tomatoes Steady to Shade Easier—Direct Boat From Mediterraenean to Montreal Arrives—Fruit Sold Well This Week.

Victoria Day has lent a helping hand to trade in both fruits and fancy vegetables during the past week. It is usual around every holiday for a better demand to be experienced in both these lines. Just now fruits are on a fairly reasonable level, while there is a goodly array of fancy vegetables available with which to tempt the holiday appetite. Late last week and early this week, a greater volume of orders began to come in from country and city dealers and even up to Thursday, belated orders were being received. Saturday should be a good day from retailer's point of view.

The expected lower prices on pines referred to last week, has taken place, a fairly substantial reduction having occurred. They are coming along to Canadian markets in larger quantities, and late arrivals have shown improved quality. Cuba and Porto Rico is supplying demand at present. Florida is late, and will probably not be a factor until Cuba winds up.

Florida tomatoes are steady to a shade easier. West coast shipping has not got under full swing as yet, and small quantities have been coming along. At present Florida is the only source of supply. Later on Texas and Mississippi will lend a helping hand, but it will probably be well towards the middle of June.

There has been considerable interest, especially in Eastern Canada, directed toward direct boat from Mediterranean carrying a cargo of oranges and lemons which arrived in Montreal last week. This is an annual shipment and was auctioned in that city on Thursday of this week. There were about 18,000 boxes of lemons in the cargo, about 11,000 being Messina. There was only a small quantity of Catania oranges in half boxes, and the balance of the shipment was made up of Sorrento oranges.

Navel oranges have been coming along from California in larger quantities, with weakening in prices across the line and reflection of easiness in Canada. At present, however, as refrigeration in transit is necessary, it is costing more to lay stock down at distributing points. Strawberries of an improved and sounder quality are coming along in carload lots.

Montreal has Bermuda celery this week, but it is bringing a high price.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—The weather has been a little cold, yet business is brisk and certain lines are still on the upward move. Bananas still are high, and it is evident that prices will go further. A better class of strawberries have come to hand recently, and have fetched better prices.

There are few Canadian red onions left, what there are remaining being of a poor quality.

Bermuda celery is selling at a good figure, the Florida variety being exhausted. Green peppers are now quoted in crates of 6 baskets.

Potatoes are selling well, though some feel that the imported goods are not up to mark, and are interfering with sales of the better grades on hand here. Green Mountains are scarce and fetching two dollars a bag.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS.—There has been a more active swing to fruit trade this week by reason of Victoria Day. Early in week retailers were anticipating their wants, while even up to Thursday belated orders were coming in.

It was pointed out last week that further easiness could be expected in pineapples. Prices are lower this week, and larger quantities are arriving and being taken up well. Prevailing price is around $3 per crate.

Bananas are in good demand, and prices continue steady. Red bananas are quoted at $3.75 to $4.50 per bunch. Oranges are in plentiful supply, and general trend is easier. Refrigeration now required makes cost of goods laid down here about 15c per box more than usual.

Strawberries of fair quality are coming in carlots at 15 to 17c per box.

VEGETABLES. — The holiday this week brought a better demand for fancy lines of vegetables. There is an extensive list of new goods that should appeal to appetite on the market now.

Tomatoes are steady to a shade easier. There has been one car of West coast stock arrive on this market, and quality was quite good. Florida has also sent along some new potatoes which are quoted at $7.50 per barrel. Trend will be downward as supplies increase.

Old potatoes show little or no change. While visible supply is small, most local dealers have fairly large quantities booked. At some provincial markets on Saturday last, farmers somewhat sprung a surprise by offering large quantities of potatoes which they have been holding and prices declined. This was not general, however.

Where Over-Confidence Meant Large Loss

Grocery Clerk Admitted Thefts Amounting to $700 From Cash Till—Was Daughter of a Friend, Too—Dealer Wondered Why Showing at End of Year Was Poor When Business Appeared to be Good—Thefts of Groceries.

By A. H. Harvey.

It is not wise for merchants to be too suspicious of their employes or fail to trust them to the extent they should. The work of the store may be carried on with much greater success if the proprietor has absolute confidence in those employed by him.

Nevertheless, it is not advisable that the merchant place too much dependence in the trustworthiness of his clerks unless he has made sure of their honesty. Some men are inclined to take too much for granted. Undoubtedly, there are many merchants to-day losing money for just this reason. The unfortunate feature is that most of these men continue on in ignorance of their loss unless they happen by chance to stumble across some evidence of it. Here is one case that may contain somewhat of a warning to those inclined to be careless in this regard.

Comes Out From England.

A young man with some experience in the grocery business in England came out to Canada to seek a future. He brought with him a small amount of money which, by marked economy, he had manged to get together in the Old Country. After a short period at clerking in this country, he opened a business for himself. His amount of capital was limited, but he considered that by dint of hard work and proceeding economically in regard to his personal expenses, he would in time be able to establish himself on a sound footing. He went earnestly to work and early morn until late at night found him at his labors. In a room behind the store he slept, and cooked his own meals in an attempt to save as much money as possible.

Business progressed nicely. He employed one clerk, but as trade became somewhat more substantial he felt it was necessary to have another. He knew of a young woman in the Old Country, a daughter of a friend, who wished to come to Canada. Negotiations proceeded and she came out to take the position. Being a friend of her family he naturally placed every dependence in her, and frequently left her in charge of the store.

The End of Year Reckoning.

He considered he was progressing well. Sales at least were on the increase. However, at the end of the year, when the time of reckoning came, things were by no means as rosy as had been expected. He summed up things a short time after, and although sales kept up, situation was no better. He was going behind, and puzzle his brain as he would, he could not determine the reason. He did not see that expenses were too high for business being done, while he was getting a normal profit on his goods.

The fact that his feminine clerk was dressing in a much better manner than he considered her salary warranted, was the first thing to arouse his suspicions. Even then he had no idea she was dishonest, but the fact that the till contained less money than he expected on a couple of occasions led him to ascertain with a certainty. He marked three bills in the till one day and went out. He watched the store for ten minutes. No customers had gone in, but when he returned, the marked bills had disappeared. Confronted with the evidence she acknowledged her guilt, and finally confessed that since she had entered his employ she had taken about $700 from the till. Here was the solution of why he had not been making any money. He had been putting forth his best efforts and all in vain.

He might have had the girl arrested, but what good would that have done? She finally promised she would pay him back so much per month, but his chances of ever recovering what he lost are not very bright.

Trouble From Another Source.

Nor was this the only case in which this grocer was losing money. Having his faith in the honesty of humanity thus shaken, he became suspicious of his other clerk, who lived above the store. He had reasons for these suspicions, having noticed that he was buying fewer groceries every week. He naturally began to wonder if this clerk were also dishonest, and was taking groceries without charging them. He left the store one day and returning suddenly found his suspicions to be true. The clerk had a whole box of groceries packed, ready to take to his dwelling above the store. He was caught and owned up to the truth.

Here was a young man in business striving as hard as possible to succeed, and all his efforts of no avail. Probably $900 had been stolen from him by dishonest clerks. Considering the net profit in the grocery business as 8 per cent., it would mean that he would have to sell $11,250 worth of goods to make up this deficit. Truly, the life of the groceryman is not always one of sunshine. The honest clerk, and there are many of them, is a big asset to any business, and should be recognized by his employer.

In the United States, 43 States have a Bulk Sales Act on their statute books requiring that five days' notice shall be given to creditors of intention of selling a stock in bulk.

The Pure Food Department of U.S. seized 10,000 bottles of catsup at Buffalo, N.Y. Government officials contend that the bottles contain "filthy, decomposed vegetable matter."

Cornmeal Prices Continue Steady

With Slight Increase Noted at Some Centres — Manitoba Wheat Somewhat Easier—Manitoba Flour Maintains Steady Position—Winter Wheat Holds Firm Front — Export Trade Dull.

Cornmeal continues to maintain a steady position, and during past week some slight advances are recorded at some centres. While the upward move is not large, nevertheless it indicates the trend of the situation. At some centres there appears to be some difference in quotations of different firms, which may be due to some extent to quality of raw material used in the manufacture.

Although Manitoba wheat has eased to some extent during past week, flour is regarded as holding a secure position. Demand for Manitoba flour cannot be described as brisk. One reason for present lull is probably the fact that country buyers have for some time been taking goodly quantities of flour in order to get mill feed and have still good sized stocks on hand.

Manitoba wheat has weakened during past week. United States markets have also been somewhat easier. Splendid growth, due to abundant rain and faultless temperature, especially in the northwest, sent wheat prices downward in Chicago on Monday. Winter wheat under small supplies on this side of line holds a firm front.

For this reason winter wheat flour holds a steady position with advances noted from Maritime provinces. Domestic trade may be normal, but export business is decidedly slack, there being a wide gap between bid and ask prices. "While winter wheat has gone up about 8 cents, equal to 40 to 50c per barrel more for flour," said one exporter, "we are only able to get about 10 cents per barrel more."

Wheat seeding in West is well to an end. Wheat area in Manitoba is less than last year, but it is estimated that there is a 20 per cent. increase in Saskatchewan acreage.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR. — No further change to be noted since last week, prices for all grades being firmly maintained. It is interesting to note that present prices are 50 cents per barrel higher than a year ago for spring wheat grades, and 30c to 60c for winter wheat flour, the cause being the fact that raw material is at present higher. The demand for spring wheat flour has fallen away during the past week, as country buyers having been obliged to take a quantity of flour during the winter in order to secure supplies of mill feed, have still a fair amount on hand. Until this surplus is worked off no heavy demand can be looked for from the country.

THE GOVERNMENT ON COLD STORAGE.

"Judicious handling and careful refrigeration of perishable products are the two things most necessary for the conservation of food," says the Census and Statistics Monthly. "The one and the other are alike indispensable, and without both it is not possible to get good results.

"Cold storage, as we have it in Canada, is not as good as it should be. Especially is this the case as regards poultry and eggs. Some of us were born in the country and we know what a fresh egg is, and also a good chicken; and the cold storage man often causes us to regret that he has taken up a business which he does not understand. Every food product should be given clean and honest treatment.'

Smoked Fish Are Still in Good Demand

This is Report From Several Centres — Haddies and Fillets Favorite Lines—Major Portion of Business in Fresh Varieties, However—Receipts of Lake Fish Will be Heavier in Near Future.

A feature reported from several centres this week is that smoked fish continue to hold an important position on the stage of demand. It is not an unusual thing for dealers to drop the handling of smoked fish at the same time as frozen varieties make their exit. However, the big dealers continue to handle them and find an appreciable demand as will any grocer who stocks and displays them. Producers of smoked fish report a good business, with finnan haddie and fillets among the favorites.

Major portion of business is, however, in fresh varieties, although supplies were somewhat held up last week by stormy weather both at coast points and on in land waters. Fishing season on lakes has not yet reached its height, and supplies are not as heavy as they will be a week or so hence, but there is a good assortment available.

Lake trout and white fish are in good demand. Cod and haddock have been in liberal supply along the eastern coast, but shad as well as salmon remains scarce and high. Mackerel are expected to strike in along Nova Scotian coast shortly.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—A fair trade is passing for season. Haddock and cod are in good supply, while buck and roe shad are fairly reasonable in price. Dressed bullheads and perch are arriving more freely than has been the case, and prices are quite low. New lines which are offered on the market are new Gaspe salmon and brook trout, the latter bringing 25 cents per pound. Lake trout and whitefish are good sellers, although trout at present is rather scarce. There are two fish days this week. Friday and Saturday.

In smoked lines, haddies and fillets are selling well.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—Generally speaking, demand for fish is on fair scale for season. This is the report handed out by majority of local dealers. Greater portion of trade is in fresh varieties with smoked still making a fair bid for honors.

However, the fishing season has not as yet reached its height, and supplies are not on as large a scale as will be the case in a week or so. Still supplies so far have been next to ample, although there was a shortness last week of both coast and inland fish, due principally to windy weather.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.—Catch of shad is the matter of chief interest in St. John at present, but up to present run has been none too good. Owing to early scanty supply, prices have been rather high for this district, wholesale prices prevailing being about twenty-five to thirty cents. This is expected to be lowered considerably within a few days. Only a few lots have been thus far received. but quality of fish could hardly be excelled. Some fine large salmon have been caught already, although season is young and these have sold at from twenty-five to thirty cents a pound. Halibut ranged from eight to ten cents wholesale, but supply was limited owing to the rough weather. The wet weather has interfered, but the freshet is expected to prove beneficial.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—Some splendid catches of cod and haddock were landed last week. Demand for fish at present time is light on local market. Lobsters are now plentiful, but price continues firm, especially for large sized lobsters. Shipments to Boston from Nova Scotia are heavy.

Smoked fish business continues quite brisk. There is a good supply of stock for smoke houses, and exports to Quebec and Montreal market are being well maintained.

Fresh trout are coming on market fairly plentifully, but salmon are scarce and price high.

MANITOBA.

WINNIPEG.—Business in fish is seasonably active. Frozen halibut is out of the market. Limited supplies of fresh trout and salmon are coming in. Fresh whitefish will soon be on market.

Hot Weather Does Not Kill Fish Sales

Splendid Opportunities for Sales by Those Who Have Meat Shops Adjoining Grocery—Long Narrow Showcase Useful — Cleanliness in Fish Department Should be Sought — Show Cards Prove of Advantage.

"You might as well say there is no business to be done in certain goods which our customers do not know as say that we cannot sell fish in hot weather," recently remarked an up-to-date Montreal grocer. And his remarks are well worth consideration, as he has made an entire success of business, his success being due in great part to his always eluding obstacles which some of his nearby competitors evidently feel are unavoidable.

The volume of business done in fish naturally must decrease some during the hot months as large stocks carried so easily in the fall and winter cannot be kept as well during the summer without chances of loss. Nevertheless a large percentage of the average grocers do a most satisfactory business the whole year round and the method of some are interesting.

For those who have a separate meat department, in fact a meat shop as part and parcel of their grocery, there are splendid opportunities as long as attention is given to careful display. Customers naturally give their orders for meat as they stand before the large logs which serve for counters in almost all meat markets. Consequently a long show case stretching all along the front of these logs not only adds to appearances but also serves as an unfailing object of attention.

Dimensions of Showcase.

The show case in question should be about one foot and a half deep and a shade less in width as customers generally prefer to examine the meat they are purchasing and a wider case would therefore act as an obstacle rather than an attraction.

Along the bottom of the case can be arranged different varieties of fish both large and small and as the interior is lined with galvanized iron a generous supply of lettuce leaves, parsley, radishes and ice make a most inviting and tempting show. That customers may know the different names, etc., neatly printed cards, small of course, can be gummed on the inside of the glass over the variety lying directly beneath. This class of case has been used with great success by a leading Montreal merchant, and he finds that the contents of the case are frequently examined by customers before he has a chance to take their meat orders.

Fish in the Grocery Store.

While the latter class of case could also be used to advantage in the purely grocery department, yet leading dealers think it loses part of its magnetism when taken away from the centre of meats, and therefore attribute better results to a large display of choice lines on a large marble slab. And after all what is cleaner looking than a bright stretch of white marble fitted neatly on the counter, carrying partly cut salmon, halibut, haddock, with plump haddies and other smoked and prepared varieties.

Catchy Show Cards.

In whatever corner of the store the fish department is placed (it should be in a bright and clear position if possible), a long show card containing something catchy such as: "Our Brain Food Specials," should be hung on a string over the fish clerk's head, so that no customer can miss it and so that curiosity may be aroused. When new and old customers do approach this counter it is up to the man in charge to sell the goods and surely it is reasonable to state that any clerk should be in a position to put up a good strong talk on the nutritious properties of all classes of fish.

TRAVELERS' HOLIDAYS.

Ontario Wholesalers Decide on Dates Between July 22 and August 3.

The Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Guild have already decided on the dates for travelers' holidays. The salesmen will be withdrawn from the road from July 22 to August 3 and wholesalers have agreed not to send out substitutes to cover the territory west of, but not including, Toronto, as far north as, but not including, North Bay and as far west as and including Windsor. They have also agreed not to solicit business by telephone.

The following are the firms in the agreement:—

BERLIN.—Randall & Roos.

BRANTFORD.—Geo. Foster & Sons, Ltd.; Geo. Watt & Sons, Ltd.

COLLINGWOOD.—T. Long & Bro., Ltd.; Telfer Bros., Ltd.; G. Stephens Co., Ltd.

A CHAIN OF STORES.

The Capital Grocery Company, of Toronto, is working on the formation of a joint stock company to enter business in Oshawa, Bowmanville, Port Hope and Cobourg. The object, they claim, is to reduce the cost of living to the public. The promoters state these stores will materially lessen the cost of the necessities of life, as they claim they will buy in large quantities and that business will be run by superior methods.

Produce & Provisions

Butter and Eggs Steady to Shade Easier

This Seems to be General Situation — Evidently Scarcity of Butter in West—Pastures Good and Increase in Make Expected—Eggs are Easier in U.S.—Some Stocks Coming From Across the Border.

While butter prices at more than one centre have shown slight downward tendency during past week, at other places a steady tone has been maintained. If we continue to take Cowansville, Que., as a gauge, we will find little change. Last Saturday prices ruled at 26¾ cents, while 26⅜ was the price one week before. On most markets, decks have been kept pretty well cleared, supply and demand measuring up almost equally. There is evidently a scarcity of butter in the Northwest, as is shown by orders received by Eastern markets.

One explanation of why butter continues at rather high level at this season is because the market was completely bare of stock when new make began coming forward, whereas last spring a good supply of old butter was left over, and when new make commenced prices toppled. Pastures have been making good prospects, and large increase in production will probably follow.

As in case of butter, while egg prices have eased just slightly at some centres, at others there has been no change, although majority of wholesalers are still looking for lower prices. Fact that prices across the border are easier and that with warm weather liberal offerings are expected from that direction, has a tendency to weaken prices. As pointed out last week some Canadian markets have been supplied with U. S. goods. Canadian wholesalers have been taking U. S. eggs for storage purposes also, a large number of dealers in Toronto having made contracts. It seems that the Canadian hen is not present in large enough numbers to produce enough eggs for even the home consumption.

Hogs and provisions maintain a general steady tone, with a normal demand for season reported. Smoked and cooked meats will be in greater favor from now on.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—A fair trade is being done in lard, there being a steady demand for small lots to fill actual wants. Packers are all busy, and report a most satisfactory business passing.

BUTTER. — Local market remains quiet, and lower prices are expected. But prices must come well under 28c before it will be safe to operate on any large scale. The receipts for the week show an increase of 1959 packages, compared with previous week, but these figures do not nearly equal those of corresponding period last year. As a large amount of butter was imported from the United States during opening period of May, 1911.

EGGS.—Increased supplies of eggs are coming forward, but prices are still on high side, and will have to come down if demand is to be as strong as dealers would like to see it. From present indications, however, we are safe in stating that a 2c drop will soon take place in the country. The countinued cool weather has brought about an increase in the finest early spring eggs, the amount to hand at present being equal to that of last year, but prices are about 5 cents a dozen higher, so that outlook is not healthy.

CHEESE.—Strong feeling continues to prevail in cheese situation, and prices are steadily working higher, as at all country boards a slight increase was made. The local market is unchanged, as far as prices are concerned, but the feeling is undoubtedly stronger. A fair volume of business is passing in finest Westerns. Receipts for week show a decided increase over last week.

PROVISIONS.—A half cent increase on roll bacon and shoulders is made by some firms this week. Long clear is slightly firmer, and general tone of pork products is steady. Dealers say demand for lard is still keeping at good level, notwithstanding high prices.

Run of hogs has only been normal, and prices are somewhat higher, while dressed product is also firmer.

BUTTER.—Creamery butter is quoted slightly lower by number of firms, but dairy shows little or no variation. Majority of dealers are looking for still lower prices, but all do not hold this opinion. "Butter at outside points is quite firm," said one wholesaler, "and I am finding it difficult to get supplies."

"Demand and supply is running pretty even with our firm," said another, "but I am looking for lower prices."

"Prices are still too high," said a third. "I expect them to go lower, but don't look for any big drop."

June butter is generally in demand for storage purposes, providing, of course, the price is right.

EGGS.—Egg prices during week show no change, although wholesalers are still looking for those lower prices which are so tardy in making their appearance. There are still some supplies coming from across the line, and reports from there would indicate easier tendency. With warm weather U. S. offerings are expected to be large. Certain quantity of eggs are being stored even at present price.

Selling Provisions for the Past 38 Years

How One Dealer Considers the Importance of This Branch of The Grocery Business—Sell Best Parts of Cooked Hams for Higher Prices Than Others—Use Display Refrigerator for Butter, Eggs, Etc.

The big season for smoked and cooked meats is now opening up. There is a much greater demand for these lines during the summer months, and the sales of many stores reach an extensive figure. The success of this department is generally in proportion to amount of effort directed to it by the dealer.

One man who finds sales for these lines expanding during the summer months is C. Zurhorst, provision and grocery dealer at 333½ Yonge street, Toronto. This firm make a speciality of cooked meats and impress this fact on customers by store signs and newspaper ad.

Show Meats in Window.

A good deal of business in provisions is created by window display. Different lines of meats are shown separately on white platters and a plentitude of price cards is used in the display. Especially during the warm weather some lines of meats have to be kept in refrigeration and the dealer finds it impossible to show them in the window.

This store has overcome the difficulty by the use of a glass front refrigerator at the rear of the window. In this, perishable varieties may be shown so that the passerby will notice them. At the top of the refrigerator is a sign, "Noted for cooked meats." Besides cooked ham, they handle a big range of jellied meats.

Keeping Out the Sun.

Their store is on the east side of the street and in the afternoon as the sun circles to the west, it shines into the window. The awning shades it to some extent qut not completely and it would not do to allow the sun to shine on meats. To prevent this a sheet of cotton is stretched across the outside of the window. It is just two feet wide and protects the meat from the sun but does not completely shut off the display as pulling down a blind would do. The sheet of cotton is also made use for blazing forth the fact to those who pass, "Noted for cooked meats."

In the interior of the store, display is made an important point. Meats are shown extensively on platters on the counter. A big variety of cheese is shown. On one side hams hang down from a rod.

Display Refrigerator Used.

There is also a display refrigerator showing butter, lard and cooked meats. Price tickets are used extensively in all displays so that at a glance a person may see the selling price of any line.

"In selling a ham," says Chas. H. Zurhorst, "we always charge a higher figure for the most desirable portion of it. Of course, we always charge more for meat when we slice it. We try to sell the shank end of the ham in a piece."

In Business 37 Years.

This firm which does an extensive meat business, has been in business in Toronto since 1875, and for the past 28 years has been in business in the present stand. "Proper attention has to be given to details if any profit is to be made," states Mr. Zurhorst. "Since we have been here 30 stores within four or five blocks have come and gone."

EASTERN CREDIT MEN MEET.

Toronto, May 23—(Special) — The Canadian Credit Men's Association held their monthly meeting at McConkeys, Toronto, on May 16. The membership of the Ontario division has now reached 150.

John J. Dauphin, of Buffalo, was the speaker of the evning. A strong point made by him was that over six million dollars was lost in Canada in 1911 by failures and wondered how much of this might have been averted by more careful allowing of credit. Incompetence, as shown by statistics, stands high as a cause of failure. Others are lack of capital, extravagance, neglect, competition, speculation, fraud and failure of others.

Mr. Leith, of Balfour, Smye & Co., Hamilton, spoke of the work being done in that city. A. G. Malcolm presided.

YEAST ROYAL CAKES

ROYAL YEAST CAKES

AVOID TROUBLE.

GROCERS: In ordering Yeast Cakes, always be careful to specify ROYAL YEAST. If you neglect to take this precaution you are liable to be imposed upon and put to needless expense by having your order filled with one of the poor imitations for which there is little or no demand. We know of some houses that might do this. The original good kind with the blue label is the kind the consumers want. Avoid imitations which are known and represented as the "just as good" kinds.

LARD

Demand for pure Lard has been very good and indications are that prices will be higher. In the Summer of 1910 Lard sold at 16½c. per pound in tubs and it looks to us like history repeating itself. "Star Brand" Lard is nothing but pure Lard from good, well fed Canadian pigs and is made under Government inspection.

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 26, 1911

S. F. Bowser & Co., Inc.
Toronto, Ont.

Dear Sirs,—Your self-measuring oil tank is a great time saver, also clean and handy. Would not be without one.

In the first place, about twelve years ago I put in two of your outfits, one fifty and one one hundred and twenty gallon, and five years later saw you had improved them and I said we must have the best of the best so I am still using the improved Bowser Oil Tank.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) G. J. Melhuish

After using a Bowser tank five years Mr. Melhuish decided to buy another Bowser. Can you ask for a stronger test of their good qualities? If the Bowser wasn't everything he expected it to be and all we claim for it, it is hardly possible he would have repeated his order,

Most of your competitors in business are using Bowsers—Ask them.

Send a Card TO-DAY for our free illustrated book No. 5, it shows the outfits in colors.

Nature has solved the problem of distribution. It uses a multitude of agents to effect the distribution of its products.

Nature does not expect every seed to fall upon fallow ground and to take root. But, it achieves a profitable percentage upon its distribution. This is all that an advertiser has to do to reap a profitable harvest on his outlay.

Keep in mind the dominant fact that mankind from its first appearance on the earth has been schooled by nature to look for signs; for invitations to taste; for suggestions as to what to wear. Tell your story briefly, forcibly, truthfully, and address it through the proper media and you can successfully apply advertising as a means to increased distribution.

Not an Enterprise for the "Quitter"

¶ "If there is one enterprise on earth," says John Wanamaker, "that a 'quitter' should leave severely alone, it is advertising. To make a success of advertising one must be prepared to stick like a barnacle on a boat's bottom.

¶ "He must know before he begins it that he must spend money—lots of it.

¶ "Somebody must tell him that he cannot hope to reap results commensurate with his expenditure early in the game.

¶ "Advertising does not jerk; it pulls. It begins very gently at first, but the pull is steady. It increases day by day and year by year, until it exerts an irresistible power."

WHERE KNOWLEDGE IS POWER 'TIS FOLLY TO BE IGNORANT

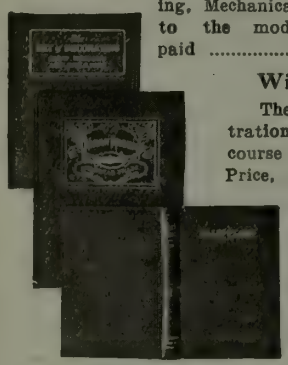
Particularly

if that knowledge can be acquired at a very low cost.

Merchants, Salesmen, Ad-writers and Window Trimmers will find their efficiency greatly increased by a careful perusal of the following books.

The Art of Decorating Show Windows and Interiors

The most complete work of the kind ever published, over 400 pages, 600 illustrations; covers, to the smallest detail, the following subjects: Window Trimming, Interior Decorating, Window Advertising, Mechanical and Electrical Effects, in fact everything of interest to the modern, up-to-date merchant and decorator. Price, post paid $3.50

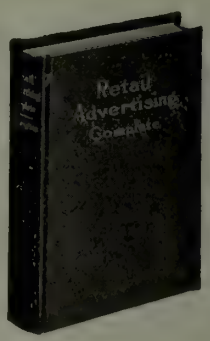


WindowT rimming for the Men's Wear Trade

The fundamentals of Men's Wear Display, with 600 illustrations, showing every move in trims pictured. A complete course in Men's Wear Trimming. Handsomely bound in cloth. Price, prepaid $1.25

Sales Plans

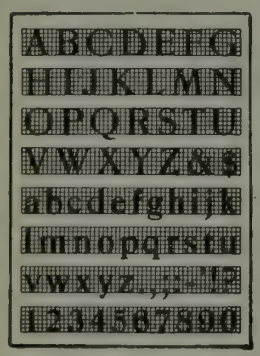
A collection of 333 successful ways of getting business, including a great variety of practical plans that have been used by retail merchants to advertise and sell goods. Sent prepaid to any address. Cloth binding $2.50



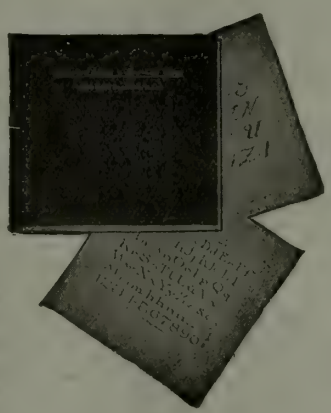
Retail Advertising Complete

This book covers every known method of advertising a retail business; and an application of the ideas it expounds cannot help but result in increased business for the merchant who applies them $1.00

Card Writers' Chart



A complete course in the art of making display and price cards and signs. Beautifully printed in six colors and bronze. Includes specially ruled practice paper. Some of the subjects treated are: First Practice, Punctuation, Composition, Price Cards, Directory Cards, Spacing, Color Combinations, Mixing Colors, Ornamentations, Materials Needed, etc. Price post paid $1.50



50 Lessons on Show Card Writing

The lesson plates are printed on cardboard and fit into the book loose leaf. This system has the advantage of enabling the student in practice to work without a cumbersome book at his elbow.

Besides the fifty lesson plates, this book contains over seventy instructive illustrations pertaining to this interesting subject and over three hundred reproductions of show cards executed by the leading show card artists of America. Bound in green cloth. Sent postpaid for $2.50

1000 Ways and Schemes to Attract Trade

A book that swells sales and increases profits. There has never before been published a book like this. It gives brief descriptions of over 1,000 ideas and schemes that have been tried by the most successful retail merchants to bring people to their stores and to sell goods. If you try a scheme every day, there will be in it enough separate and numbered suggestions to last you nearly three years without repeating a single one. A few of the ideas in one chapter: An Anniversary Scheme with Excellent Points—A Sign That Made Money for its Maker—Advertising Dodge and a Clever Salesman—A Contest that Boomed Trade—Giving Unique Publicity to a New Department—A Baby Day that Drew a Crowd—Money Makers in Many Different Lines—Plan for Introducing a New Brand of Goods that Proved a Winner—Artistic Ways of Displaying Goods—Days Devoted to a Particular Class of Customers—Many Window Trims Out of the Ordinary—In this chapter are seventy-four separate and distinct ideas that have been successfully carried out by as many different merchants. There are 13 more chapters and 934 more schemes just as good as these, 208 Pages 9½x7, and 180 Illustrations. Printed on the best white paper and bound in a handsomely ornamented cover. Price postpaid, $1.00.

Quality Figures Biggest

in the selection of soda biscuits by most buyers. The number of biscuits in a box is but of minor importance—it's quality that counts—and that's just where you corral the biggest trade for your store by stocking

RAMSAY'S FARM CREAM SODAS

RAMSAY'S FARM CREAM SODAS will do more to bring back lost trade than any other stock you have. It's the delicious quality again that makes them such good missionaries.

RAMSAY'S FARM CREAM SODAS are growing in popularity daily. Our efforts at perfect cleanliness and our policy of using nothing but the best ingredients are being justly rewarded.

For family use Ramsay's have so far attained the highest marks, simply because they combine quality and economy in buying. Why not give your trade a chance. You will be agreeably surprised.

The FIVE ROSES flour package has kept many a merchant from shipwreck. When others have gone under, it has kept buoyant.

It has ignored the reefs of Unreliability, braved the winds of Dissatisfaction, avoided the deadly iceberg of Competition. Why shouldn't YOU enjoy steadily increasing sales—permanent growing profits?

Just think how successful our customers must be when the output has grown from 800 barrels in 1888 to 10,500 barrels a day.

Ask YOUR jobber for FIVE ROSES, or write nearest office.

OCEAN BLUE

Cheap enough for the Million,
Good enough for the Millionaire.

FIRST of all, it's quite British—Comes from Hull, away over the "Ocean blue." Then it's the most economical. It readily adapts itself to any water—hard or soft—so long as the water is clean. Never spots, or flecks, and may be used with safety when washing the most delicate materials. To linens, laces, curtains, etc., it imparts a beautiful snowy whiteness, that suggests everything of spotless purity.

ALL STORES SHOULD SELL "OCEAN BLUE"

BECAUSE it is an article that satisfies, and satisfied customers are your best customers. It is made in bags packed in cartons and squares in packets. The retail price is 5 cents, on which you see a good profit.

ASK YOUR JOBBER ABOUT

If "Time is Money" Then Why Not Save It?

Lost—one golden moment, on the Road of Endeavor! Lost, because your brain cells worked overtime when you tried to persuade that customer to experiment with those nameless goods you bought, thinking more of the extra profit therein than the dependable quality thereof.

Lost, too, because her time and yours was idly spent. Lost again because of the misplaced confidence that must prevail hereafter 'twixt you and her. "Time is money," gentlemen—why not save it by selling, pushing or recommending only "quality goods"?

"Griffin" Brand Seedless Raisins

The choice of "finicky" folks and therefore of critical judges of quality, has never fallen upon other brands of Seedless Raisins in such generous measure as on the famous "Griffin" trade-marked product.

Grown, cured and packed in the largest vineyards on the Pacific Coast, and never tampered with en route.

Coco Fruitine

Vegetable
Butter

From the view-point of economy alone, a woman will be interested to investigate the merits of Coco Fruitine in her cooking and pastry.

Its matchless purity, rich yet delicate flavor and evident superiority to butter, oil or lard, commend it at once to the housewife who is anxious to save.

Made in Marseilles with scrupulous care!

Try This Plan When Preserving Starts

Just as soon as the strawberries come in dress up a strong "preserving" window display.

As the centre use one or two 100-lb. bags, several 20-lb. bags, and plenty of the new 5-lb. Cartons of

Redpath

Extra Granulated SUGAR

In the front of the window put a good showing of the choice berries. Then fill in with fruit jars, rubber rings, blocks of paraffin, add a few pairs of rubber gloves, even if you have to buy them specially, and complete the window with plenty of price tickets and a set of the new REDPATH Pennants on the glass.

You cannot too strongly recommend REDPATH Sugar for preserving, for its superior purity is essential in making the finest jellies, jams and preserves.

There will be no trouble in future to fill orders for Magic Baking Powder, etc. Besides making the various articles comprising our well-known line of goods we will make everything required in connection with our business ; such as paper boxes, tin cans and other containers.

We have three railroad sidings, and therefore unlimited shipping facilities. All goods will be loaded direct into cars.

Push the sale of the goods that are known and wanted.

Now is the time to benefit by our big $150.000 advertising campaign covering 1912.

Quality Food Products at Lowest Prices Consistent with Quality

Not how cheap, but how good has always been the policy of this Company. The too frequent tendency to sacrifice quality, and to insidiously offer an article for what it is not, in the effort to overcome the increased cost of production, may to the unreflecting seem shrewd merchandising, but meets with no favor with a house whose constant aim it is to improve standards, to elevate qualities and to encourage superiority.

To live up to this creed, to be able to back the quality of Gillett's Goods with every dollar the concern possesses, it has for years labored untiringly, unceasingly and successfully to create standards and establish brands that stand for unexcelled uniformity, each the best of its class.

All dealers are authorized to guarantee Gillett's Goods as being the best and purest that it is possible to produce, and to be just as represented. Gillett's Goods are the most extensively advertised goods of their kind in Canada. Every dealer should take advantage of this fact, and share in the benefits of our 1912 Advertising Campaign.

THEY ARE BEST BY EVERY TEST.

STANDARD BLENDS

We appeal to the wide awake Grocer of to-day to look into his Tea Trade: for he is the best judge, as to whether he is experimenting or not.

Are you satisfied with selling certain Packet Teas, which only show you a profit of 5c per lb., when you can make 8c per lb., and give your customers better value for their money.

We have an Expert who knows the real value of Indian Teas, as well as those of Ceylon. Who knows how to combine the choice growths of each to perfection.

Take for instance our 4 Star at 27c. per lb, it is a thick, rich, juicy blend with superb flavor and excellent second cup.

It is meat and drink compared with the wishy-washy teas that are being forced upon the public in many packets.

Do you suppose for one moment that we could make this offer if we were not positive as to the superior merit of the standard blends offered herein.

We will take back goods at our expense if not perfectly satisfactory.

THE TEST OF SERVICE

Few electric coffee mills develop trouble in the first year of their service. To the new owner, enthusiastic over the beauty and convenience of his new mill, what is out of sight is more than likely to be out of mind.

But to the level head buyer the value of foresight in what is out of sight needs no explaining. He knows that on these parts depend the life and service of his mill. Many a COLES mill is to-day, after three or four years service, giving just as good satisfaction as when it came fresh from the factory. Is this kind of service worth anything to you?

Laurentia Milk Tastes Like Cream

The little membrane which, in ordinary milk, envelopes the globules of cream, are broken by the mechanical process of homogenization, the flavor of the cream is absorbed by the entire liquid and one has the sensation of drinking thin cream.

The delicious creamy flavor, of Laurentia Milk, its edible qualities and its immunity from germs, renders it the best food for all.

DOUBLE YOUR SALES OF MARMALADE

Most of the marmalade that is sold is bought by those who come into the store and ask for it. A little creative salesmanship would easily double the sales of marmalade.

For instance you could double your sales of by instructing your salesman to tactfully suggest to customers that Shirriff's Scotch Marmalade is very appetizing, delicious and healthful. That it is made of selected Seville oranges and best granulated sugar. And has the keen, stimulating tang of the bitter Seville orange blended most deliciously with the sweet of the granulated sugar.

They could suggest that Shirriff's marmalade spread on toast or crisp soda crackers tastes very good at breakfast. And some people enjoy it spread on hot biscuits. Others with pancakes.

They could suggest, too, that marmalade steam puddings, marmalade pies and marmalade tarts are delightful.

Just try the above suggestions and see how quickly you will double your sales of Shirriff's Marmalade. It's to your profit to do so.

Co-operative Store Statement Analyzed

Business of Nearly $275,000 a Year Apparently Being Handled with Liquid Capital of Only $15,500—Further Information Required for Intelligent Review.

*By Henry Johnson, Jr.

Co-operative societies are a great success in Britain and in Europe generally. There are, of course, good reasons for this. Otherwise the movement would have petered out long ago. The prime reason on which the movement is founded is economy in the purchase of the necessaries of life. A secondary reason lies in the desire to make money for the members, or investors. The British and Continental societies have accomplished both purposes; hence are permanent and successful.

This movement has not generally been successful in Canada, so far as I know, nor in the United States. Many reasons are given. I incline to the idea that hitherto the need for co-operative buying and selling has not been perceptible; we, on the American continent, have not yet felt the pressure of penury such as exists in those older countries. It has been cheaper to hire the work done than to do it ourselves.

Better Luck at Glace Bay.

It seems, however, to be firmly established in Glace Bay, Nova Scotia, if I may judge from the healthy looking report to which I referred last week, and which is now before me, only partially intelligible to me. This business seems to be founded on solid principles. It also looks as if it were well conducted.

Here is the concise Report for the 22nd Quarter, ending January 17, 1912:

TO THE MEMBERS:

The Report and Balance Sheet for the 22nd Quarter is herewith submitted for your approval.

The total business for the quarter .. amounted to $63,119.22, as compared with $48,126.49 for past quarter and $45,689.72 for the corresponding quarter of a year ago.

After providing for all charges and depreciations there remains available for dividends the sum of $7,730.80, which will allow the Society to pay a dividend of 8% on $96,610.34 members paid purchases, leaving a small balance to the credit of Profit and Loss.

(One branch has not paid. The loss was a trifle of $260. Reasons are given for the hope of better things in future.)

Our New Bond Issue is now ready, and the Committee would urge every member to subscribe for a few of these. Only some $6,500 are available and distributed among our present membership they would not average $10 per member. The Committee again urges upon members the necessity of having more capital invested in their business. Our total Capital and Deposits are $33,003.62. We have invested in Real Estate over $11,000, in Fixed Stock and Equipment about $5,000, standing on our Books in Members' Balances over $12,000, a total of over $28,000. This leaves about $5,000 of our Capital and Deposits available for financing our Merchandise Account, or with our Reserve Fund of $8,000, and $2,500 from our Bond Issue, $15,500. This amount is too small to handle successfully the amount of business we are required to do, and which is now averaging about $20,000 per month. Every member is urged to help their Society out in this matter by increasing their Deposits with the Society.

(Then follows some administration news, recommendations, etc.)

Some Information Wanting.

I am, as I say, not familiar with the method of accounting. I shall have to ask a lot of questions. For instance, I cannot get any set of figures from the various reports to correspond with that item of $96,610.34 of "members paid purchases." I can, however, see that $7,730.80 will pay 8% on that sum and leave a little over. If this 8% is a six months' dividend, as I suppose it is, the members are getting dividends on their annual purchases of 16%.

This is an astonishing accomplishment when you think of a business of $20,000 per month, which is growing so fast that it will reach more than $275,000 for the year, being handled on $15,500 liquid capital. The Society now has 510 full paid members, so that an investment in the new bonds of only $13 average per paid-up member would absorb the entire $6,500 still available. A little over $25 per member, if only half of them participated, would absorb the remainder of the issue.

Is Bond Issue Necessary?

With the showing this management has made it seems astonishing that any appeal has to be issued at all for this support. Seems as if the bond issue should have been over subscribed five or six times. It must be obvious to the members that if such a showing can be made with $15,500, more than double the record could reasonably be expected if the working capital were $30,000. Right here is the element of weakness. A body of members tend to have this character. They seem to be actuated by the idea that "what is everybody's business is nobody's business," hold back, sit tight, let the thing struggle along and someday go broke, maybe, for want of cordial support. When this happens, they blame the management, of course. It looks as if this particular management will pull through anyway. In that event, the credit will naturally go to the people who put in the money! Human nature is surely a funny thing.

The Operating Account.

Now, I must ask for explanation of some parts of the accounting, for it is Greek to me, but will surely prove interesting and instructive to all of us. Operating Account No. 1 is given as follows:—

Fall Wall Paper Samples Now Going Out

General Dealers Who Handle This Line May Expect Travelers Along Any Time Now—Good Profits in Wall Papers, if Given Some Attention—Too Much Business Now Going Over Dealers' Heads to Mail Order Houses — Something About Designs.

Although spring with its accompanying demand for wallpaper has not yet been left far behind, this line is once more about to become of interest to the merchant. During June, wall paper houses will be sending out their salesmen with fall samples and it is time the grocer and general merchant commenced to give some thought to his plans for the fall campaign. It is well to remember that it is the carefully planned campaign with purchasing done well in advance, when there is a good assortment to choose from, that is productive of best results.

Be Ready for the Traveler.

The dealer should give some thought to plans before the traveler calls, so that he will be able to do his purchasing to the best advantage. Having made his selections at an early date he is able turn his thoughts to his selling campaign as he knows exactly what he is getting and that he is sure of getting what he wants.

Something might be said as to why wallpaper is an advantageous line to handle. Given the proper attention, it returns a good profit to the dealer. Besides this, it is found to possess a considerable factor as a "feeder," acting as a magnet that attracts other business to the store.

In some lines handled by the merchant the total demand remains stationary from year to year. However, this is not true in wallpaper for the total sales of this line are showing big increases. An enormous influx of population is taking place, resulting in thousands of more homes being opened throughout the Dominion, and this means a great deal to the wallpaper business. Besides this, the country is prosperous and when times are good it is natural for people to turn their thoughts to the improvement of the home, and wallpaper is one of the lines to benefit.

Although the demand for wallpaper has been and is steadily on the increase it is unfortunate but nevertheless true that the general merchants have not been receiving their full share of this increase. The mail order houses have been taking to themselves no little proportion of this business and it behooves the general merchant to do his best to make a bid for it. As long as people send to the catalogue houses for wall paper, they will continue to order other lines of goods as well.

As in most every other line, in paper there are low and high grade goods. It is to the latter class that the merchant should direct greatest attention. Most dealers are beginning to realize that trading exclusively in cheap papers to the sacrifice of the good trade is not only short-sighted but small profited as well. The paper which one can recommend with confidence and which will give satisfaction to customers, should be pushed. It will cost customers a little more but the good salesman will find no trouble in convincing them it is worth it. People do not want paper that is cheap in appearance. The country is well-to-do and high grade goods are being demanded.

Some dealers handle a few of the lower priced papers as leaders. Their price is no doubt an attraction to those who are in search of bargain goods; but it is not well to treat them as the basic foundation of the wall paper business.

In selection of quality and price, as well as to designs to a certain degree, the class of people dealt with should be taken into consideration. What might be a good line for one dealer to stock might be a poor one for another but regarding price, the quality of other goods purchased may be taken as a gauge by the general merchant. It should always be his endeavor to raise the standard of goods sold because it means greater satisfaction to customers.

Selecting New Designs.

In selection of patterns and designs, many dealers are backward about breaking away from set lines. It must be remembered that most housewives aim to have something distinctive and it should be with this in view that paper should be selected. Of course there are the styles to be followed as well by the man in charge of the purchasing.

Western Reader Takes Up Cost Problem

Sends Article Which Appeared in a Western Canadian Paper Showing Expenses Figured on Invoice Cost—Selling Price Basis Much Safer—Goods Sold at a Loss.

A reader in Western Canada sends The Grocer an article on figuring profits and cost of doing business, which, he maintains, contains some discrepancies. The article appeared in a Western paper, and dealt with the writer's reasons for claiming that the retail grocer was not getting a profit on many staple articles, and therefore was justified in asking a fair-sized profit on others.

Some Show Little Profit.

It is no doubt correct that on some lines such as sugar, bread, and sometimes butter and eggs, etc., the profit is little or nothing after cost of doing business to turn them over is concerned. But one must be careful to figure cost of doing business properly, and herein lies the error of the computations made by the writer of the article in question. He assumed that 18% could cover cost of doing business.

Here is the table he set down to show profits and losses on certain goods:—

	Cost.	Add 18 p.c.	Total	Sells.	Loss.	Gain.
Sugar	$6.60	$1.18	$7.78	$7.00	.78	...
Canned Foods	3.75	.67	4.42	4.70	...	.28
Canned Peas	2.60	.46	3.06	3.60	...	.54
Canned Corn	2.60	.46	3.06	3.60	...	.54
Bacon	.17	.03	.20	.25	...	.05
Corn Flakes	2.90	.52	3.42	3.60	...	.18
Soda Biscuits	.18½	.05	.23½	.25	...	.01½
Coffee	.30	.05	.35	.40	...	.05
Bread	.06¼	.01⅛	.07¼	.07 1-7	3-28	...
Butter	.40	.07	.47	.45	.02	...
Rice	.04¾	.01	.05¾	.06¼	...	.0½

It will at once be observed that the percentage of cost of doing business was figured on invoice cost, which, it is maintained by the best business men, is wrong. In the calculations above, even on this basis, some errors have apparently crept in Eighteen per cent. of 18½c—the invoice cost mentioned on soda biscuits—is 3 1-3 cents rather than 5 cents, and on 6¼c (bread) it would be 1⅛ instead of 1 cent.

A Transformation.

It has been the custom of many in the past, and not far back either, to calculate percentage of cost of doing business on the invoice cost. But since the pros and cons have been sifted, it has been clearly proven that this method is not safe. Reasons have been given in various articles recently in this paper, so that clearly the method of figuring in the above table is not conducive to safety in business.

Take the case of sugar. Invoice cost is $6.60. It sells for $7, and cost of doing business is 18 per cent. Figuring this percentage on the selling price we have a cost of $1.26 for turning it over, or a total actual cost of $7.86. This makes a loss of 86 cents instead of 78. In the canned corn item the cost is $2.60, and selling price $3.60. Eighteen per cent. of the selling price is 64 cents, making the total cost $3.24 instead of $3.06, and a gain of only 36 cents instead of 54.

Worse Off Than At First.

If we continued further on down the line it would be observed that the gain column diminishes, while the loss column increases, and the dealer is therefore still worse off than the table would indicate.

Calculating profit percentages and cost of doing business on turnover is the only safe method, and it should be closely adhered to. One may know where he is at by doing it the other way, but never sure.

First Prize Moose Jaw Carnival Window

Dressed by Member of Staff of Kent & Brown For Spring Carnival Held There in April—Moose Head Makes Appropriate Setting—Attracted Large Crowds.

Moose Jaw, Sask., May 28.—In April a Spring Carnival was held in Moose Jaw, which developed considerable new business for those retailers who made it a point to go after it.

Was Attractively Arranged.

That it is deserving of more than passing recognition is easily observed from the accompanying cut. The big moose head projecting out among the articles on display is, to begin with, most appropriate for any such occasion where home spirit is emphasized. The canned goods, packages of tea, tins of coffee, spices, etc., were arranged artistically, and certainly attracted a lot of attention. The red labels on the gallon apples, which were prominently in evidence, gave a color effect that was quite effective in drawing onlookers.

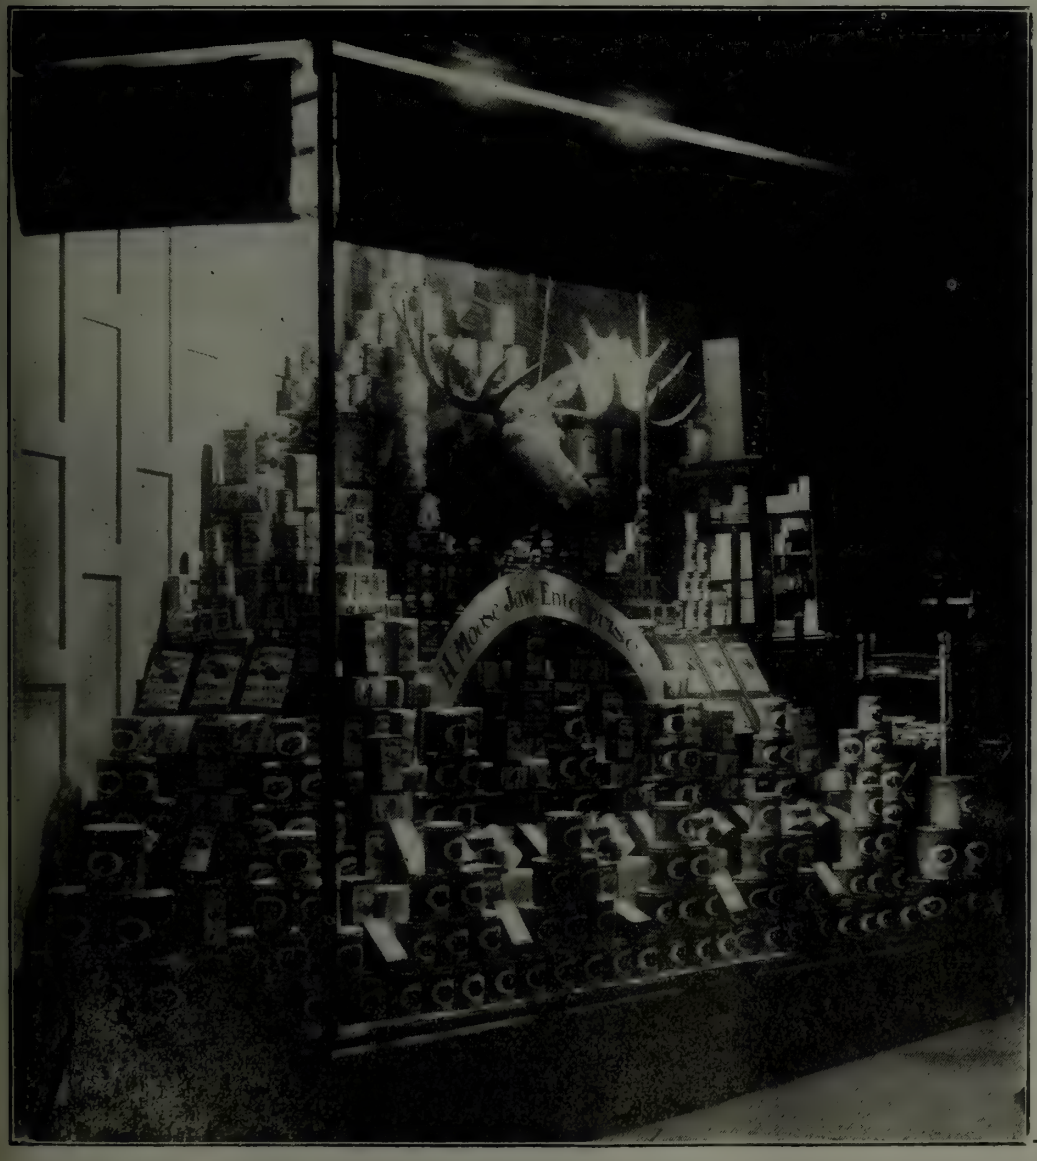
Photographed at Night.

The window, which is a corner one, is susceptible to a good display, and the best was made of it by Mr. Crone. The photograph was secured at night by pulling the blinds down a short distance and turning on the lights, as this seems to be about the best method for preventing reflections.

The prize accompanying the best dressed window amounted to $20, which was worth while going after.

A Good Advertisement.

On such occasions as this it pays to produce something better than the average. At a carnival of this character, the streets of a town attract a lot of people who are out to see everything. They make mental notes of what strikes them most, and a good window undoubtedly carries with it considerable advertising value.



Kent & Brown's window, Moose Jaw, Sask., which captured first prize in Spring Carnival Competition.

Prizes were offered by the committee in charge for various competitions, among them window dressing. The prize for the best dressed window went to Harold Crone, of Kent & Brown's grocery staff.

CANADA'S RAPID PROGRESS.

Figures issued from Ottawa on Canada's trade for the past fiscal year demonstrate conclusively the sound commercial state of the country.

The total trade for the year amounted to $862,699,732, an increase of no less than $103,605,343, as compared with the preceding fiscal year. Imports totaled $547,382,582, an increase of nearly $86,000,000; exports totaled $315,317,250, an increase of nearly $18,000,000. The year's increase in trade, over fourteen per cent., is one of the largest, if not the largest, in the history of Canada. According to present indications the Dominion's trade for the current fiscal year will run very close to the billion-dollar mark.

Of the total imports for the past year $335,204,452 were dutiable goods, while $186,144,249 were free goods. The Customs revenue totaled $87,548,452, an increase of $14,250,908.

Exports of domestic products for the year totaled $290,223,857, the principal items being: Agricultural products, $107,143,375; animals and their produce, $48,210,654; mines, $41,324,516; forests, $40,892,674; manufactures, $35,836,284; fisheries, $16,704,768.

The increase in agricultural exports was approximately $24,500,000. In manufactures the increase was not quite half a million. Fisheries exports increased by a little over a million. On the other hand, there were decreases of a little over four millions in the exports of animals and their produce; nearly five millions in the exports of the forest, and a million and a half in mineral exports.

During the year Canada imported coin and buillion to the value of $26,033,881, as compared with only $10,206,210 for the preceding year.

No better indication of the prosperity of the country can be brought forward than what is represented in the above figures. With the rapid peopling of Western Canada and the development of our vast natural resources no other result could be expected.

DISPLAYING DECAYED FRUIT.

Carelessness in neglecting to get rid of decaying stock around the store has often been the means of turning away customers. How frequently does one see fruit and vegetables going bad in the window, doorway or on the counter, and no attention apparently being given them!

Recently a housewife was heard expressing her opinion on this very thing. She called at a certain store for fresh fruit and vegetables, but came away empty handed. Inside the door was a box of tomatoes, with two or three over-ripe and decaying fruit exposed to view on the top. Decomposed oranges on an open box nearby also greeted her eyes, while withered and partly decayed strawberries were being shown on the counter.

It is sometimes impossible to sell all perishable goods while they are fresh, but it is not an impossibility to remove decayed fruit and vegetables from the store. This should be attended to as occasion arises, for if not, there is every likelihood of a customer or two being lost.

There are many dealers who take every precaution to keep vegetables and fruit in fresh condition. Display fountains and tile windows are among the methods, and these, besides maintaining freshness for a long time, produce increases in business.

THE VALUE OF AN EMPLOYE.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—Being a subscriber of your valuable trade paper, from which I have derived a great many benefits, I take the liberty of asking you a simple question, to you no doubt.

What salary should a man be worth who is manager of a grocery, the trade of which has increased from $10,000 cash to $20,000 cash in six years under his management?

SUBSCRIBER.

Here is a difficult question to answer. In fact, a definite answer is impossible because it would depend on many different circumstances not mentioned in the letter, and which would be difficult to get at.

There is no doubt that the manager who doubled the business in six years is a valuable man for that location. But there is no means of getting at the amount of business secured through increase of population in the district, bringing with it a demand which almost any dealer could supply.

Again there is the question of what percentage of the $20,000 turnover is net profit. While in this case it is quite unlikely, yet a dealer who does not obtain profits equal to his competitors might easily secure a larger volume of trade, quality of goods, service and other things being equal. The real test of a merchant's ability is the size of the net profit after all expenses have been paid. For instance, the manager of a store who could secure a net profit for his employer of 6 per cent. on a $20,000 turnover after all expenses, including his (the manager's) salary, had been deducted, would be worth more than the man who could get only 4 per cent. The difference to the owner would be $400.

If, too, the manager made 6 per cent. on a $10,000 turnover, he would be worth nothing extra to the employer providing he only made 3 per cent. on the $20,000.

In the case in question, it is safe to assume that the earning power of the manager has increased, but to what extent, no one not fully acquainted with the ins and outs of the business, could even guess.

SELL COOKED AND SMOKED MEATS.

The season is here when cooked and smoked meats sell readily, and every opportunity should be seized to turn these stocks over. With the warmer weather, the housewife is anxious to do with as little fire and work as possible, and is susceptible to arguments that will tend to make her labor lighter.

Cooked meats should, therefore, be constantly kept before customers during the summer months. A special counter with a clean marble top on which meats can be given a prominent display, has helped to build up many a dealer's cooked and smoked meat business.

The gentle art of persuasiveness should also be brought into commission at all times when there are any prospects of making sales. Frequently the mere suggestion that many a woman is saving time and fuel by purchasing these goods, will bring the customer to the point of buying herself.

GOOD FRUIT CROP PROSPECTS.

The first fruit crop report issued from the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, indicates a splendid fruit year. The yields will, of course, depend on the weather to come.

Prospects for a good apple crop are so far excellent. There has been little bud or twig killing reported, and a favorable showing of bloom is anticipated. In the counties of Hants, Kings, Annapolis and Digby in Nova Scotia, which bore so well last year, again give promise of a good yield. In Ontario similar conditions prevail.

Pears share in the good conditions shown in the apple crop. In the commercial orchards of the Niagara district, all conditions are favorable. The acreage though is decreasing year by year, so that the aggregate of the crop may not be as great as the present conditions of the individual trees would indicate.

The extremely low temperature of January and February seriously injured the peach bloom, and in certain orchards the trees have even been injured. This is particularly true in parts of Essex and Kent and on the higher ground in the Niagara district. It would seem that the blossoms are more seriously injured in the west part of the province than in the eastern. Niagara district fruit growers report that, though a large percentage of blossoms have been injured, there are still more than sufficient left for a medium crop, if no further casualties occur. In British Columbia the number of trees is too small to materially affect the crop, but the winter and spring conditions so far have been favorable, and the yield promises well.

The "stand" for small fruits in 1911 was poor, many plantations being so nearly a total failure that they were ploughed up and the ground devoted to other crops. Neither strawberries nor raspberries made a large or vigorous growth during the summer and fall, but such growth as there was, appeared to be well matured and healthy. Speaking generally, strawberries are now in good condition, except that they are not as robust in growth as usual. Owing to the good snow cover, the extreme cold of the winter did not materially affect them. The raspberry canes have been injured slightly, but not to the extent that was anticipated. The acreage in Eastern Canada is much less than usual. Blackberries have in some cases been injured, but not enough to seriously affect the crop. Currants and gooseberries have wintered well.

Plums, grapes and cherries have wintered well, and high hopes are held out for good crops. The all important feature is, however, the weather, and if it behaves properly, the fruit crops will not be disappointing.

WHEAT ROUTE TO THE OCEAN.

In spite of the fact that grain is supposed to follow the channel offering the lowest freight rates from the interior to the ocean, yet some 43 per cent. of the wheat brought down from the Canadian West last year took the higher of two routes.

The Department of Railways and Canals has just issued a report on Canadian canals, and the above fact is one of the features. There were 63,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat transported through the Canadian canal at Sault Ste. Marie during the year. About 57 per cent. of this went via Montreal, which port is favored both as to freight rates and distance over the port of Buffalo, which received the other 43 per cent.

Other things being equal the natural supposition would be that the route allowing the cheaper freight rate would get practically the entire trade. But in this case, cheaper insurance combined with other considerations diverted almost half of the wheat through a United States port.

But why didn't it all go by way of Buffalo, if "cheaper insurance and other considerations" favored that port? The report does not answer this pertinent question.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

June 3 is the King's Birthday. What about a window for the occasion?

Pineapple preserving preparations in the home are productive of good profits to the dealer who uses his persuasive powers properly. Don't worry; the writer is still alive.

Lesson 16--Course in Card Writing

Deals With the Slant Lettering as Executed With the Square-Pointed Pen—A Speedily Made Letter, Used for Price Tickets and Show Cards and Readers.

By J. C. Edwards, Copyright, Canada, 1911.

AS with other slanting or italic letters, the slanting pen lettering is much more speedily made than the straight. This brings it in for a big share of use among cardwriters of today. For small, neat cards or price tickets this style of lettering is unequalled and is very effective and not altogether inornate when the eccentric lines are worked in nicely.

Eccentricities Not Necessary, But—

In glancing down the plate you will notice that a few of the letters are exaggerated to very good effect. Letters such as A, B, D, E, L, etc., may be made plain or as shown in the plate which, when nicely executed, add greatly to the relief of a card. Letters such as A, V and Y may also be given an eccentric or irregular touch without detracting from the legibility of the inscription. The right hand stroke of any one may be given a graceful, sweeping curve over the top of the rest of the word.

Similar to Brush Script.

The style of the short pen work is not unlike brush script in general lines, but varies some in details and the letters must never be connected as the script is, but a nice, uniform letter kept at all times, with the letters always on the same slant. Some practice will be required to get the letters to slant the same. Letters such as A, W, X, Y and V, that already having slanting strokes are the most difficult to get right; however, if you follow the plate and practice them there should be no difficulty.

The Panel a Pen Card.

A favorite card with stores of the better class is the long panel, and being long and narrow it is adapted to pen-lettering more than brush work. Pen lettering is neater than that made by a brush of a similar width.

The pane,, when well lettered and an illuminated capital or a fancy corner piece used, makes an effective sign and is much more refined in appearance than the larger card with heavy black face lettering. This card is particularly adapted for use in men's wear displays. The panel as shown here shows the adaptation of the first word heading, i. e., the first word forms the heading and reads right on without breaking. The paragraphed idea is also used in this card as it is recommended for use in all kinds of advertising. Each paragraph should contain a well defined thought, so that if only one is read it will convey a meaning and not depend on the others. People will read a series of short, crisp paragraphs and get the whole story in a nutshell, whereas, if the same matter were written in solid, the tendency is for them to overlook it. For instance, the statement, "the simpler the form of decoration the better." You at once get the meaning and it is simply this, the use of elaborately decorated cards is not convincing, for the mind is taken from the wording and centred on the decorative parts, which should be avoided.

Forget speed sometimes and practice perfection. The great tendency to-day is to try to get the speed before the real formation of the letters is mastered. This leads to the indifferent appearance of cards so often seen in our stores—it promotes carelessness.

The Landscape Card.

An effective style of window card is the landscape panel. This is cut in a length about 18 inches and not more than 8 or 9 inches wide. It must be lettered small and in the centre, leaving a good white margin around. This card shows a sample of refined price-quoting. The heading and price stands out strong while the descriptive reader points out the style features. The landscape card must be placed on the floor of the window resting against a hidden

Window Dressing for the June Bride

Striking Design Should at First be Thought Out — A Number Suggested — Housecleaning and Washing Lines, Such as Washboards, Clothespins, Cleansing Powders, etc., Could be Shown—Canned Goods and Dessert Window Also Applicable.

The display window can be made good use of during June. This is the month of many marriages and countless new homes will be established throughout the length and breadth of the land. The newly married people cannot live for long on the proverbial love supposed to take the place of food. At an early date they must call upon the grocer to provide the necessities of life, and it is the grocer who makes a bid for their patronage who is going to get the permanent trade.

Many Wants of June Brides.

It means much to secure the trade of the June brides. Just setting up in housekeeping they require an extensive list of groceries covering all lines. Besides if cultivated they become regular customers. Certainly it is worth while courting the favor of the June bride. This trade is worth going after and going after strongly.

One of the best methods to use in making a bid for this business is by attractive and appropriate window displays. A dealer may not be able to make a person canvass for this new business, nor yet be able to get them within the store, but he may attract the attention of a goodly number by a proper window display. Although arranged primarily with the idea of getting the trade of the June bride, such a window will be of interest to everyone, thus possessing a general advertising value. Not only will it get business from those just entering the realm of housekeeping, but those who took the same step in years gone by.

Good General Design Required.

One of the important features to such a window is the setting. It must be appropriate, but still anything over-sentimental or possessing a touch of the ridiculous, hat the new bride might be liable to resent, should be guarded against. One suggestion, which is perhaps one of the best, is the use of a bridal arch of evergreens trimmed with roses at the rear of the window. From the centre of this might be hung a wedding bell. Such a setting could be easily arranged. If available, it would be a good idea to place life-sized dummy figures of a bride and groom under the arch, with the usual wedding regalia.

However, this is not essential. The goods to be shown could then be arranged in the foreground to the best advantage. There should be a show card: "Suggestions for the June bride," or some similar inscription.

A Table Set for Two.

Another suggestion put forward by an experienced window trimmer is the use of a miniature table at one side of the window set for two. Then at the other a display of the goods suggested could be made. Another idea for a background is two large hearts cut out of cardboard and covered with red tissue paper. Some objection is offered to this idea on the score that it is too sentimental, and the bride and groom would not take kindly to it.

Housecleaning Suggestion.

Having decided on the setting, the trimmer must next determine on the goods to be shown. Starting in housekeeping a full set of housecleaning articles will be required. One display might contain such lines as soap, cleansers, ammonia powder, laundry tablets and soap powders, with which might be associated clothespins, clotheslines, brooms, scrub brushes and washboards.

Another assortment of goods might contain the several lines of canned goods in demand at this time, desserts, such as jams, marmalade, jelly powders and custards, while fancy biscuits could be worked in. These lines should appeal because they are easily prepared, although it would not be well to hint at this, as the bride might take it as a reflection on her capabilities as a cook.

Cooked Meats Handy.

Another line of goods that could be shown is hams, cooked meats, butter and eggs. They are all essentials. The same background could be used and a series of displays of different lines made. Jumbling should be avoided. Only associated lines should be shown in the one display.

However, one of the main points is that the grocer realize the possibilities at hand in this regard and to decide on a window or series of windows of "Hints to the June Bride."

Co-operative Store Statement Analyzed.

(Concluded from page 31.)

22nd Quarter	65.00
To Depreciation, Fixed Stock	45.02
To Bal. Net Profit to P. & L....	1,652.76
	$ 3,000.07 $ 3,000.07

There is some slight error in the figures here given, probably a mistake in proof-reading; because the debit column above foots up $19,846.90—10c more than the footing indicates.

Dividend is Large.

Sales are given as a total of $10,901.48, and all expenses foot up to $1,347.31. This shows practically 12⅜%. Wages foot up to $756.96, just a trifle under 7%. These would be very moderate figures in my business or the general run of private business, but they would not admit of any such earnings as would pay 16% per annum on sales, nor 8%. Nor are these figures in keeping with the low rental of approximately 1 1-6% on sales.

Operating Account No. 2 shows up Expenses of 11 1-6% and Wages of a little less than 6⅜%, with a rental of 1%.

On the other hand, Operating Account No. 3, with very much larger business than either of the other two, show Expenses of approximately 14.44% while the Wages and Rent are only about the same as the other two.

Wants Statements Analyzed.

What we must find out about is that item of "Transfers, etc.," and "Transfers & Credits," which run into all the accounts. I hope that these people will analyze their accounts for me along the lines indicated, stating what the average percentage of expense—general—is, and also what their average wages expense is. This is one crucial question, because one ostensible advantage of co-operative trading is the reduction in the handling cost; and we want to know whether this reduction is actually accomplished.

Is the 8% dividend paid on what members buy only? How long a period is covered? From what amounts are those figures accumulated to make the aggregate of $96,610.34?

I know we shall all be interested in pursuing this subject further, so I hope to hear from my friends again in the near future.

AN AD. SUGGESTION.

Our grocery store is a busy place because we sell only foods that are guaranteed pure, fresh, and of very highest quality.

Current News of the Week

Quebec and Maritime Provinces.

Jos. Normand, a broom manufacturer of Quebec City, is dead.

Alf. Cloutier is opening a grocery store in Montreal.

Gagnon & Gagnon, grocers, have opened a grocery store at Viauville (Montreal).

The window dressing competition of the St. Croix Soap Co., St. Stephen, N. B., was closed last week and all photographs have been passed over to the judges. The awards will be made shortly.

Contrary to the expectation of a large number, the commission council in St. John, New Brunswick, have repealed the Early Closing By-law, and unless the united action of the merchants and clerks interested, with the public, can affect the ruling, there will be no compulsory closing of business houses this summer in that city. It has been thought by those concerned in the early closing movement that the council would coincide with their views, but there was some opposition to the scheme, and therefore there will be grounds for the promoters of the idea to do as they are planning now, namely to circulate a petition and have it widely signed and presented to the council to revoke their decision and reconsider the early closing question. Some of the more active workers in the matter, who are keenly disappointed at the action of the commission, are threatening to petition for the recall to be used.

Western Canada.

Ross & Brawnstein, general merchants, Lipton, Sask., have succeeded Ross & Cumonow.

Larson & Qualle, general merchants, Weldon, Sask., have taken over the business of Larson Bros.

H. G. Turpin and Walter Rounds, Nanton, Alta., have taken over the business of Dawson Bros., of that town. The firm name will be the Nanton Trading Co.

Mullen & Johnson have opened a grocery and dry goods store at Pennant, Sask., near Swift Current.

The Customs Department, Ottawa, is investigating alleged fraudulent undervaluations by custom officials in Western Canada of shipments of fruit from the United States for consumption in the prairie provinces.

Ontario.

M. Hinchy, a Cornwall, Ont., grocer, is succeeded by P. St. Thomas.

The Victoria grocery at 1218 Victoria Ave., Fort William, Ont., has been taken over by Wm. Johnson.

Andrew Munroe, Paisley, Ont., has sold his grocery and bakery business to Fred S. McLachlan.

Bursting of a tank at Gunns Ltd., West Toronto, caused the loss of 30,000 lbs. of refined oil. Loss is estimated at about $2,500.

The Finnish Co-operative Merchants, Limited, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., have received a provincial charter. The company is capitailzed at $40,000.

Owing to the death of Wm. Thomas, one of the partners of Thomas Bros., of Campbellford, Ont., the business after June 1 will be carried on by G. W. Thomas.

Out of 151 samples of ground ginger examined recently by the Inland Revenue Department, 84 per cent. were found to be genuine, 9 per cent. adulterated, and 7 per cent. doubtful. This is an improved showing to that of 1909, when only 65 per cent. of those examined were genuine, 21 per cent. being adulterated, and 14 per cent. doubtful.

The Prize List of the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, August 24th to September 9th, has been issued. It shows the usual liberal prizes in all departments of live stock, agriculture and home work, amounting to a total of $55,000. A few of the innovations are provision for competition in breeding horses for strings of five horses; a number of sections added to provide for the newer breeds of poultry; $100 in prizes for onions, tomatoes and celery in baskets. The last named is a Government suggestion meant to encourage export of these commodities.

A UNIQUE SPORTSMAN'S WINDOW.

Vanwart Bros., St. John, N.B., recently had a show window dressed so cleverly as to attract practically every passerby.

The window was meant to attract the early sportsman, the fisherman, and all the essentials in the line of groceries were displayed so as to be the centre of interest. Three little ornamental men, a mechanic, a farmer, and a fisherman, were shown in the window. These were brought by J. W. Vanwart, the proprietor from Holland, last year, and he is using them to distinct advantage. The farmer with his spade and the mechanic with his pick are seen preparing to procure bait, while the fisherman is about to take a trout from a pool in which several others are swimming about.

A well arranged assortment of canned goods and package articles advertise the fact that Vanwart Bros. are in a position to supply the fisherman not only with every necessity, but with little dainties and luxuries which tend to make a spring fishing trip enjoyable.

LESSON XVI.—SHOW CARD WRITING.

support, or held on a low easel stand to give the best effect.

Little or no decoration is necessary in a neat, well written show card. One thing that should be avoided is the combination of slanting heading, slanting reader and slanting price.

If the heading is lettered with a straight style, as the accompanying landscape card, the price, if any, should be the same, but the reader can stand to be written in the slant style.

Good Pen Practice.

A practice which is beneficial to the beginner is the series of scrolls as shown in the lower right hand corner of the plate (No. 16). Hold the pen firmly, but not cramped, and try a right to left motion, giving quick, sure strokes. Then try the reverse and you will find that it will instill confidence in yourself. Note the position of the pen in the hand as illustrated in the corner of the plate. Use Letterine slightly reduced with water if too thick to work freely.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.—Syrups continue strong and trade in every particular is satisfactory.

Molasses is also in good demand, being one of the few cheap foodstuffs remaining on the market. The weaker feeling which developed in the sugar market has had no effect whatsoever on the molasses situation, which, in fact, has gained strength. Barbados is reported to have disposed of the whole crop.

DRIED FRUITS. — Trade is reported as fairly good, and a few declines are noticeable. Raisins have dropped one half cent, owing to surplus stocks held, the high prices asked by holders resulting in a smaller quantity being used.

The new currant crop is said to be now progressing favorably, but should rains prevail followed by warm weather, the crop may be damaged. Opinions as to estimate of new crop differ and it is too early to form any idea.

The new crop of Oregon prunes is reported as damaged fully 50 per cent., and holders of this grade have stiffened prices considerably, so that an advance is expected. Californias are also held firmly at quotations named, and as the weak holders are gradually disappearing on prunes, a higher range of prices is looked for.

Toronto, May 30.—Looking back over the month of May, jobbers appear well pleased with volume of business, and believe that when totals are compared with the same month of past years that showing will be very satisfactory. Farmers are generally busy on the land during this month, which may detract from trade, but a great deal of rain gave breathing spells that allowed occasional trips to town. Orders coming in this week have been mostly for small lots, as during last week of month retailers generally buy sparingly to keep the month's accounts as low as possible.

Refined sugar is now $5.35, as compared with $4.70 one year ago. There is an average amount of business under present conditions, and it is generally believed that stocks of sugar are on decidedly small scale, as there has been no heavy purchasing since early in year. With the preserving season not far distant, if there would come a turn that would start a buying movement, a big business would undoubtedly follow.

Dealers are feeling a change in the lines in demand, summer and picnic goods now moving to the fore. Retailers should not be slow to turn with the demand, and to lend their assistance in getting the trade in these lines started. Pickles, olives and sauces are moving well now, while canned goods and all those prepared lines which mean less work to the housewife during the warm weather or which are in request by campers and picnickers should soon begin to go out.

SUGAR.—The weakness apparent in the sugar market mentioned last week developed into a 10 cent decline on Wednesday afternoon. The present price is now $5.35, as compared with $4.70 at the corresponding period in 1911. (As the change was announced too late to have corrections made, the quotations below should be read 10 cents less in each case.)

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.—Demand for corn syrups continues on a good scale for season, prices showing no change. Corn has eased somewhat during the month, although showing a slight recovery during past week. Syrups are down 10 cents per case in Winnipeg, but whether this denotes any general tendency to easiness is a question, as prices are wont to vary a great deal in the Western provinces.

There is only the usual routine demand for molasses at unchanged prices.

DRIED FRUITS.—There is little or no change in spot dried fruits. Figs and dates are in rather small compass and steady; evaporated apples are quiet, with stocks in few hands, while apricots and raisins offer no particularly new features. There was an easiness in prunes for a time, but it appears that bottom has about been reached, although there is some shading reported on an odd size, in which stocks are a little on large side.

A dried fruit broker in touch with situation expressed the opinion this week that stocks held by wholesalers were now well within a safe margin, and that market would be fully ready for new goods. "There was a slight overplus of large-sized prunes at one time," he said, "but I think they are in safe compass now. It appears, however, that some houses are carrying larger stocks of Bosnia and Servia prunes than they care to."

In futures, considerable damage to Oregon prunes is the chief feature. Prospects are for a good-sized crop of prunes in California, but trees being heavily loaded will prevent growth of large sizes, unless there is a June dropping.

TEA. — There are no prominent changes in tea, either here or on primary markets. Steadiness appears to be the rule, and while attention is being directed to opening of new crop, purchasing by wholesalers and distributors is not large. The tea being produced at this season is not in great demand here.

COFFEE.—Coffee situation does not show any great change. Deliveries are still running ahead of estimates, so that it appears that the new crop shall be entered with a good deal more visible than was thought probable some weeks ago. Interest is directed to the United States Government's action in suing for an injunction against the valorization committee's agents to move or dispose of 950,000 bags of coffee in store, and for a declaration that the valorization plan be declared illegal, being in restraint of trade, and asking for a receiver to sell the stored coffee. The outcome is being awaited by the coffee world.

SPICES.—As pointed out last week, general steadiness prevails in spices. Peppers and cloves are strong on primary markets. Celery seed is well maintained at the unusual high figure to which it has been boosted in past two months. Wholesalers say they are hardly able to buy it at all. Cream tartar, after a high range, has a somewhat easier tendency.

Demand for spices is quite normal for season.

NUTS.—Shelled walnuts in small lots are quoted down to 28 cents. Some jobbers are asking 30 cents. "We are quoting 28 for walnuts and 25 in case lots," said one firm. Their price on shelled almonds is 35c in small lots, and 33c in cases. There is a normal trade in shelled nuts, as well as in Brazils and peanuts.

BEANS.—Stocks are small and prices steady to firm. From $2.75 upward is being asked for primes. One year ago the quotation was $2.10, while at this time two years ago $2.30 was being asked. The high prices shown caused a large planting of beans this year.

POT BARLEY.—This line still continues firm, with $3.75 per cwt. being asked, with 4c per pound for small lots. It has certainly been moving upward during past year. In August last pot barley was worth $2.50. Pearl barley is generally $1.00 per cwt. above pot.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—Just how the situation in canned goods stands at present, it is somewhat difficult to size up. At this season of the year, one firm may be short on a line, and another fairly well supplied, and thus a difference in their ideas of values.

As far as fruits are concerned there appears to be a general steady tone, with supplies of strawberries, raspberries and blueberries on the small side. Apples have been getting more attention of late.

In vegetables there appears to be some easiness in peas. This may not be general, but there are some firms shading prices. "The high price has cut down the sale of peas this year," said one jobber, "and some houses are carrying rather more than they care to, seeing that it will not be a great while until packing of new goods will commence." "The percentage of delivery was small last year," said another, "but you must remember that the total pack of peas was larger than the previous year." Quotations by different firms range from $1.25 upward. Soaked peas bring $1.

Tomatoes hold fairly steady, although here and there word comes in from retailers of prices being shaded to make sales.

Corn is quoted at 97½ to $1 dozen. Some houses report a good demand at present for corn. Others say that considering the low price compared with other lines, demand has not been as great as they expected.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Corn Syrup.—Lower in price.

Sugar.—Weak.

Coffee.—Strong.

Beans.—Firm.

Winnipeg, May 30.—Wholesalers continue to report satisfactory business and a good seasonable demand for all lines. There is much local interest in coffee situation and a general feeling that there is a trust or combination that is holding up prices altogether above what visible supply warrants.

Weather has now turned warm with a more settled appearance and rapid growth is everywhere in evidence. Present indications are for an excellent crop and capital and immigration are pouring into the country.

On the whole business outlook is first rate, statements made by leading bankers and wholesalers indicate that there has been satisfactory improvement in collections since the first of month and outlook in that direction is encouraging.

DRIED FRUITS.—Prices in dried fruits are now steady and no immediate changes are looked for. California fruit crop promises well and late season here has insured a plentiful supply of wild fruits in the prairie provinces. These conditions will have an ultimate effect towards lower prices.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX, May 29.—Wholesale dealers report business in good volume, and collections fully up to average. New made butter is now coming in more plentifully and some good dairy butter in small tubs is being offered at 26 cents. Creamery is also slightly easier, but the drop is not so great as in case of dairy. Eggs continue to come along in good supply and demand is fair. They are wholesaling at 21 cents.

Lard is a fraction higher at 16 for tubs and 16½ cents for pails.

An advance of one cent per pound in cream of tartar crystals is also noted. Canned goods are in fairly good demand, particularly beans, peas, and tomatoes. Stocks of the latter are now low.

There has been no further change in price of flour and meal during the past week but dealers are anticipating an advance.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, May 29.—It has been an exceptionally quiet week on local market. There has been little change of consequence, and figures quoted on practically all staple products remain about same. The feeling with many local grocers is that there will be no further change in flour, at least for the near future. Since the advance of Ontario patents on the 10th instant, feeling has been easier and because increase has not been followed by a rise in Manitoba, it is thought that the latter will not go up for a while at any rate.

Molasses still remain steady at recent advance and as crop is lighter than expected, according to reports, higher prices are looked for.

First shipments of new Bermuda onions are now arriving, and bring from 3 to 4 cents, while some Egyptian stocks are still on the market at 3½ cents. Owing to reduced consumption, pork is a little easier, but lard and other pork products remain unchanged.

In the country market there has been a drop in the price of potatoes which are much easier, while eggs, butter and cheese are all cheaper. Eggs sold retail this week for 18 cents, while butter brought from 22 to 24 and cheese 14 and 15.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE AD. MAN.

At this period of the year, when the appetite craves for something sharp, why not try a good smoked herring. We have some nice ones.

These soups are handy. Every housekeeper should keep a few on hand. A complete assortment.

Now, if you want something very satisfying, try canned pineapple—sliced, whole or grated.

Friday is the day when fish is king. Be fair with your purse and give your digestive machinery a square deal by getting the best. Every fish can look the pure food inspector straight in the eye.

Table talk—we would like to sell you more groceries than we do—we don't know why we don't because we always handle the best and never sacrifice quality for price—if you have never bought any groceries from us you are missing something.

You will be treated as courteously in buying 5 cents' worth as if you gave us a $50 order.

NO VINEGAR STANDARDS.

There appears to be no well defined standards for vinegar in Canada. Collections and testings have been made by the Inland Revenue Department with the object of ascertaining whether or not certain proposed definitions of and standards for vinegar could be enforced to the advantage of the consumer.

Vinegar is at present defined in the fifth schedule of the Adulteration Act as follows: "A more or less colored liquid consisting essentially of impure, dilute acetic acid, obtained by oxidation of wine, beer, cider or other alcoholic liquid."

"In the absence of standards," says the report, "I am unable to designate any of 151 samples taken as adulterated, except in so far as they fail to meet the requirements of 5th schedule to the Adulteration Act. Even here it is open to question whether a fermented vinegar to which acetic acid has been added, would be held adulterated by the courts."

The difference between a cluttered up window display of mixed goods and a clean cut one-idea-showing is just the difference between a billboard covered with a varied assortment of small posters and one having one big, plain, well lettered advertisement.

Many a good man has reached the top by reason of being encouraged rather than because of exceptional merit or spend ever drawn into your stare to ability.

Pineapple Preserving Season is Here

Pines are Cheaper, Flavor is Good and They Should be Pushed for Preserving Purposes—Strawberries Selling Well—Tomatoes A Little Scarce at Present—Florida Potatoes Firmer—Cherries From California—Watermelons from Florida.

Pineapples are now being pushed for preserving purposes, and a large quantity are being disposed of. Prices are lower and have now reached quite a reasonable level, and wholesalers feel that now is the time for retailers to go after the pine business strong. "We feel that now is the best time for pineapples, as the fruit is in its prime, full of flavor and in good keeping condition," reads the weekly circular of one firm. Late arrivals are somewhat better in quality. Supplies are coming from Porto Rico and Cuba but mostly the latter. Florida will later have some to offer.

Strawberries are proving good sellers at present coming from points closer at hand, being of somewhat better quality and on account of shorter transportation arriving in better condition. Prices however, remain fairly steady. Last year, the first Canadian berries were sent forth from Niagara district on June 1, but this year they will be considerably later in making their debut.

Just one year ago lemons were decidedly on the jump, because of the warm May and the big demand for this line that resulted. Lemons at the present are steady and with weather likely to become warmer, they will probably hold that position. Prospects for new crop lemons do not look particularly bright, and a fairly high summer market is expected, although much depends on what the weather man hands out.

Tomatoes are a little scarce at present, rains in Florida having interfered with shipments. There is considerable business in Florida potatoes but situation is stronger, prices at primary points having expanded about $1 per barrel. Texas is sending some stock to Canadian markets now. They are a shade lower than Florida.

Victoria Day was responsible for more life to fruits and fancy vegetables last week. The end of this week should also see a greater demand on account of the holiday spirit due to the King's Birthday on June 3.

Watermelons from Florida and cherries from California are fancy lines now being offered.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS.—The holiday last week brightened up fruit trade considerably while end of this week should see greater impetus in anticipation of demand around the King's Birthday.

A new line offered this week on local market is California cherries at $2.50 to $3 per box. The first watermelons of the season from Florida are expected along this week and will probably sell around 60 cents each.

Pineapples are easier in price and having now reached quite a reasonable level and showing good quality are being pushed by dealers for preserving purposes. They are quoted around $2.90 per crate for all sizes with 5 crate lots offered at $2.80 and 10 crate lots at $2.75.

Strawberries are arriving in car lots from points closer at hand, meaning shorter transportation and better berries. The first Canadian berries from Niagara district arrived in Toronto on June 1 last year but there are no signs of any as yet this year.

Apples are fast becoming an unknown quantity. In fact they already are with most firms. There are some fancy apples from across the line quoted at $4.50 per box. Rhubarb is lower. Lines are quoted at $1.50 per hundred.

VEGETABLES.—There is considerable business in vegetables just now, new goods meeting with a good demand. There is a moderate movement of Florida potatoes but they are higher at primary points. There will be some Texas stock in this week at a shade lower figure than Florida. Tomatoes hold steady. One firm is quoting hothouse tomatoes in 15 lb. baskets at 21 cents per pound. Florida are worth $3.75 to $4.50 per 6 bsk. crate.

There is lots of Canadian asparagus coming along, selling at $1.50 to $2 per basket. Both Egyptian and Bermuda onions are slightly easier. There is a fairly good demand for such lines as new cabbage, beans, beets, carrots, lettuce, onions and radishes.

Old potatoes show no great change. There are considerable Prince Edward Island stock selling at a figure 25 cents per bag below New Brunswick.

FRUIT MARKET NOTES.

Apples are well to an end on Canadian markets.

General trend of oranges is a little firmer last week.

New York had a few lots of new crop huckleberries from Florida last week.

Florida is sending forth some pineapples.

Canadian asparagus is plentiful and cheaper.

Rains in Florida have interfered with shipments.

Fruits should be pushed strongly

Vegetables Sell in Spite of High Prices

If Proper Displays Are Made Sales Will Increase—An Opportunity Lost to Show a Monster Cucumber as Central Feature—A Window Suggested—Now the Time to Sell Vegetables.

Montreal, May 30.—(Special.)—Although different varieties of vegetables and fruits are now quoted at higher prices than formerly, the most wide-awake dealers in Montreal have evidently made up their minds not to let sales drop away. Still it is quite evident that some are not great believers in display, as windows recently dressed are on the whole second rate, and do not present as great a show of ingenuity as we have noticed at an earlier date.

A Necessity, Not a Luxury.

Vegetables, even though prices reach a record level, will scarcely ever be regarded as a luxury, and dealers should bear this in mind, and make every effort to send a fair share of their stock into every home on their list. It would be a good idea, indeed, to make a particular study of the varieties and be in a position to talk up the medicinal value, for if there is any sales talk which will have a good effect on the mind of the housewife, it is that which contains good hard facts about the health giving and nourishing properties of different foodstuffs.

Neat Window Displays Win Out.

When great care is exercised, there is no display which has such an appealing force or which invites trade more than an elaborate show of carefully selected vegetables.

A local dealer was recently fortunate enough to secure a cucumber slightly over two feet long, which had been grown by a private individual — the length is in all probability a record one. But he was not awake to opportunities, and kept it in a back part of the store, showing it only to a few of his personal friends.

A Good Chance Lost.

Why he did not make this the central attraction of a vegetable window is hard to say. Consider the number of people who would have stopped to study this cucumber "monster," and consider what sales could have been produced, not only of cucumbers, but of other lines, such as rhubarb, etc., if, as aforesaid, he had used his brain a little and announced to his customers and strangers that he had "Something Good in Vegetables!"

A Window Suggestion.

When any particular line of goods is dear and demand is likely to fall off, then is the best possible, in fact, the necessary time to put forth a special effort to retain what might be lost. Dealers will be interested in the following dressing suggestion, which if followed out, ought to have satisfactory results.

In each of back corners of window place a pile of potatoes high enough to attract attention, with show card explaining price and quality also prominent. In the two front corners arrange a square shape of lettuce bordered by radishes and scallions, and place in the centre of each square a juicy looking bunch of asparagus. The four corners thus filled, rows of rhubarb can be arranged diagonally to the centre, which if built up as follows will be the means of adding to the attractiveness of the corners and produce a general good effect. A circle of small cabbage, all, of course, good stock, will leave enough space to allow of a fair supply of turnips inside, on top of which, namely in spaces between each, can be fixed parsnips and carrots, which in their turn will taper considerably. As it would be next to impossible to build any further than having tomatoes placed in the respective spaces between the carrots or parsnips, as case may be, the top and final touch may be added by suspending two small baskets from the ceiling or top of the window with sides cut out, containing celery, tomatoes and other small varieties.

This idea may seem somewhat difficult of execution, but if followed out carefully in small window space, will prove thoroughly attractive and a business producer.

A HOUSECLEANING WINDOW.

Spring house cleaning offers excellent advantages for window trims which will bring good business to the retailer. Here is a suggestion for a display of the several lines of house cleaning supplies.

The floor of the window is covered with some dark color cheese-cloth. In the centre at the front, place a quantity of washing soda and on this display soap and scrub brushes. At each side of this display stove polish and metal polish and back of these ammonia, lye, etc., and back of these washing powders, dustpans and brushes. In the centre at the rear, place a pyramid of buckets and at each side a display of brooms. Across the window at the rear stretch a clothesline and in the centre place a strip of linen fastened on with clothes pins. On this linen appropriate reading matter may be lettered in black.

Such a display combining as it does the several lines of housecleaning essentials should be productive of good results.

FARRINGTON PHILOSOPHY.

Persistence is of more value in advertising than brilliance, but that is no reason for being dull. Dully written advertising is no more readable than any other dull writing.

The customers who are not repelled by a dirty looking store are not customers whose trade is the most valuable. The clean store attracts the clean customers.

When were people with money to spend ever drawn into your store to spend it by seeing the clerks standing in the window or out upon the steps?

The man who gets along best with his employes is the man who does not forget that they have as many rights as he himself has.

Rolled Oat Market Not Quite So Firm

Winnipeg Oat Market Easier—Oatmeal for Export Reduced —Demand for Cereals Rather Inclined to Dullness—Bran Lower at Several Centres—Winter Wheat Crop Reports Discouraging—Texas Harvests the First Wheat of Season.

While rolled oats are unchanged, the market is not quite so steady as has been the case for some time. There does not appear to be a great accumulation of manufactured goods, but raw material is slightly easier. On April 10, when last advance in rolled oats occurred, May oats on Winnipeg market were quoted at 50⅝. To-day they are worth around 45½. Last week oatmeal for export declined 9 cents per sack, due to some extent to quiet demand. Cereals in general are rather dull at present, but such a condition is not unusual at this season. With warmer weather close at hand, demand will not be quite so heavy, while retailers always like to keep stocks within a safe margin during summer months.

One change of the week is an easier feeling in bran with prices down about $1 per ton at several centres. Shorts maintain a fairly steady position. With pastures assuming a better appearance, demand for feed will hardly be so brisk.

Flour shows little or no change, although steadiness is maintained. In view of serious impairment to winter wheat crops both in Canda and United States, winter wheat flour holds a steady position.

From now on the markets can be expected to be somewhat unsettled and uncertain, depending on the condition of crops from week to week. This is far more the case this year, as in other years a good winter wheat crop has been pretty much assured at this date, while this year it is considerably short and spring wheat an uncertainty. Conditions for spring wheat in United States have been good, but little can be said of the Canadian West as yet. The first new wheat for 1912 was harvested in Texas this week.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—It is reported that wheat throughout Ontario is gradually growing scarcer, and as a result a firm feeling prevails here. A large part of the crop is also reported as having been winter killed, owing to severe cold weather, and as some of the smaller mills have closed down, the offerings have materially been curtailed. The general feeling, therefore, is that prices will rule higher.

CEREALS. — A weaker feeling has prevailed during the past week and we would not be surprised to see a slight decrease in prices before long. This weakness must not be attributed to any increase in supplies on spot, but is rather a result of the weakness prevailing in the Winnipeg option market.

TORONTO.

FLOUR. — There is no particular change in Manitoba flour to report. There is apparently a fair trade for season.

There is a steady feeling in Ontario flour in sympathy with similar tendency in wheat. Reports from different sections of Canada on winter wheat are rather discouraging. According to Census and Statistics office, area sown to winter wheat last fall was 1,097,900 acres. To the end of April it is estimated that about 31.50 per cent. of this area was winter killed, the proportion being 28.72 in Ontario, and 38.50 in Alberta. This represents a total deduction from the area sown of about 345,000 acres, 229,000 acres in Ontario and 116,000 in Alberta.

CEREALS.—Rolled oats remain unchanged but there is a slightly easier turn to the market in sympathy with raw material. Cornmeal is quoted at $2.35 to $2.40 per cwt. Some firms are quoting $3 per barrel for rolled wheat in small lots. New business in cereals is rather quiet at present time.

Considerable attention has been aroused in United States by the effort which is being made by a couple of St. Louis promoters to form a mammoth amalgamation of several of the chain store systems of the United States. These would together represent some 3,000 stores. It is not considered feasible because of widely differing views of doing business held by different systems.

The man who is afraid to advertise his goods as the best is either too modest or else he has the wrong kind of goods.

Fresh and Smoked Fish are Selling Well

Supplies on a Liberal Scale—Major Portion of Business in Fresh Varieties—Smoked Doing Well for Season—Trout and Whitefish Good Sellers—Halibut, Cod and Haddock in Plentiful Supply.

The fresh fish season can now be said to be in full swing. At least supplies are on a more liberal scale, fishing on the lakes having reached quite substantial proportions, while receipts from coast points are normal in volume. The big business in fish is now being done in fresh varieties although smoked are doing remarkably well for the season.

Trout and whitefish are good sellers, although the latter line was in short supply at several points last week. Halibut, cod and haddock are plentiful, while mackerel will shortly be having its appearance on the market.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—Haddock and cod are all plentiful and coming in freely. Buck and roe shad are quoted at reasonable figures. Perch are becoming more plentiful and prices are somewhat lower than at former periods.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—Supplies of fresh fish are arriving on a quite liberal scale, shipments being heavier than earlier in season. There is a good supply of pike, trout and herring arriving and they are in good demand. Whitefish is also a favorite but has been rather scarce of late. Lake Erie herring are lower, now being down to 6 cents per pound, while halibut is also easier under increased shipments. Roe shad are quoted at 60 cents each. Periwinkles are $1 a peck.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—Local fish dealers report market well supplied with fish of all seasonable kinds. Halibut, cod and haddock are plentiful, and the fish are of splendid quality. Prices of mixed fresh fish are easier, some of the fishermen along south-western shore disposing of their catches for $1.50 to $1.75 per hundred pounds. Mackerel have struck in along the coast, and some small catches are being made. No fresh mackerel have as yet reached local market, but they are expected along next week. Two of the local fish firms have fitted out their own vessels for the mackerel fishery this season, the experiment is a costly one but if they get the fish they will make the enterprise pay.

So far very little news has been received from Lunenburg Banking fleet, but that at hand is encouraging. Bait is now in better supply, and this will tend to increase catch. The shore fishery so far is behind that of last season.

Lobsters are plentiful, and despite the high prices demand is good.

MANITOBA.

FISH.—There is a seasonable demand for fish but no new features to report. Prices for pickerel and whitefish are for frozen fish.

The Board of the United States General Appraisers say "chow-chow" is not a fruit, and that it is dutiable at 40 per cent. ad valorem as a pickle. The Surveyor at Port of Memphis had assessed chow-chow at 35 per cent. under "preserved fruit."

The United States is by far the largest consumer of Japan tea. Advance sheets for 1911 show shipments to U.S. to be 39,218,720 pounds. Canada took 2,829,837 pounds.

Where and How the Anchovy is Caught

Interesting Facts About This Silvery Little Fish — Fishermen Thrive When Anchovy Shoals Appear—As Much As $400 Worth Are Often Caught in One Day.

By W. J. L. Kiehl.

It is generally supposed that the anchovy is caught exclusively in the Mediterranean sea, so it comes as a surprise to most people to hear that it is so largely caught off the coast of Holland. Dutch fishermen have been familiar for ages with the fact that the anchovy comes up in great shoals at certain times of the year and enters the Zuyder Zee to spawn.

Disappear at Times.

There have, however, been considerable lapses of time when no anchovies at all appeared, and when it was feared that the Dutch fisher folk had lost their means of earning a livelihood, then, suddenly, without any apparent reason, the shoals of fish again became regular visitors. These last few years the anchovy has been particularly plentiful. Many a Zuyder Zee fisherman has made his living for the whole year during the anchovy season, which lasts from six to eight weeks, and as much as 1,000 florins' ($400) worth have been known to be taken in a single day.

Some twenty-five years ago these fisheries were confined to the area south and east of Medemblik; now they extend all over the Zuyder Zee and along the Wadden islands—those, flat, sandy islands that stretch in an almost continuous line along Holland's coast. Sometimes the shoals of fish come as far south in the Zuyder Zee as the isle of Urk and Monniken dam and Marken.

Method of Fishing.

Formerly the method of capturing a shoal of anchovy consisted in stretching an enormous net with small meshes between two boats. This net touched the sea bottom. Then the boats hoisted sail and the more wind there was the better pleased were the fishermen. They sailed on for a while and then when the net was lifted it contained thousands of silvery fishes. Later on they preferred to fish with stationary nets, because more fish could be caught in that way. Each fisherman places his own nets in a certain part of the sea, and after a while comes to see whether they have been filled with fish. Certainly more fish are caught in this way, but there is also the risk of a heavy loss in nets, which are often damaged because of the busy traffic in the Zuyder Zee. So many boats are sailing about there that it is impossible for them always to avoid the nets, which are everywhere. Such anchovy nets cost as much as 1,000 florins ($400) with all their fittings.

Means Other Business.

The anchovy brings plenty of work for many another category of persons than the regular fishermen. For the fish have to be cleaned, salted and packed into casks. The cleaning is done almost exclusively by women and children, the salting occupies the "salter" and the making of the many casks employs a little army of coopers. Then the packing is also done by experienced hands in such a way that the anchovy can be kept for many years without spoiling.

The herring fishers also often obtain millions of anchovy near the coast of Holland. For as soon as they perceive a shoal coming their way they will fix anchovy netting into their herring nets and so often secure almost miraculous hauls.

The anchovy is a small fish, the full grown specimen being only fifteen centimeters (5.9 inches) long. The back of this fish is bluish and the under parts are white, glistening like silver in the sunshine.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Editor, Canadian Grocer:—Your Special Number of The Grocer is certainly a great number, and must have cost you considerable, considering the price of the yearly subscription. We have found a great many useful hints in The Grocer, and are only sorry we did not take it long ago.

Referring to shipments of freight to us, when anything is slow we are expected to make claim on the railway company, but when we ship anything to commission houses, if anything is slow in arriving or broken, they simply take it out of us. Do you think this is a fair rule? We have one case now of a bag of wool lost in transit, that we shipped to a firm, and up to the present no returns have been received. This shipment was made in December of last year.

Your articles on cost and selling price, etc., are very interesting. Also the window dressing articles. In fact, it is all good food easily digested if taken right.

STRONG FOR EARLY CLOSING.

St. John, N.B., May 30.—(Special).—Several grocers were members of a delegation from the early closing association who called upon the City Commissioners last week and interviewed them as regards their disposition towards matter of compelling under penalty of a fine all stores in the city, with one or two excepted, to close at 7 o'clock daily, excepting Saturday. The members of the association are actively engaged in interesting all concerned in promoting the early closing regulations and the outcome of the matter is awaited anxiously by the dealers and clerks particularly.

M. E. Brass, grocer, of Germain St., was one of the speakers before the commission, and he argued strongly in favor of having the doors of all business establishments closed at the hour mentioned, allowing fish departments to be kept open on Thursday evenings to a later hour. W. E. Rowley, W. S. Knowles, L. T. Nase, and W. D. Baskin were others who spoke concerning early closing. Their arguments were promised sincere consideration by the commissioners.

MAKE WHOLESALERS RESPONSIBLE.

Texas Retail Merchants' Association in convention passed a resolution condemning promiscuous extension of credit by wholesalers to inexperienced and irresponsible persons who want to enter the grocery business. This habit of wholesale grocers has been condemned as one reason why so many retailers fail, the incompetents falling down in a few months or year, and dragging others with them.

RICE ADVERTISING.

This is what one grocer in advertising a fancy quality of rice said in attempting to bring this article into favor:—

Food scientists of all nations recognize rice as one of the most valuable foods of the world.

Excellent food for all climates—hot or cold.

Rich in nutritive qualities, and easily digested—and when of good quality and properly prepared, one of the most palatable foods.

There are said to be about 1,400 varieties of rice throughout the world—and "—— quality rice" represents the very choicest selection of all.

The grains are whole, extra large, natural and white—cooks beautifully, and has the richest flavor.

After one trial you'll always want this quality.

More Life to Smoked and Cooked Meats

These Lines Sell Better During Summer Months—Increased Demand Already Noticed—Butter is Steady But Looks Like Further Easiness Ahead—Eggs Slightly Easier — Old Cheese Strong and New Cheese Steady.

There is more activity to smoked and cooked meats of late. These are lines which always sell more freely during summer months and there is already quite a noticeable increase in the demand for them. As the weather becomes warmer, cooked meats always come into limelight, because housewife is always on the lookout for goods which will allow summer meals to be prepared with the least trouble. Again the season of holiday outings is close at hand and cooked meats is a favorite line for these occasions. Dealers who wish to work up a substantial trade for summer months should begin now to give attention to this department.

Butter shows little change at principal centres or country points, although there seems to be a general feeling that values will show some further recessions. It must be remembered that new make is coming on bare market and with situation in East relieved by shipments to West, decks have been kept fairly free from accumulations. However, the West will shortly be able to look after her own wants to a large extent at least, and with good pastures and a good flow of milk, there is a feeling that easiness is ahead if no new features crop up.

There is an easier feeling in eggs at many centres and lower prices are being paid in the country. Receipts have been on the increase, although a continued good demand has worked for a steady feeling. Weather has kept fairly cool and shipments have come in in good shape, although some loss through shrinkage will shortly be found. A report from Newfoundland says the market is glutted with eggs and prices are down to 20 cents and likely to go lower. Storage is caring for certain quantities in some parts of Canada, but wholesalers feel that prices are rather high for putting away.

The universal small stocks of old cheese makes nothing but firm prices possible. New make is also holding quite steady, receipts continuing small as compared with last year. The smaller receipts are said to be due to a decrease in the herds. Then again hay and feed have been high but improved pastures should help the situation.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—There is a steady feeling in pork products in general and prices in all lines have been well maintained. Hams and bacon have been in good demand while cooked meats will now be coming in for greater attention. Barelled pork is firm but the demand is limited.

Although cattle in general are easier, prices on hogs have been sustained under a good demand from packers.

General feeling in pork products is firmer, and hams are higher by ½ to 1 cent per pound. Long clear is also advanced about 1 cent per pound, and cooked ham is firmer.

BUTTER.—There is not much change in butter since a week ago, prices holding fairly steady under smaller receipts than a year ago and an enquiry from the northwest that has kept decks clear. That there is not much change in situation is shown by fact that butter sold at Cowansville on Saturday at 26½ to 26¾ cents, practically the price that ruled the previous Saturday. There are many who look for an easier turn ahead.

EGGS.—There is an easier feeling in egg market this week. Receipts have been on a good scale but a good demand has helped to keep market steadier than it otherwise would be, but lower prices are looked for in near future.

Weather during May has been much cooler than last year and receipts have been in good shape.

CHEESE.—Old cheese is firm and new cheese holds a steady position, due to small receipts as compared with those of last year. Reports from England note a firm market with stocks light. However increased production in Canada can be expected shortly.

PROVISIONS. — While some firms show no change in lard prices, others note firmer ideas. "We are asking 14 cents in tierces," said one firm. High prices may be affecting consumption to some extent, but butter is still rather high, and consequently the economic housewife substitutes lard for cooking whenever possible.

Live hogs are unchanged but steady. There is general steadiness in provisions, with roll bacon and long clear firmer and slightly higher. Short cut pork is quoted at $24 to $25.

BUTTER.—Butter, as indicated by local quotations, is steady and unchanged, although majority of dealers are looking for lower prices. In fact, lower prices were looked for before this, but a demand which sprang up from Western Canadian points relieved the market of any surplus, and steadied the situation. Considerable butter was sent west from Toronto, even to British Columbia points, but this demand has dropped off somewhat of late. In fact, it is expected that West will shortly have sufficient to supply its own wants, and with this demand removed and production increasing, further concessions seem probable.

EGGS.—There is a somewhat easier feeling to eggs this week. At least dealers are paying lower prices in the country.

"We have been foolish and paying too high prices," was one dealer's comment when asked the reason for easiness.

"Eggs are beginning to show signs of shrinkage, too, and we must have prices so we can make an allowance for this."

A good many eggs were stored at a rather fancy figure, and there is said to be some nervousness on the part of certain holders.

"We are paying 20 cents to dealers in country this week," said one wholesaler. "I expect they will be down to 18c in two weeks."

Ideas therefore appear bearish.

CHEESE.—Old cheese is decidedly scarce, and ideas of dealers who hold stock are higher. Around 18 cents per pound for large is being asked. New cheese shows little or no change, but lower prices are probable during June.

Was Discovered Marketing Boiled Eggs

Case Where Original Seller Was Found Out—Neighbor Purchases the Eggs Shortly After Former Had Sold Them to General Merchant—The Shrinkage in Hot Weather.

A horse dealer dropped into a drug store in Eastern Ontario not long ago and purchased 50 cents worth of a certain drug. A few hours later he confided with the clerk that out of that 50 cents' investment he had made $40.

But here was his method. He wanted to sell a horse that was suffering with the heaves. He evidently had some knowledge of horse troubles. The drug purchased had the effect of allaying the disease for a few hours, allowing the dealer to sell his horse for some $75, while it really wasn't worth $35.

Questionable methods of this character are used in the egg business. A general country merchant writes regarding a boiled egg deal which, from the light of past experiences, is of no infrequent occurrence.

Were Valuable for Setting.

He purchased some eggs from a country customer who kept well-bred hens. The eggs sold for setting purposes at $1.50. But to the merchant who resold them again, they brought only the regular market price of ordinary eggs—21 cents, or 22 if trade were given. As a usual occurrence one could count on the eggs being sent away to the big city commission houses. In this instance, however, the calculations of the original seller went wrong. Shortly after they were in the store a neighboring customer came for eggs for baking purposes. The merchant handed out some of those he had recently received. He knew where they came from and was satisfied they were fresh.

Dipped Too Long.

It wasn't long after when the same customer arrived on the scene with trouble brewing in her eye. She had opened two of the eggs and both had been partly boiled, so she brought back the entire dozen. When confronted with having boiled the eggs before selling them, the woman admitted having done so, and frankly stated her reason. It was because they could not be used for hatching if perchance they might be selected for that purpose. Competition would injure her trade. The question had arisen just before she left for the store, and her husband, she stated, had suggested that she dip them. They were left too long in the boiling water, and this was the cause of all the trouble.

Keeps Up the Price.

This is one of the causes that helps to make dear eggs. Wholesale commission dealers have to cull the boiled and rotten eggs, and with the shrinkage great in hot weather, there are fewer to go to the city consumer. Country merchants should watch their egg receipts very closely and see that they are getting what they pay for. Whenever possible gentle hints should be handed out that in hot weather eggs should be gathered twice a day; that eggs from stolen nests should not be marketed, and that it is generally in one's own interests to sell only honest goods.

WOULD HAVE TO BE GIFT.

A Kingston, Ont., reader writes:—

Editor, Canadian Grocer:—Granting percentage on selling price is the correct way to figure. My goods cost me $200, and I want to sell them at 100 per cent. profit, leaving cost of selling out of the question.

Please ask your young lady at Simcoe to tell me at what price I must sell my goods.

"INQUIRER."

R. H. Davis, Strathroy, Ont., has succeeded J. E. Pedlow in the grocery business.

The total shipment of oranges from California to May 15 last year was 29,124 cars. To May 13 this year it amounted to 23,062 cars.

Some retailers loan instruments for removing eyes from pineapples to customers who purchase supplies from them.

Pickles, Baked Beans, Olive Oil, Tomato Soup, Tomato Ketchup, Preserved Fruits, Sauces, Peanut Butter, etc., are all in excellent demand now for the Summer trade, because these lines are used more extensively in warm weather than in other seasons of the year. Look over your stock and see that you are prepared for the extra business. The name Heinz in connection with these goods is first in the people's minds, and the merchant who carries a complete stock of them is the one who gets the business for these as well as other lines, for it is a well known fact that a good selling article attracts other business to the store.

Why Don't You do Like Him?

H. J. Buckley of Moberly, Mo., who bought a No. 84 Kingery Corn Popper with Peanut cylinder extra for $94.00.

He writes that the machine is doing fine. I pay $40.00 per month rent and have four people employed and machine pays rent and help.

Now to get at his profits in this little, big business, let's do a little figuring. Rent $480 per year. Four clerks at $5.00 per week each, $1,040, total $1,520 or 15 times the cost of his machine. Did you ever add anything to your business that beats it? In some cases they have earned more net profit than that of the business of the entire store. Furthermore its attractiveness turns the eyes of passersby upon your store. Often it is the agent of sending them in. It helps the business in the store. The Kingery Peanut Roasters and Corn Poppers are of many kinds and styles—Steam, Electric, Spring and Hand Power. Ranging in price from $8.50 to $350.00. Sold on liberal instalments.

You should have Kingery's Book of Possibilities and Catalog No. 39. They are free.

WON NATIONAL FAME

It has been the policy of hundreds of housewives to use bar soap, for various good reasons; day by day hundreds more are seeing the advantage; and now it is the policy of the housewives of the entire nation to use N. P. Bar Soap.

It lasts longer—gives better satisfaction, and is more economical than any cake soap.

These features, and the fact that it pays you good profit are reasons why you could and should sell N. P. Bar Soap.

THE GIANT
5-CENT PACKAGE

The popularity of a package can often be judged by the number of imitators it has. Beware of these masquerading brands which are following in the wake of the leader of all 5c. Ammonia Powder.

LAWRASON'S SNOWFLAKE AMMONIA

It has been commended by all classes of people as the only pure and satisfaction-giving ammonia powder on the market. Our selling policy has been appreciated by the grocers from coast to coast. Again we reiterate the whole-souled popularity of Lawrason's Snowflake Ammonia.

"Make it in Maisonneuve"

Why the "food stuff" manufacturer should locate in

Maisonneuve

The manufacturer of "FOOD STUFFS," will do well to locate in Maisonneuve, because of :—

1. The accessibility of Maisonneuve, lying directly alongside of Montreal with its stores of supplies, etc.

2. The shipping facilities of Maisonneuve —the C.P.R., the C.N.R. and the G.T.R. with the Terminal Electric Railway linking them all together and furnishing sidings for practically all sites, besides which is the St. Lawrence River, with great docks for Ocean liners and up the Lake boats.

3. Maisonneuve gives the bona fide manufacturer important concessions and ten years exemption from taxes.

4. The splendid selection of sites, alongside the Terminal Ry., and elsewhere, well situated and low priced.

5. The obtaining of all the improvements, gas, electricity, water, sewers, etc.

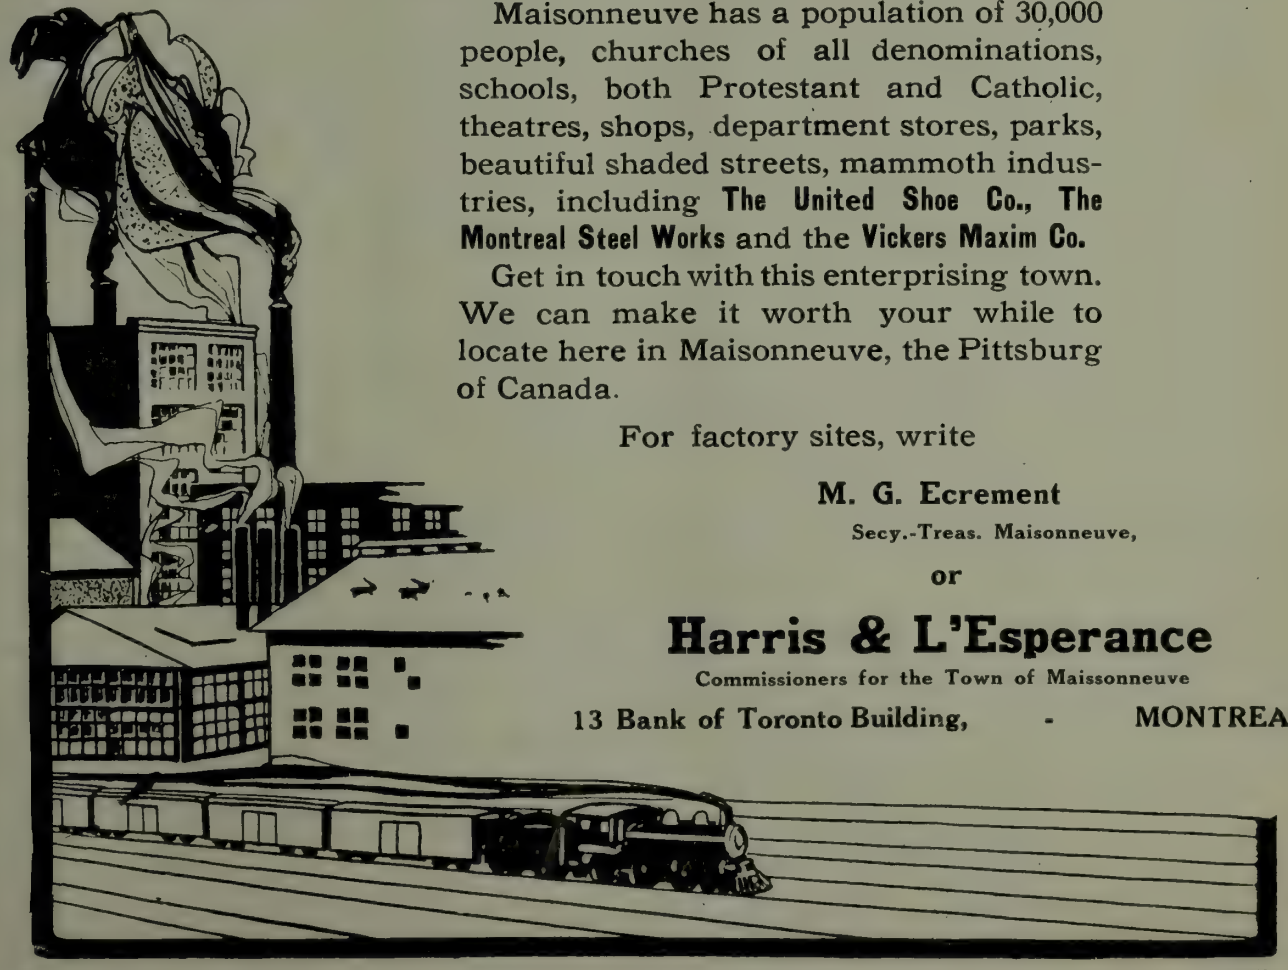
6. Low power rates, the result of competing electric companies.

7. The finest labor market in the Dominion of Canada, both male and female, skilled and unskilled.

8. Freedom of labor troubles, practically all workmen own their own homes.

9. 600,000 consumers right alongside of Maisonneuve.

10 Because in Maisonneuve he will possess many advantages over the manufacturer elsewhere, from every standpoint.



Maisonneuve has a population of 30,000 people, churches of all denominations, schools, both Protestant and Catholic, theatres, shops, department stores, parks, beautiful shaded streets, mammoth industries, including The United Shoe Co., The Montreal Steel Works and the Vickers Maxim Co.

Get in touch with this enterprising town. We can make it worth your while to locate here in Maisonneuve, the Pittsburg of Canada.

A Good Beef Shaver is an Easy Money Maker

Enterprise Beef Shavers are made on the principle that gives you years of satisfactory service. Every part is made of good material and with the fine accuracy of machining that means absolute precision in operation.

ENTERPRISE

are made in two styles. No. 23—the Enterprise Smoked Beef Shaver, with Self-Sharpening device—does the work without waste. The knife is suspended pendulum-like and each stroke cuts a slice cleanly and quickly. Regulated automatically to cut from tissue thickness up to an eighth of an inch.

Enterprise Rotary Smoked Beef Shaver with Self-Sharpening Device achieves the very highest point in the manufacture of this type of machine. The feed is easily regulated and cannot shift while in use. Slices are absolutely uniform always, the machine being capable of cutting from tissue thickness to a quarter of an inch. The sliced beef falls into a drawer which holds about two pounds.

Either of these machines in your store will give you satisfaction for years and will rapidly earn its cost. As all parts are interchangeable, you can make it as good as new ten years from now.

Like all Enterprise articles—Cherry Stoners, Raisin Seeders, Meat and Food Choppers, Sad Irons—they are made on honor to last.

A Grocers Tea and Coffee business should be his most valuable asset and he should study it in every possible way, by making himself acquainted with what is offering and not resting content with what other people choose to give him to sell. The Tea and Coffee Trade also is the legitimate business of the Grocer, and he can both get it and retain it by selling to his customers reliable and standard blends.

Is your Tea Department your most valuable asset? Is it bringing you the return that it shoud do? Are you content being just one of many instead of the man?

Do you mean to continue allowing the butcher on your right and the confectionery or fruit dealer on your left to grasp your Tea Trade—to sell exactly the same as you are selling—to scoop one half of your legitimate business.

Stand up for what should be yours by right. Cut out a way and a sure and certain one for yourself.

Push your Bulk Tea Trade, but be perfectly certain that you get the right goods.

Make a good display in your window, quoting price and giving an accurate description of your goods.

(We will gladly supply you with these Price Cards free with your order.) For instance your customers will see in your window a Tea with a nice appearance marked "Genuine English Breakfast Tea." Thick, rich, and delicious 40c. per lb. They will buy it, they will try it and they will be back for more.

Selling Standard Blends means $3.00 per chest extra profit. Are you going to have this extra $3.00? After due consideration we think you will!

Order any quantity you like. No need to over stock. Fresh Teas and Coffees are the lines to get business and we will ship all orders promptly.

STANDARD BLENDS

Thirty Years of experience is expended in producing these Fine Blends and the descriptions given are perfectly accurate. The quality always uniform.

THE TEST OF SERVICE

Few electric coffee mills develop trouble in the first year of their service. To the new owner, enthusiastic over the beauty and convenience of his new mill, what is out of sight is more than likely to be out of mind.

But to the level head buyer the value of foresight in what is out of sight needs no explaining. He knows that on these parts depend the life and service of his mill. Many a COLES mill is to-day, after three or four years service, giving just as good satisfaction as when it came fresh from the factory. Is this kind of service worth anything to you?

Cheap Tea Is Only Used
Because People Think It Is Cheap

Show them that they are mistaken and they will buy better tea.

2 lbs. of ordinary 25c tea will go but little, if any, further than 1 lb. of 50c Red Rose Tea. A pound of 40c Red Rose Tea will go further than a pound of any 30c tea—enough further to make it worth the difference in price.

Figure it out—1 lb. 40c Red Rose Tea will make over 200 cups. It takes a pound of very good 30c tea to make over 150 cups—

Wouldn't your customers buy better tea if they knew these facts?

Perhaps it would be worth your while to show them this ad.

Sugar Prices to Make 20 p.c. Margin

Tables Showing Drift of Prices and How Many Pounds Should Be Sold for Dollar to Insure Fair Profit—Coming of Preserving Season Means Large Sales and Advantage Should be Taken of This.

It was briefly announced in last week's issue that sugar had declined 10 cents per hundred. This brings sugar down to $5.25 on a Montreal basis which is 40 cents per cwt. below the figure prevailing at the beginning of January.

In June a year ago the wholesale price of refined sugar on the Montreal market was $4.60 or 65 cents lower than the opening of the month this year. That $4.60 proved to be the lowest price of sugar within a year. In July of 1911, the price began to soar rapidly, so much so, that at the end of that month it had reached $5.15. In August and September further aerial movements were recorded until the record price of $5.85—the highest in 22 years—had been reached. The price was maintained until December 6 when a decline of 10 cents occurred. Again on the sixteenth a similar decline took place bringing sugar to $5.65 at the end of the year.

The Changes This Year.

From that time the following table shows the changes up to June 1, 1912:—

Jan. 1	$5.65
Jan. 4	5.55
Jan. 11	5.45
Jan. 26	5.35
Feb. 8	5.45
Feb. 10	5.55
Mar. 27	5.45
Apr. 2	5.35
May 29	5.25

It will be noticed that in January alone declines to the extent of 30 cents were made, but in February a portion of this was regained. Since that time reductions of 30 cents took place leaving sugar to-day at the still comparatively high price of $5.25 per cwt.

Future is Uncertain.

As to what the future will bring forth can only be conjectured. Total stocks and afloats of Europe and American raws showed at the end of last week a visible supply of 2,737,424 tons as against 2,986,202 last year or a decrease of 248,778 tons. Cuba is in a disquieted position owing to the insurrection started by the negro population to obtain politicial and office recognition. All of this would tend to show a strengthening feeling. In fact raws advanced last week and so did refined in many parts of the United States. Canadian refined, of course, does not always follow the United States market as a large percentage of our raw sugar is imported from the British West Indies, where the estimate of the January crops is somewhat larger than a year ago.

Season of Large Sales.

Another point to be considered is the near approach of the preserving season with its accompanying strong demand in spite of price. In 1911 the price went up in July, as pointed out above, while in 1910 the highest price of the year ($5.15) was reached in May and lasted until September. Taking all the known facts together, and assuming that demand during the preserving season will be large as usual, there does not appear to be any outstanding indications of a great decline. The sugar market is, however, almost as uncertain as a horse race and until the horizon clears no definite opinions can be formed.

The Profit on Sugar.

Every dealer knows that sugar is one of his best sellers. But the majority bemoan the fact that profits are small. As to the cause of this, the blame must be laid to the retailers themselves. How frequently does one hear of and read about dealers selling 17 and 18 lbs. for a dollar when the invoice cost is practically that much! Taking cost of doing business into consideration, the net profit disappears altogether.

For instance if a hundred pounds of sugar costs $5.25 and sugar is sold at 18 pounds for the dollar, the net profit would be nil. The entire hundredweight would only bring $5.55 making a gross margin of 30 cents or 5.4 per cent. If 17 pounds were given, $5.88 would be realized which would only allow 10.7 per cent. as gross margin. Sixteen pounds would produce 16 per cent., while 15 pounds would bring in $6.66 or gross profit of 21.17 per cent.

Where Margin is Fair.

It is only now that we have got down to a basis where sugar can be sold at a fair profit. When it costs $5.25 (the present Montreal price) dealers cannot well afford to sell anything more than 15 or at the most 15½ lbs. for a dollar.

If the invoice cost is $5.35, as it is in Toronto, 15 lbs. for a dollar would realize $6.66—a gross margin of $1.31 or 19.6 per cent. At 14½ for a dollar the margin would be 22.3 per cent., which together with shrinkage, loss in weighing, etc., should be quite safe.

It is quite evident that when sugar costs $5.25 it should not be sold for 16 or more pounds for the dollar. Sixteen allows only 16 per cent. margin, just barely enough to cover cost of doing business in the average store.

A Table of Profits.

The following table may be of interest to many in figuring sugar profits as it shows at what price sugar may be sold to produce 20 per cent. gross margin on sales:—

Cost.	Margin.	S.P. Cwt.	Lbs. per Dollar.
$4.60	20%	$5.75	17½
4.70	20%	5.87	17
4.80	20%	6.00	16 2-3
4.90	20%	6.12	16 1-3
5.00	20%	6.25	16
5.10	20%	6.37	15 2-3
5.20	20%	6.50	15 1-3
5.30	20%	6.62	15
5.40	20%	6.75	14 4-5
5.50	20%	6.87	14½
5.60	20%	7.00	14

Maintaining Selling Price.

The fractions in the above table are not exactly correct in all cases but are close enough for safety. If these prices were maintained by every dealer in every town, sugar with its facilities for rapid turnover would be one of the most, if not the most profitable lines in the store. Twenty per cent. on sales allows a net profit on turnover of 5 per cent., when cost of doing business is 15 per cent., and this is a fair return on the investment.

Why certain dealers persist in giving away sugar is beyond understanding. Why not, instead, give away some slow-selling article? The merchant who cuts prices is usually patronized only while they remain cut. And at the present time when expenses have reached such high proportions one cannot afford to sell any article that does not bear its fair share of those expenses.

Now that the preserving season is about here, the price of sugar ought to be set where a net profit is assured. If every dealer maintains his price nobody will suffer.

CATALOGUES AND BOOKLETS.

Knowledge is Power, is the title of a little booklet issued by Bovril, Limited, with Canadian offices at 27 St. Peter St., Montreal. It deals with the food value of Bovril as a muscle and energy builder and refers to the investigations of Prof. H. Thompson, M.D., Sc. D., of Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland in the his analysis of Bovril. Information is also given in connection with the estates of this firm in Argentine Republic and Australia, and altogether the booklet is one that will aid in the development of the selling power of any grocer who handles this line.

See About Summer Drink Supplies Early

Considerable Trade Can Be Done Now—Do Not Fall Short of Supplies at Critical Time—There is a Sure Demand, but Make it Bigger—Use Your Own Salesmanship — Every Customer Should be Sold at Least Twice a Week.

By O. S. Johnston.

"Yes, we have a demand throughout the hot weather for summer drinks, but we do not count on that demand; we endeavor to build up business on our own account, and we are particularly successful." So spoke an average grocer quite recently when asked about the extent of his mineral water trade, and his remarks about demand are particularly interesting.

He would be a strange dealer who would not expect a certain call for refreshing beverages, and who, therefore, would not carry the line, but just now we do not wish to deal with the man who is simply an order taker; we want to talk about and to those men who are order getters, business builders, creators or whatever you wish to call them.

Go After Trade Hard.

There is practically no element of risk with bottled goods during the hot weather, as the wide-awake dealer can build up the trade in such lines to any extent he desires, provided he goes the right way about it. For instance, the majority of people keep in the open air during the hot evenings, many of them visiting the soda fountain and similar places of refreshment. Why not secure this trade, Mr. Grocer? Why not have a heart-to-heart talk with the customer, explain that it is cheaper for her to keep a regular supply of mineral waters, lime juice, etc., on ice in her home, on which she and the family can call at will, than go down to different stores here and there and pay five cents or a dime for a drink which in 99 cases out of a hundred is not half as long and therefore dearer, or as cooling as can be had from her own ice chest supply. Such a line of talk as this will in most cases secure an order for, say half a dozen bottles of minerals and a large size lime juice every week. Supposing you get thirty, or even twenty such orders, aren't you going to put a few easily earned dollars to the good?

Interior Display.

The window, while still a potent factor, is perhaps in this case not as strong a trade builder as an interior display. The showcard featuring two individuals, the fresh and the worn out, can be brought into play directly over a stand in the centre of the floor containing a wide range of thirst quenchers.

What kind of a stand is best, is a question often turned over in one's mind. Perhaps there is none so convenient as the small stair-case variety. On the bottom of, say six rungs, can be arranged syphons, and on the top the different lime juice sizes. The other four can be divided between lemonade powders and the smaller bottled goods. Apart from size arrangement, care should be taken that the different colors are well blended, as the neater the show the better the results.

Let Every Customer Know.

Those customers who do not visit the store regularly, and who cannot very well be sold over the 'phone, should be looked after just as keenly as others. A newspaper advertisement or a general circular announcing any particular feature of your service in this department would work to advantage.

A novel idea would be to buy up a stock of pictorial postcards, some odds and ends which wholesalers are willing to dispense with for a song, and have them addressed to a selected list. The post card, on being delivered by postman, will be scrutinized in the ordinary way, i.e., the picture will be glanced at and then the correspondence portion will be turned to eagerly in order that the source may be known. Undoubtedly your message about soft drinks will not be forgotten.

Camp and Picnic Trade Important.

During the hot weather there is a continual exodus from town to country for longer and shorter periods, and right here the wide-awake dealer has a good chance for securing extra and most profitable trade. By running a small advertisement in the local papers throughout summer announcing that you make a specialty of picnic hampers and camp supplies, you will do much toward securing a good share of the business, and in all probability the largest share if you can pack a hamper better than your competitor. What splendid chances the dealer has for unloading lemonade powders, etc., through this channel!

As a final word, we would add that every bottle of lime juice the druggist sells is profit taken away from the grocer. Reduce his sales and increase your own this coming season.

How Often Should the Stock Turn Over?

An Important Problem Discussed by Montreal Dealer—Distance From Source of Supply Enters Into Situation — Table Showing Different Profits on Same Investment Turned Over During Different Periods of Time.

"The question of how many times a dealer should turn over his stock," says F. C. Lariviere, a Montreal merchant, "cannot be governed by any rule. A store situated near sources of supply can do a much larger business with a small stock than one situated far from jobbing centres. This will be readily understood, as delays in transportation are more frequent on a long distance than a short one. I will give you a table which shows the profits realized in turning over the stock.

"Let us suppose an investment in stock of $100, and the margin of net profit equalling a percentage of 20 per cent. on cost, after having provided for the cost of doing business. If turned over five times during ten years, that $100 would produce $148.83 of net profit; if ten times during ten years, $510.16; if twenty times during ten years, $3,733.60, and if turned over forty times during ten years—or every three months—$146,870.74.

"You at once see the productive difference of each different operation. Consequently, it should be the aim of every merchant to try to keep a stock as low as possible, so as to increase the percentage of his turnover. You must also remember that it is far easier to increase a percentage of turnover in a small business than in a large business. The more the business grows, the larger the stock you must have, and this often includes a large number of lines which are slow sellers.

"I know of a firm, very close to source of supply, who with a stock of $3,500, made a turnover of $40,000, or very nearly eleven and a half times the stock on hand. Three years after they had a stock of $19,300, and made a turnover of $110,000, or 5.69 times. Seven years later the stock had increased to $67,000, and the turnover to $270,000, or a little over four times. Since then, it is a hard proposition to keep the stock and turnover between three and a half and four times, although the volume has long passed the $500,000 mark. In consequence I believe a firm doing a large business who can turn over four times the amount of stock carried is doing fairly well. It should be the aim of smaller businesses to turn over their stock from five to seven times to have more profitable returns on investments."

Grocer's Salary and Expenses Considered

Advice on Guarding Against Growing Liabilities—To Owe Is Worse Than Being Owed—Both Should Be Kept Within Limits —Another Financial Statement Criticised.

* By Henry Johnson, Jr.

Here again I am delayed in handling a grocer's letter:

————, Ont., Mar. 18, 1912.
Henry Johnson, Jr.
c|o Canadian Grocer.

Dear Sir,—Your criticism of my statement in last week's Grocer has been studied by me and I do not see that you have answered just the questions asked; but you were rather taken up with my expense account and that is the one thing that I think I have paid particular attention to. Interest and depreciation have always been charged up and the reason my fixture account still stands at $1,450 is because I feel that from the additions I have made it is a conservative figure. I have spent about $400 in fixtures and improvements in the three years, rather than the $50 you estimate.

Expenses in my case mean every 5c piece that it costs to run your business from interest and rent down to postage stamps and the broom you sweep the floor with. My expenses are kept separately, month by month, and the last item every month is Extras—$1.00 for good measure.

Everything is figured on the selling price and every dollar that comes over the counter is supposed to carry 20 per cent. profit, and about the only lines that I can think of that refuse to do their proper share are the butter and eggs. We get it on our sugar, 13 lbs. for $1 is what we are selling now. We never have sold 6 for a quarter soaps, and we avoid everything that won't pay a margin of 20 per cent. on the selling price, and last year according to my figures we made 19.22 per cent., and I thought we were doing rather well.

You evidently think that personally I am a little reckless in my expenditure, but I assure you you are wrong. My limit for last year and for this year, too, was $900, and this amount suffices me, although I carry some insurance that has to be paid out of that sum. The reason that my personal account was so high last year was that a sum of about $350 had to be taken for private reasons, having nothing to do with my personal account or way of living, but as it had to be accounted for somewhere I charged it to my personal account.

As to the savings account, I made up my mind from the first that I would get something out of the game besides a mere living, so I took out a $5,000 endowment and the business has to pay the premiums. Your plan is probably better but this one appealed to me.

What I particularly wanted from you was rather information regarding the figures I gave you for stock, fixtures, etc., compared with capital, bills, pay, and bank.

Are my bills payable too large? They are all current due and not due at that time. I might say that the bank is my only creditor. Was my capital large enough to swing a business of this size comfortably? Do I owe the bank too much? (They have never said so.)

My letter must be too long now, and I have said nothing about the delivery end of it, but we have that to contend with also and perhaps if necessary can go into that later, in the meantime I trust I have made my position a little clearer to you.

Yours, as you style me,
J————

More Information to go By.

In his previous letter, Mr. J——— failed to include much information which he has now given. I said so; and proceeded to do the best I could with what he had given. He asked two questions: "Is credit trade valuable?" and "Is this a normal condition, or is there something wrong?" I thought there were several things not quite normal and reviewed them so far as I could in the space at my command. Only the most striking things could be covered. I concluded that Mr. J——— was a bit "easy" in his personal expenditures. You see, I did not know of that special private matter, for he had not told me about that. In cases where the man himself is given to being a trifle lax, that is the primary, fundamental trouble. If it can be corrected, other troubles will be wiped out almost automatically; hence my reason for going after that so hard.

Same with the fixture account. What I was not told I had to guess at. Now he says that interest is figured, but, although he says that every 5c piece is included, he gives no details of expenses. So we are justified in questioning whether the "extras," in the sum of $1 may not be too little to cover what is not definitely given. A man may have a hobby on the expense account — and it is an excellent hobby to ride; but still he may be wrong about some things. The reason for reviewing accounts is not to find fault, nor yet to pat the accountant on the back; it is to confirm correct conclusions and correct errors.

Should be Above the Twenty.

The gross margin of 19.22 per cent. is certainly good; but it should be worked up to 21 per cent. as soon as possible—say 3-4 per cent. per year. Again, this statement seems to be confirmed by the figures, thus 6.62 per cent. net margin on $27,000 is practically $1,800. Mr. J—— said in former letter that his expense account includes everything but his personal account. Now he says he draws about $900 a year to which an unexpected item added $350. This makes a total of $1,250, and about tallies with the net profit he adds to his capital, $561—$1,250 and $561 making $1,811.

I am glad to know about the endowment policy. That was a wise move. As the business pays the premium, that is a measure of Business Insurance and good as far as it goes. A man has gone far when he knows his own weaknesses. If he cannot save money in the ordinary way, a good idea is to create an artificial debt, like an endowment policy, and save through paying that debt. This is the way I started to save; for years ago I learned that, while I could plan and work money, the money meant little to me after it was made. Then I acquired the habit of laying aside definite sums—the true method of saving for everybody. What J——— must now do is contrive to get ahead more than he is doing. That, I take it, is really what he wants to know about and the point on which he wants suggestions.

The Giving of Credit.

So let us take up his bills payable, his accounts receivable and what he owes the bank.

At the end of his first ten months of busines he had book accounts outstanding of $1,076.70 and liabilities of $1,700. At the end of 1911 he had book accounts of $2,453.03 and liabilities of $3,630.18. This shows too small a gain. In the first instance what was owing him equalled 63 1-3 per cent. of what he owed. In the second statement what was owing him equalled 66 2-3 per cent. of what he owed. I say the giving of credit it good, but there must be good judgment in its extension or it is not good. This point may indicate some want of sound judgment in extending credit, or it may not—this is for J——— to look into carefully.

SUMMER LEMON SITUATION

A limited quantity of new Verdelli lemons are now on the way to Canadian markets from the Mediterranean, and will arrive about the middle of the month. They are the summer lemons, and although rather thick-skinned, are sound and good shippers.

A feature regarding these lemons is that prices are very high; in fact, considerably above the earlier crop stock now on the market.

Of the lemons now being sold, there appears to be a fair quantity held at majority of centres. The situation is decidedly different to that ruling a year ago, when prices were at a record figure, in some cases nearly double the price now being asked. This was caused by extremely warm weather early in the summer, which reduced stocks to a low level, and first shipment of Verdelli lemons were badly needed.

Prices on Verdelli stock would indicate quite a high lemon market for summer. Much, however, depends on what the weather man hands out, as was shown last year, when under scorching weather, prices soared to record heights.

While Western Canada draws her stock mostly from California, values depend to some extent on the Verdelli situation, but perhaps even more on the weather.

AN INDEFINITE BY-LAW.

Four retail grocers were fined $20 each in St. John, N. B., recently on a charge of forestalling in the country market. At present there is a law prohibiting a dealer to purchase from a seller on the farmers' market any goods which have not been exposed for sale for at least three hours.

This is apparently an unfair and unjust by-law. How is anyone to know how long a farmer or gardener has been on the market! Does the dealer have to stop to ask him when he arrived? Would the farmer be in a position to reply truthfully if he were unfortunate enough not to possess a timepiece?

There is evidently some room for improvement here. In most towns and cities where there are restrictions on dealers as to market purchases, they are on a time of day basis. For instance, the municipal by-law prohibits a dealer buying from farmers on the market until after 10 or 11 o'clock, as the case may be. There is a definiteness in this which does not allow of unintentional law-breaking.

But in the case of the St. John by-law one might easily commit a breach of it unknowingly and have to suffer the penalty of a fine.

ON COST OR SALES, WHICH?

It is the claim of Chas. E. Stone, secretary-treasurer of Michie & Co., Toronto, that a large number of retailers are lead astray in their methods of figuring profits by the persuasions of some salesman calling on them.

For instance, a salesman will say to a dealer: "You will make 20 per cent. on this article. It costs you one dollar and you can sell it for $1.20." The dealer takes his word for it, and probably never discovers his error. As a matter of fact, it may cost him 15 or 20 per cent. to do business, thus reducing a supposedly good profit to practically nothing.

The only safe plan in calculating profits in advance is to figure them on sales, as well as cost of doing business.

Mr. Stone makes the latter point clear, when he points out that it costs him nothing to buy goods. He could do his buying over the telephone from his private house, for that matter; but it is when the goods are once in the store that they begin to advance in cost and the investment never ends until they are in the homes of consumers. It is, therefore, folly to figure expenses on invoice cost.

When it is intimated by certain salesmen that profits are based on invoice cost, dealers should protest. Many are now doing so, and it is helping in the struggle to secure fairer net profits to the man who has all the troubles of retailing and collecting on his shoulders.

A PROFITABLE SIDE LINE.

Many dealers throughout the country are making good profit out of a side line that can be handled with little trouble at this time of year. The line is hothouse plants for setting out in gardens.

In Toronto, for instance, a dozen boxes of certain plants can be purchased from green houses for 75 cents. Each contains a dozen plants and sells for 10 and 15 cents, those placing the price at the latter figure giving two for a quarter. Selling at 10 cents, the gross margin on a dozen is 45 cents or 37½ per cent. profit. At 12½ cents each, the margin would amount to 75 cents, or 50 per cent. on the turnover. The profits are therefore substantial.

Plants can be placed on an outside shelf without fear of injury from dust and besides setting off the store front are always to be seen. Dealers who have been pushing this side line find it turns into money rapidly, now that everyone with a garden in the back yard is engaged in brightening it up and growing a few vegetables for the table.

PREPARE FOR THE HOT WEATHER.

Summer is once again in our midst with its accompanying hopes and cares. It brings with it difficulties for the merchant, which should be taken in hand in advance. Chief among these are the handling of fruit, butter, eggs and other perishable goods.

Every effort should be made to keep the store in a sanitary condition. Unless this is attended to, there are bound to be losses which pull down turnover and profit. An investment in a refrigerator now will do a great deal to prevent these losses. At the end of the day any perishable goods held over can be stored in a cool, even temperature until morning.

Cellars should be kept dry, clean, wholesome and well lighted and ventilated. Goods stored in a damp, dirty, dark cellar are apt to become musty and unsalable. The back yard may need attention too. Any refuse or garbage lying about forms an excellent breeding spot for flies, and as these hatch in ten days, the fly pest is likely to cause trouble in the store. The windows should be kept free from dirt and dust and the sidewalk in front cleaned and sprinkled regularly. This produces a cool air, which is always inviting in hot weather.

Ventilation is also important. One sometimes wonders how men and women can work all day in a low, dark, hot store without fresh air. A dark, poorly ventilated room is slow death, and it would be much better for anyone to purchase a ten-acre country lot and market garden in the open air, rather than work under such unhealthy conditions.

With the experiences of the hot summer of 1911 to act as guide, ways and means should be devised by every merchant to overcome the inconveniences and difficulties usually attendant on sultry atmospheric conditions.

WEAK ROLLED OATS MARKET.

A decline of 15 cents per cwt. is announced this week in rolled oats. Our last week's market report indicated an easier feeling due to weak condition of the oat market, and to the fact that sales of rolled oats with warmer weather begin to drop off somewhat. This developed into the decline referred to above.

Early in April rolled oats reached $2.65 per 90-pound sack on a Toronto basis in small lots, which proved to be the highest price during the past year. The present figure on the same basis is $2.50, whereas a year ago the price was $2.25.

DOG FIGHT LOSES SALE.

What would you do if a customer's dog started a fight in your store with your own dog? What would be your attitude to the customer and her attendant?

One of The Grocer's representatives tells of a semi-humorous experience which has also a serious side, bearing on the questions. While he was in a grocery store in Western Canada recently a woman called to purchase a broom. The brooms were being shown in a rack at the front, and while they were being inspected, a small dog accompanying the customer, became the centre of attraction by jumping on the merchant's own dog. The latter soon saw fit to make a retreat into the store, but was still being hounded by the aggressor in the fight.

This was more than the good merchant could bear. With the aid of the broom he was attempting to sell, and some highly complimentary language to the invader, the latter was finally ejected from the store.

But by this time his temper had reached abnormal heights, resulting in some rather injudicious remarks on the folly and lack of common sense of anyone who would bring with him such a vicious bodyguard.

The natural effect of such a lecture was the immediate departure of the woman and her dog, but minus the broom. She wasn't going to have anyone kick her dog aroun'.

Did the merchant adopt the wisest course?

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The oftener the stock is turned over, the greater the profit on capital invested.

Lesson 17--Complete Course in Cardwriting

Demonstrating the Old Outline Roman as Used Previous to the Introduction of the Square End Brush and Still Used to Some Extent Where a Filled-in Letter is Preferable.

(By J. C. Edwards. Copyright Canada, 1911.)

Before the square end brush was introduced into cardwriting the brush outline letter was almost exclusively used in all the different styles from the heavy block to the dainty, fine, line script.

To-day it is seldom used, only for very fine work, where speed is no object.

Suggestions for show card illumination, executed with a small brush and made effective by the use of colors.

The Various Treatments.

The outline letter is treated in various ways, according to the effect desired. One style is outlining and filling in with the solid color, as is shown in the plate in black.

The colored letter with the black outline gives a desirable effect when used as a heading such as shown in the card, "An Easter Novelty." Another style is the bare outlined letter such as the P, R, S, T, U, V, W and X. This style, when shaded, as the word "style," in the small card, gives a pleasing touch to a showcard.

Care to be Taken.

In executing this letter, care must be exercised in always making a uniform stroke and never over-running, thus cutting off the spur, as has been done in some of the letters to demonstrate. Letters such as B, D, K and P show this, making it necessary then to cut the vertical lines short before the spur is reached, or as is shown in letter A, end or begin the stroke with the spur curve. Practice, of course, will teach you the best way to work up these details.

A Uniform Letter Face.

Another thing necessary when the letter is to show the outline, is to always leave a uniform space between the lines, i.e., the face of the letter. To do this it may be wise to outline the letter in pencil first before the brush or square pen is applied. It may also be advisable to use the T square to make sure the strokes are perfect. However, this is not necessary, if the letter is filled in solid the same as the outline.

The Pen or Brush to Use

In making a letter about 1½ inches high, a soennecken pen should be used that would give a stroke about 1-16 of an inch, or if a brush be used, which is preferable in most cases, a No. 3 or 4 red sable square end brush drawn down to a nice, small, square point, is the best. Some writers, however, use a red sable pointed brush, but it is difficult to bring a stroke to a square end when it is necessary. The brush used in the accompanying plate, as well as in the cards, was the former, and may be procured at any shop where the regulation size (No. 7) is kept. (Ask for No. 3 or 4 red sable in albata with square end).

To Fill in With Color.

As is shown in the plate, a very good effect is obtained by filling in the face of the letter on the wide strokes with color. This may be done in two different ways. One way is, first, to do the whole letter in the color, then make the outline in whatever color is desired, of course, being careful that the outline does not mix with the filler causing an endless amount of trouble. The outline should always be darker than the centre. The other way is to make the outline first, then run in the color afterwards. If letterine be used to make the outline, it is almost sure to dissolve into the color, so we advise using black Indian ink (waterproof) for the outline—on sale at all stationery stores.

Brush Stroke Decoration.

Practice with the brush the free hand scrolls and curves shown, and it will enable you to do some rather effective stunts in decorating a card. Practice will do anything. Always take a good sweep when practising, and don't be afraid to move quickly, for in speed your success lies when it comes to making scrolls. Get some old cardboard and practice till you become efficient.

Novelty Decorations.

The simple novelty decoration shown in the four small cards illustrated were done with the No. 4 brush used in lettering the plate and cards.

These scrolls and curves are easily made, and when applied in some dainty shade (not black) to a card gives a very pleasing change. Say, for instance, you take the ribbon design and make an outline of purple and fill it in with mauve, which is obtained by adding white to the purple. The letters should be outlined after, if they are to be left with the mauve centre, but if a white centre is desired, which we think would improve it, they should be outlined before the Ontario Grocers' Assistance Solicited

Executive of Newly Formed Provincial Organization Sending Out Letter to the Trade—Want the Platform Criticised—Desire to See Local Associations Formed—Services Being Tendered.

The Ontario Retail Grocers' Association are pushing forward their organization plans as rapidly as possible. Letters are coming into the secretary from retail grocers in various parts of the province declaring their interest in the new association and offering their services in the work. The new organization expects in the near future to have 500 or 600 paid up members. Toronto alone has 200, and with members of the London, Hamilton and Brantford local associations, as well as individual grocers in other centres added on, the membership will be quite imposing.

Circular Being Sent Out.

In a recent issue The Grocer published the platform of the association as laid down by the executive at Brantford, Ont. This platform has been printed in circular form and, together with the following letter, is being mailed to every grocer and general merchant in Ontario:

Dear Sir,—

As you are no doubt aware, the organization of the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association took place on Good Friday last, and at a subsequent meeting of the executive held two weeks ago, a platform was outlined as a basis of work for immediate atention.

Enclos d, you will find the different planks in the "Platform," which the association intend to primarily deal with. Every one is of vital interest to the retail grocer, and it is the object of the newly organized association, to assist in every way anything that will be for the promotion of the trade in general.

Your hearty co-operation is earnestly solicited.

Kindly study clause by clause and if you are interested in any, or think there are other important matters which this association should deal with, kindly make them known, when the matter will be taken up by the executive, if the matter so warrants.

Want Representative Body.

We are anxious to have representatives from every city, town, and village throughout the province and the secretary will be glad to receive the name or names of any grocers desiring to affiliate with the association. The fee is only $1 per year, and every grocer should help those who are striving to help them. If some grocer in your town would take the initiative and form a local association, the Ontario body would render him every possible assistance towards that end. The association will be pleased to hear from any grocer with regard to the enclosed circular re what we stand for.

Kindly forward us a list of all retail grocers in your town or locality.

Hoping to hear from you at an early date and trusting to have the pleasure of adding your name to our roll of membership, and assuring you of the best services which the association can render.

ONTARIO RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION, Incorp.

D. W. CLARK, President. W. C. MILLER, Secretary.

Want to Show Progress.

Secretary Miller expects to hear from many of the dealers with reference to local difficulties not mentioned in the policy of the executive. Work will be done on every plank by special committees during the year and reports of progress made public from time to time.

GROCER'S SALARY AND EXPENSES CONSIDERED.

Debts and Possessions.

But here is something much more serious. The first statement shows that J———'s debts equal 38.63 per cent. of his possessions; that he has an equity in his business of 61.37 per cent. The second statement shows that his debts equal 49½ per cent. of his possessions; that he now has only an equity of 50½ per cent. Whatever the explanation, and whether there is any explanation forthcoming, these look like facts, and as such, must be reckoned with and radically changed. I feel that I owe J——— a sincere apology for failing to make this analysis before; for here is the real serious matter. Still, I trust that what I did say and what I say now may together help to point the way out.

Note this further point: That an expense of 12.60 per cent. is fine—I do not see how it could be expected to be improved. Add 3 per cent. to cover the $900 J——— draws, and we have 15.60 per cent.—which is plenty. Last year there was $350 more, which would bring the total to nearly 17 per cent.; and that is too high.

Accused of Easy Going.

What to recommend. At the risk of making J——— think I am too insistent, I must repeat that I think he is just a bit too easy going. He buys too liberally. He is too liberal with credit and time. He must change those things around. The question about whether the capital was sufficient we must pass because we have not space; also because it does not matter now—the business is there and must be saved. There is margin enough left, provided the handling be very judicious; but J——— must put his shoulder to the wheel, face conditions, stop fooling himself in every way. Then he can win out.

Lessen Personal Requirements.

1st. Taking things as they have been, the earnings this year should be the same as last, at least. Thus we have J———'s $900 and, say, $900 more that we can count on. I urge J——— to cut down his own requirements to $800, $66.67 per month; less if possible. Then use the $1,000 remainder to reduce indebtedness, first by taking all discounts possible and, second, by reducing the bank loan.

2nd. Quit buying absolutely. That may sound peculiar, but it is feasible if you analize it properly. Buy from week to week in the smallest possible quantities. Scan the want book carefully and with ultra-conservatism. Buy not a thing until you simply MUST have it; and never buy a case if a dozen is enough; nor a dozen of anything which is slow-selling so that half a dozen will do. Postpone the purchase of the least item until your shelves are empty. Better send to your neighbors occasionally for a single item seldom wanted than carry it dead on the shelf. Stock can go down $500 to $800, or even $1,000 in this way. Avoid "futures." Remember that you can ALWAYS buy.

Stop Credit Extension.

3rd. Extend no more credit. Do not open another account except you do so to replace one you lose—and not then except with the most careful judgment. Insist on prompt payment. Make it a rule that your bills must be paid to you by the 10th of each month; and stop all doubtful accounts on that basis. You will have to sit up nights with some of this; but it is your only way out—your salvation. The book accounts can go down $500 to $700, I believe, without the reduction of the volume of business—practically — through prompt collections. Get to be a little hard-hearted about this.

In January, 1913, this treatment should see you down to a discount basis and the bank loan. Then we can talk for the future.

This is not too drastic. I know, having "been there." Write me for any further suggestions I can make. I shall handle the next letter more promptly. Yours for better things.

Current News of the Week

Quebec and Maritime Provinces.

E. Rodier, grocer, St. Johns, Que., has sold to M. Comtois.

T. L. Muir, Montreal, Que., has purchased the grocery business of Gervais Edmond.

The W. H. Scroggie, Limited, department store of Montreal, have decided to increase their capital to $2,000,000.

The movement in St. John and Fredericton, New Brunswick, for shorter hours of labor for clerks and dealers in grocery and in other establishments is on the increase, and not only are the clerks and many of the merchants of St. John agitating for the enforcement of the early closing enactment by the council, but their confreres in the capitol city are promoting the scheme of having a general cessation from work on Thursday afternoon of each week. There is every reason to believe that the suggestion of having Thursday a half-holiday in Fredericton will be adopted, as both merchants and clerks are in favor of it, but the endeavor is to make it unanimous. In order to emphasize their purpose the clerks of the city have formed an association and elected officers as follows: Honorary president, J. J. McCaffrey; president, N. Dougherty; vice-president, Alex. Staples; secretary, W. L. Jennings, and treasurer, Walter Burden. A committee of several of the members was formed to campaign in the interests of the half-holiday, and they secured the signatures of several of the merchants to their petition. The other clerks who co-operated with the officers in the movement were Arthur Crowley, F. P. Hatt, Arthur Porter, Bedford Green and James McMasters.

Ontario.

Trudel Bros., grocers, Ottawa, Ont., have succeeded E. Lafontaine.

R. J. Thomas, general merchant, Hartford, Ont., sustained loss by fire recently.

The new building will be of the mill-construction type, and will embody the latest ideas and conveniences for facilitating the grocery trade.

The grocers of London, Ont., closed their stores on Wednesday afternoon in honor of the visit of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught to the Forest City.

W. C. Miller, a Yonge Street, Toronto, grocer, is making good profits already out of summer drinks. He had a window display of mineral water, fruit vinegars, lemonade essence, lime juice, etc., during one of the recent hot spells which sold considerable of these goods. The bottles were placed on long strips of thick plate glass across the window and in stair form.

H. P. Eckardt & Co., wholesale grocers, Toronto, who recently completed 25 years in business, will build a six-storey brick warehouse on the north-east corner of Church Street and the Esplanade, to cost about $75,000 or $80,000. It will have a frontage of 133 feet on Church Street, with a depth of 103 feet on the Esplanade. It is the aim of the company to have the work rushed so they can vacate their present premises, 19 Frout St. E., by January 1.

Western Canada.

L. Tranks & Co., general merchant, Melville, Sask., is succeeded by R. Bay & Co.

Gerrard & Garnett, general merchants, Shellmouth, Man., have succeeded T. C. Gerrard.

A. W. Belsham, Carberry, Man., has added a fine soda water fountain to his store equipment.

Merchants in Grenfell, Sask., have agreed to close their stores on Wednesdays at 1 P.M. during June and July.

The Star Provision Co., Regina, Sask., have opened a new grocery store at 2175 Albert Street of that city. It is equipped with many modern fixtures.

The Dominion Milling Co. will build a 300-barrel flour mill, an oatmeal mill and two elevators at Melville, Sask. G. C. Yorke is managing director.

Thos. Connor has been appointed secretary of the Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association, to succeed R. D. Dinning. Mr. Connor for some time was in charge of the collection department. His assistant is C. H. Lee.

R. H. Brown, Sedgewick, Alta., and formerly of Bruce County, Ont., has received from the Dominion Government patent rights to a new grocery bin. It is a grocery store tilting bin, and according to the inventor is a counter-balanced receptacle that opens and closes automatically when thrown off the balance. It is airtight and dust-proof.

Latest Review of the Grocery Markets

Sugar Still Continues Easy at Last Week's Decline — Barbados Molasses are Stronger — General Firmness in Spices — Rice is Also Firm — First of New Pack Lobsters on Market — Foreign Beans Being Imported.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS.—
Barbados Molasses—Higher.
Valencia Raisins—Prices shaded.

Montreal, June 6.—Immediate sugar situation is rather hard to gauge, and differences of opinion are expressed regarding the future. Last week's decline of 10 cents brought refined locally down to $5.25 in bags, as compared with $4.60 one year ago.

Trade in all classes of groceries appears to be healthy and season is conceded by jobbers as showing a good opening.

Barbados molasses is a line that shows firmness this week, while there has been some shading on prices to stimulate demand for lower grade Valencia raisins.

SUGAR.—Market on the average is on the weak side, following recent decline as forecasted in previous issues. Still constant fluctuations make it difficult to give any definite opinion as far as the next week is concerned, as some of the shrewdest operators are convinced that the lowest price of the season has now been reached.

The rainy season in Cuba has now commenced, and this, of course, means a reduction in the grinding. So far the Cuban revolt has had little effect on the sugar industry, although it is reported that one central has had to close down as a result of the hostilities of the rebels.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.—There are not any changes to note in syrup quotations, the trade being heavier than usual, but an appreciable increase has taken place in Montreal district for choice Barbados, the rise being due to a shortage following on an exceptionally good demand. Barbados exported more cane than molasses this year, and it must be remembered that the latter is still a cheap food, present prices notwithstanding.

DRIED FRUITS.—In order to stimulate the demand for the lower grades of Valencia raisins, the minimum price has been shaded considerably and more orders are now expected. Tarragona almonds are not very brisk, but no further concession from holders need be expected, as they have been lowered considerably of late.

The currant market in Greece has become somewhat easier, but buyers should not count much on a decline, as a leading importer authoritatively states that the amount of currants held now in Greece is not enough to meet current requirements, and that a better market may be expected shortly.

Indeed, the general conditions point to continued activity as stocks are not extra heavy throughout the trade, and orders are being placed in advance for fall requirements.

COFFEE. — We are pretty safe in stating that nothing but Providence can bring about a reduction in prices within the next year. If the new crop is a large one, things will be more satisfactory, but even now there are conflicting reports about the possible quantity, some stating that there has been a good flowering, others claiming that the weather has been against good flowering, and that as a result the crop will be a short one. Nothing beyond a healthy crop can have any effect on prices, because if the U.S.A. do get authority to confiscate the valorisation coffee, the Brazilian Government naturally can get an injunction forbidding any confiscation pending an appeal to a higher court. Experience has shown just how long it takes to reach the highest court decision, step by step, and it would seem, therefore, that instead of ameliorating conditions, the action against the Brazilian interests is making matters worse. Of course, one can readily see why the U.S.A. are so keen on breaking the trust, when it is considered that one-third of the 2½ billion pounds of coffee distributed throughout the world annually is consumed by our Yankee friends.

TEAS.—A cable from Japan dated May 28, asked an advance of 1 cent to one and a half on grade over 22c. With regard to Indian teas, indications are that prices will remain steady for the next few months, as most of the season's stock has been disposed of, and unless the new season's crop comes along early prices may harden up.

With regard to Ceylon tea, the position is somewhat different. The drought experienced during the earlier months of the year, is over: the rains in Ceylon are falling earlier than usual; recent advices show improved yields and shipments from Colombo to the United Kingdom for April are nearly 1,000,000 lbs. higher than in April of 1911; estimates for May also show a further probable increase. Should such prove to be the case, there will be a good supply of Ceylon tea suitable for general purposes, which will tend to keep prices on a parity with those ruling throughout the past month.

Toronto, June 5.—The first month of summer, as the family calendar calls it, has got off to a good start. We speak of the grocery trade as summed up by local jobbers. Already there has been a decided movement of summer goods, but warmer weather more along the lines of that prevailing a year ago would work for a much better demand from the public for these lines.

Retailers would do well to give prominence to those lines in demand, especially during the warm weather. Salmon will be a good selling line, because at this time of the year there is not a great quantity of fresh fish available, while the fact that it needs no cooking makes it even more so a favorite. The same may also be said of other lines of canned goods.

SUGAR.—Last week's decline of 10 cents in refined brought local prices down to $5.35, compared with $4.70 a year ago. Market is easy at the decline, raws having continued weak under disinterest shown by refiners as to purchasing, as well as other weakening factors. While there is some difference of opinion expressed as to probability of a further decline, still the fact that market is weak is apparent. For this reason there is no big buying movement, although there is a good seasonable demand which should continue, as stocks are generally low, and preserving season not far distant.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.—There is not as great general interest in molasses in Ontario as some of the other provinces. A good deal of trade is in canned articles, although bulk receives attention also. There is a general firm attitude to molasses, especially Barbados. On account of wide variation in quality, it is quite difficult to get an exact line on prices. Quality ranges from extra fancy down to that sold for feeding to cattle. Lowest price for grocery grades appears to be around 26 cents per gallon. One firm quotes 25 to 28 cents on what they term "West-Indies." There is a seasonable trade in both maple and corn syrups.

DRIED FRUITS.—"How are prices on dried fruits keeping?" one jobber was asked.

"It doesn't make much difference," was his reply. "There isn't much trade at any price. However," he continued, "I believe there is a little better movement of late, but more through mining and construction camps than retail trade. Retailers loaded up pretty heavy last fall, and many of them have not been in the market since, except on an odd line." There were, however, more optimistic views on trade voiced by other jobbers.

Spot prunes appear to have about struck bottom. Fancy figs verge on a clean-up, only a couple of houses carrying even depleted stocks. Dates are not plentiful. Evaps. are getting into quite small compass.

Brokers report more interest here in future prunes. It appears from present indications that large sizes will be inclined to scarcity this year.

Currants on primary market have been somewhat easy, due to marked general inactivity and fine weather favoring progress of new crop causing growers to show a stronger disposition to clean. "The carry over will not be large," says a report from Patras, Greece, "while stocks abroad are light, those in England being about 4,000 tons smaller than last year. One should not feel too optimistic regarding new crop. Crop may yet suffer damage such as was the case last year in early days of August." There is no particular change in local situation.

TEA.—Speaking generally, tea market pursues the even tenor of its way without material change in the situation, although steadiness continues both here and on primary markets.

COFFEE.—A steady tone continues in local coffee market. One firm quotes Maricaibo 1 cent higher. "Maricaibo should be worth 1 cent more than Santos," they say. "Santos is also looking up," was another remark.

Some coffee men say they are not particular whether they selly any of their standard brands or not, contending that they are losing money on them.

"Why don't you raise the price then?" one coffee man was asked.

"Well," he answered, "manufacturers appear to be afraid of one another."

"Some firms will not raise their price and accordingly, others can't very well," said another.

"The cost of one brand to us," stated one man, " has increased from 22 to 27 cents, but we are only able to get 2 cents above old price. It cuts our profits pretty fine."

SPICES.—Demand for spices during spring months has been quite satisfactory to local wholesalers. The pickling season is already looming large, and already there has been quite a decided move in anticipation of this trade. Pickling commences in August.

General steadiness prevails on spice markets. Mace is much stronger, and local quotations have been extended five cents per pound. Although unchanged locally, allspice is steadier, having advanced 1 to 1½ cents on primary markets. Cream Tarter fluctuates after the fashion of a spring thermometer, but is firmer at moment. Black pepper is creeping up, while strength in white is even greater. Celery seed continues steady after its spectacular advance, having doubled in value in about two months. Both caraway and cardramon seed, which are of more interest with approach of pickling season, are firm. Indeed, whole spice market in general is stronger.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.—Rice markets in general are firm. Rangoon has been showing marked strength, and reports from primary market note an excited situation with advances almost daily. English market is also reported excited and advancing.

Market in Siam continues firm, and paddy rice is dearer. Government has not yet, however, taken expected step of prohibiting rice exports. Late advices from Japan say that price has reached a record figure, and Government has ordered the Rice Exchange at Tokio to be closed.

There have been adverse reports from China, but Shanghai advices say famine will be relieved almost immediately and with approaching new crops position is much brighter in that country.

A normal trade is passing in rice.

BEANS.—Canadian beans are still available at a record price, but they are by no means plentiful. To supply the demand foreign beans are being imported. Some Hungarian will arrive shortly while Austrian are on the way. They will sell cheaper than Canadian article, one local jobber quoting Hungarian at $2.60 per bushel. As soon as it became known that Canada wanted beans, shippers in these countries began to assume firmer ideas, and are now asking higher than their first quotations.

PEELS.—There is little or no demand for peels just now, but interest is being shown in this year's pack. As pointed out in these columns before, prices this year are going to be above last year's. One house quote for fall delivery, lemon at 13 cents, orange at 13½ and citron at 19½. "Those prices are for finest quality dripped," they commented. "There are probably lower prices being quoted on other grades."

First shipments will begin to come along in September.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—The advance shipments of this year's pack of lobsters were received by a number of wholesalers this week. They were badly needed, as stocks have been small for a long time, some houses being completely cleaned up. "We could have sold a good many thousand more cases if we had had them," said one canned goods broker.

Only ½'s have been received as yet. They are being sold at $3.00. Later shipments will sell at $2.85 for ½'s, and $1.55 for ¼'s. This is compared with last year's opening price of $2.45 and $1.50.

There is no particular change in other lines. Salmon prices are well maintained. Shading is still being done in peas. Corn is selling at 97½ to $1.00.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Raisins and Currants—Dearer.

Sugar—Cheaper.

Winnipeg, June 5.—With the splendid growing weather of last week and optimistic reports of growing crops, business conditions are most satisfactory throughout the country.

In the city conditions are good, a large amount of skilled and unskilled labor is under employment at remunerative wages, and reduction of fuel bills gives workmen more money to spend on comforts. There is no indication of any serious labor disputes in Manitoba, but conditions in this regard are unsettled in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Collections have much improved in May, and money market is reported to be well supplied. Plenty of capital is available for legitimate enterprise.

Currants and raisins are somewhat dearer than when last reported, and sugar is down 10 cents per cwt.

SUGAR.—A further reduction of 10 cents. per cwt. is reported this week. With commencement of the preserving season, there is a good demand which will improve as summer advances. Market is considered weak.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, June 6.—Both retail and wholesale trade last week were greatly retarded by heavy rains, and disagreeable weather but the slackness now being experienced is expected to be replaced with increased business on approach of finer weather. The market has offered little in way of new features, chief change of interest being the weakening of sugar. The decline of 10 cents per cwt. in refined last week was followed by another reduction of a similar amount early part of this week.

Encouraging harvest conditions in Europe and Cuba, it is said here, have led to drop in price. It seems rather strange in contrast that molasses has strengthened instead of weakening with the decline in sugar but such is the case and fancy Barbadoes is now firmer, with word to the effect that stocks in that country are about finished and it is practically impossible to procure more. During the past week there have been many heavy receipts of molasses in this port but even with increased stock prices has advanced.

Flour remains about the same with advices from west to effect that in spite of damage and losses during past winter the crop will be well up to the average of last year or two.

That the local trade might have to depend upon foreign suppplies for beans was the opinion voiced by a St. John wholesaler this week, so scarce have stocks become. Reports from Ontario are that there are none to be had there.

A slump in potatoes has taken place in country market, and they have dropped in price from 25 to 50 cents, now selling as low as $2 and $2.25, with some of better grades at $2.50. Many farmers with the opening of navigation brought stocks to city which they had been holding back and the market being thus relieved, prices dropped.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, June 6.—Business continues good in local grocery lines. Wholesalers are sending out satisfactory orders, and collections are fully up to average. In some lines such as hams, bacon and lard, prices are firmer, each having been marked up one half cent per pound.

Sugars are only in fair demand. The price is easier on all grades. Extra standard is quoted at $5.40, and United Empire $5.20. Bright yellow is quoted at $5.20, No. 1 yellow at $4.90, and unbranded at $4.85. One cargo of sugar from West Indies was landed here this week, and another is expected early next week.

There is no change in flour and feeds. Demand is fair for season.

FINED FOR FORESTALLING.

St. John, N. B., June 6.—(Special)—The law aginst forestalling in the country market was put into effect this week in the case of four local dealers. They were reported and called to appear in the police court on this count. After having pleaded guilty, they said there was no way of knowing how long the goods in the market had been exposed for sale, and they made some suggestions as to how the law could be remedied. Each of them was fined $20.

At present it is prohibitive for a grocer or other dealer to purchase from a countryman in the market any goods which have not been exposed for sale for the space of three hours. There is much opposition to the by-law among dealers, who claim that it is unfair to them, and there is talk of their testing a case in court, uniting in the support of counsel, etc.

LESSON XVII.—SHOW CARD WRITING.

mauve is added to the background. Experience is a good teacher—try it.

An Odd Touch.

An effect seldom used, but very effective, is the one shown in the Easter card.

The lettering is made first, then by the aid of a mechanical device known as a ruling pen, the lines of white or any other light shade may be made across the face of the letter. Fasten the card firmly on a drawing board with thumb tacks at the angle desired, and by the aid of the T-square, which is held firmly by the left hand against the edge of the board, making parallel lines at intervals, giving a broken or gray effect.

This is the first introduction in the course of the drawing boards and thumb tacks and ruling pen, and except for such work as the above mentioned they are seldom used, and these are substitutes, thus avoiding the necessity of buying them, although thumb tacks are inexpensive and obtainable at all book stores.

In the Easter card shown the decorations are pasted on and colored with transparent water colors.

For further information re pens, outfits, etc., write to the editor, The Canadian Grocer, 143 University Avenue, Toronto.

Pines and Strawberries Selling Well

Appear to be Favorite With Consuming Public at Present Time —Preserving Season for Pines in Full Swing — Strawberries Show a Gradual Easing—Verdelli Lemons on the Way—Looks Like High Summer Market for Lemons.

Pineaapples and strawberries are favorites at present time and sales are running into goodly figures. Watermelons from Florida and cherries from California are some of the fancy fruits which are being taken up well. In vegetables, there is quite an extensive list of new goods, all of which are coming in for their share of attention. Holiday at first of week instilled more life into demand for fruits and vegetables. While warmer and brighter weather is having a general beneficial effect on trade.

Pineapple preserving season is now in full swing and as prices are fairly reasonable and flavor is good, they are being pushed strongly for this purpose. Prices at primary points show no great variation. Florida is shipping out some stock but this will not get much attention here while Cubans are to be had. Cubans will probably last another couple of weeks. As prices become more reasonable larger sizes come into greater demand.

Strawberries are selling well, prices showing a gradual easing. No Canadian berries have appeared yet, season being close on two weeks behind last year, but advance samples should soon be coming forth. Tomatoes are firm at present, Florida being practically cleaned up. Texas and Mississippi will be next to come along and they look like a fair crop. Opening naturally will be a little high.

A limited quantity of new Verdelli lemons are now on the way and will arrive about middle of month. Prices are very high, in fact considerable higher than price being asked for earlier crop lemons now on the market. There appears to be a fair supply of earlier crop lemons. A year ago situation was decidedly different, hot weather of early summer having cut lemon stocks extra low and first Verdelli shipment was badly needed when it arrived. High prices at which Verdelli are being held would indicate a high summer market. Weather is, however, a big factor in determining values.

California will probably start shipping Valencia oranges about July 1. Navels, however, are not finished and are in good supply and cheap, although a little firmer end of last week. Dry pulp of navels is apparently hurting business somewhat.

MONTREAL.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS.— There is a good volume of business in fruits. The King's birthday was responsible for some little stir in this department while brighter and warmer weather is adding impetus to trade.

Pineapples and strawberries now occupy the centre of the stage and large quantities are being disposed of. Pines are easier. Larger sizes sell best as prices become lower. Strawberries are of good quality, coming from farther north and going out to the trade at 13 to 14 cents.

Bananas are selling well. Grape fruit is well to an end and same is true of apples, even fancy varieties being next to a clean up. New Verdelli lemons will arrive during month. Prices will be high.

VEGETABLES.— With the extensive array of new and tempting vegetables on market, a substantial trade is in evidence. There are easier prices on a number of lines including beets, carrots and cabbage. Cucumbers are an exception, being scarce and high at present. Market varies considerably, depending on supply and demand.

New potatoes are cheaper at $6.75 to $7 per barrel. Some supplies will now be coming from Virginia. Florida tomatoes are about done, but Texas and Mississippi will now be coming on. Opening will be high but reasonable a little later. Hot house tomatoes are coming in regularly now at 21 cents per pound. Cauliflower are arriving from the south, bringing $2.50 basket.

Fruit and Vegetable Display, showing the advantages of regularity in arrangement of goods.

New Recipes Frequently Assist Sales

A Method for Serving Pineapple a Little Different from the Ordinary—Use it to Increase Sales of Pines—A Fruit and Vegetable Window Arranged in Neat Manner.

Women are continually on the lookout for new ways of preparing desserts. A pudding or a pie recipe is usually given more attention than an election campaign. There are few housewives who have not some sort of file in the pantry for doing things out of the beaten path, and they welcome anything new.

If the dealer can at any time connect up a display with a new recipe, he invariably will find good sales.

Serving Pineapple From Shell.

This is pineapple season. Pineapples are now being used in large quantities for dessert. They are in majority of cases peeled and sliced in the old stereotype style. Why not present something new—may be familiar to you but new to many customers.

Here is a method for preparing the pineapple for dessert:

Cut off the top a short distance below the stems. With a large strong spoon dig out the pulp and liquid from the pineapple, placing it in a dish. A little care is required, so that holes are not punched in the side. Dig around the stem, and when it gets in the way, cut it off with the spoon. When all the pulp and juice has been extracted, sugar it to suit and empty it back into the shell of the pineapple. If desired, strawberries, orange, etc., can be mixed with it. Place the top back in place again, and serve from the shell.

This method wastes little juice, since there is no peeling to cut away. As the pulp is dug out with the spoon, it is not in thick, hard pieces, and therefore easily masticated.

A grocer ought to be able to sell considerably more pineapple by having this recipe printed, and advertising that a copy will be given to purchasers of this fruit at his store. The idea of serving pineapple a new way will appeal to the housewife.

Practically every dealer these days is displaying fruit in the window. The majority, however, do not give any special attention as to how it is arranged, merely placing a few pines here, some oranges there and a box or two of strawberries somewhere else. This is not attractive, and as an advertisement isn't of much use.

A Symmetrical Trim.

The accompanying fruit and vegetable arrangement shows a symmetrical window trim of an attractive character. Oranges are placed down the centre and at either side. These are built up carefully like piles of logs. Between the oranges are pineapples, similarly arranged, with boxes of strawberries on the inside flanks. Cucumbers and asparagus are also shown in relatively same positions on either side, carrying out the idea of regularity. The entire display is backed up by bananas, inverted in bunches. This is a compact, attractive and good selling display and could be duplicated with profit.

Rolled Oats Decline 15c. Per Sack

In Sympathy With Easier Trend to Market—Price Previous to Decline Highest for Past Twelve Months—Demand Rather Quiet While Same is Also True of Flour—Export Flour Trade Quite Dull.

Rolled oats, following the prediction of last week, are down 15 cents per sack. This is in sympathy with market for raw material, which has been exhibiting an easier turn of late.

At the reduction rolled oat prices are 25 cents per sack above those ruling a year ago. On account of short production of oats last year, prices have been generally high since last crop, although a price-cutting war in middle winter brought a slump in market. Previous to recent decline, prices were at the highest point of past twelve months. High point was reached in early April.

Demand for rolled oats is on the whole rather dull at present time, and will probably continue so for next couple of months. This is the usual course, according to millers. During warm weather demand is not so large, while retailers like to keep stocks in small compass during hot weather. Approach of new crop is another reason why retailers do not care to book for more than immediate wants.

Bran is unchanged from the reduced price of last week, which was brought about by let up in demand, as cattle are now out on pasture. Shorts are unaltered, however, and demand is still maintained. They are in good request at this season, as feed for young pigs and calves.

Flour shows no particular change, but both spring and winter wheat grades are reported as maintaining a fair tone of steadiness. Retailers are apparently carrying quite substantial stocks for season, and demand is rather inclined to quietness. Export trade is reported decidedly dead.

Canada's visible supply of wheat is 12,950,000 bushels, last week it was 16,-030,000, and last year 5,663,000 bushels. The supply of oats is 5,882,000 bushels; last week it was 6,969,000 bushels.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR. — There is no particular change in either Manitoba or winter wheat flour, but values continue fairly steady.

Trade is rather inclined to quietness, not an unusual thing at this time of year. Retailers are apparently holding fair stocks.

Export business is decidedly dull.

CONDENSED MILK CO. CHANGES.

A Canadian company has been organized operating under a Dominion charter, under style of Borden Condensed Milk Co., Limited, to take over the interests in Canada on June 1st, of Borden's Condensed Milk Co., St. Charles Condensing Co., and Reindeer Limited. According to the officials the Canadian company has been formed for the purpose of facilitating the handling of business involved. The change of proprietorship, they state, is largely one of name only, as it is a well known fact that the Borden people for years have been the owners of all the stock of St. Charles Condensing Co., and have for some time had control of the business of Reindeer, Limited. The headquarters of the new company will be in Montreal with the condenseries at Ingersoll and Tillsonburg in Ontario; Huntingdon, Quebec, and Truro, N.S.

The brands of former companies will be retained and there will not likely be any very radical change in the selling policy.

Lobster Fishing is Extended Ten Days

In Nova Scotia—Supposed to End on June 1—Catch on Cape Breton Coast Reported Good—Fish Demand Continues Seasonable—One Nova Scotia Firm Sends 27 Carloads of Fish to Western Canada Last Week—Shows Extent of Industry.

There is a seasonable trade in fresh fish reported, while smoked varieties appear to be coming in for their share of attention. White fish and trout are favorites in demand. Halibut, cod and haddock are in good supply, but salmon has been scarce and continues high. Mackerel is now coming on market, and in good condition for so early in season. Shad fishing is none too encouraging.

The lobster fishing season in Nova Scotia is supposed to end on June 1, but this year the Fisheries Department has extended the season for ten days. There was also an extension of two weeks given last year on the west coast. Catch on Cape Breton coast at latest report was quite good, and factories have been busy. Storms caused considerable damage to fishermen's gear on west coast last week.

Something of the extent of the fish industry can be gleaned from the fact that one Nova Scotia firm last week received an order from the Canadian West for 27 carloads of assorted fish. It shows that the consumption of fish is large and that the West is a big customer.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—There is a good trade passing, and supplies are coming along freely, there being no sign of any increase in prices so far. Lake trout is in good demand, but is not over-plentiful.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.—Supply of gaspereaux is a feature of fresh fish market which is causing much interest here, as it is keeping up in large quantities much longer than expected. Shad fishing, however, is none too encouraging and unless it changes for better before long, there is little hope of an abundant supply. Present shad prices are from 20 to 25 cents retail.

Only a few salmon have been placed on market thus far, and that at high prices, but after this week feeling is that they will be received in better quantities. From 25 to 35 cents is being asked for salmon. The first to be caught in the river at Indiantown this week was captured and placed on display in fish department of W. H. Dunham, grocer of North End. It weighed 27 pounds and attracted quite a share of attention.

All grades of fresh fish have been scarce and high of late. Halibut is bringing eight cents wholesale and fifteen retail. Now that gaspereaux are plentiful, demand for haddock has fallen and the price asked for the latter is from 3 to 5 cents. On account of poor catch last season dry fish are high and prices remain stationary.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—Local fish markets are now active. Mackerel have struck in along the coast, and some small catches were made during week in vicinity of Prospect. These fish are large, and in excellent condition for so early in season.

Lobsters continue in good supply and demand is active. Price varies according to size, some of the large lobsters selling at 40 cents apiece, while smallest ones fetch ten cents. Catch on Cape Breton coast is good. Some fishermen there are selling them to factories for $4 per hundred. Storms during week have destroyed a lot of fishermen's gear on western shore. Fisheries Department has extended season for ten days, which will be beneficial to those engaged in industry.

During past week one large firm received an order from the Canadian West for 27 carloads of assorted fish. This is one of the largest orders ever received in the East, and gives some idea of the extent of the Western market, and the rapid expansion of the fisheries industry.

A new fish company to be known as the Piscatorial Appetizers, has been incorporated with a capital of $50,000. The incorporators are P. J. Harrifen, H. G. Howard, and J. Walker, all of Halifax. They will engage in a general fish business.

To Give Address on Cost of Doing Business

Part of Programme for Next Meeting of Grocers' Section R. M. A., Toronto Branch—Officers Elected for 1912—New Members for R. M. A.—Resolution Carried.

Toronto, June 3.—The regular monthly meeting of the Grocers' Section of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, Toronto branch, was held on Monday evening, May 27th, in the board room of the association, 21 Richmond Street West. Some interesting subjects came before the meeting.

The following officers were elected for the coming year:

E. C. Matthews, chairman; J. Simpson, 1st vice-chairman; F. Spooner, 2nd vice-chairman; F. L. Giles, treasurer; F. C. Higgins, secretary; H. A. Tubb, auditor.

Enrolling New Members.

M. Moyer, chairman of the grocers' section of the association for the province of Ontario, addressed the meeting, and reported that during his visits among the grocers in various parts of the province he had met with a great deal of encouragement, and had succeeded in enrolling a large number of new members.

He urged upon the retail grocers the necessity of standing shoulder to shoulder with their fellow retail merchants in all lines of retail trade throughout Canada. He stated that his experience as a retail grocer had proved to him that only by doing so could the grocery trade hope to be protected from trade abuses, that at all times creep into the commercial community.

After considerable discussion, the following resolution was unanimously carried:

"That it is the opinion of this meeting that our special grocery trade interests and the general welfare of the great body of retail grocers has been and can be better taken care of and protected by being a 'Grocers' Section' and forming a part of the great federation of 'The Retail Merchants' Association of Canada' than by attempting to have our interests taken care of through an isolated single line grocers' association.

"We believe that only in retail unity can there be strength and that experience has proven to us that in order to defend ourselves against unfair trade abuses or unfair Dominion or Provincial legislation, that we must stand shoulder to shoulder with our fellow retail merchants and maintain 'The Retail Merchants' Association of Canada,' with its Provincial and Dominion boards, and their equipped offices and staff, and that we cannot afford to weaken our united forces by being divided into separate camps or single one-line associations.

"We further believe that each section of retail trade should have the same relationship to 'The Retail Merchants' Association of Canada' as Canada and the other British colonies have to the British Empire.

"And whereas the association having secured legislative rights whereby they can protect the entire retail trade, we now strongly urge upon the officers of the 'Grocers' Section' to put the same into operation and ask every retail grocer to assist us."

At the next meeting F. C. Higgins was requested to read a paper on "The cost of doing business," and what percentage grocers should add to the cost of their goods in the average retail grocery store. This address was given this week and will appear in the next issue.

Considerable discussion took place on the resolution passed some time ago opposing the practice of wholesale grocers selling consumers direct, and an invitation was extended to E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Dominion board, to be present at the next meeting, and address the meeting on the subject: "What can we do with the wholesaler or manufacturer who sells goods direct to our customers?"

A vote of thanks was tendered to the retiring officers and M. Moyer for his attendance.

Wealth Derived from Tobacco Growing

Essex and Kent Farmers Better Able to Meet Their Payments and Merchants Reap Benefits—Value of 1911 Tobacco Harvest in These Counties Estimated at $1,700,000—Lower Acreage Expected This Year But Better Quality.

Leamington, Ont., June 6.—Prospects point to a somewhat smaller acreage in tobacco this year in comparison to 1911. This, however, will likely result in more attention beingp aid by farmers to this crop, and hence a better quality leaf all round, is anticipated. As the tobacco companies pay according to quality farmers in Essex and Kent counties should this year make even more money than last.

W. T. Gregory, manager at Leamington for the Imperial Tobacco Co., states that the 1911 crop was the largest on record, more than double the yield of any previous year. It is estimated that it amounted to 15,000,000 pounds and farmers received no less than $1,700,000. The high price was 12½ cents per pound which every farmer admits means a good profit.

The addition of $1,700,000 to any district means a big increase in the general wealth. The result is to be seen in mortgages paid off, more money spent among the retail merchants, easier collections, better farm buildings, and bigger bank balances.

It will therefore, be seen that the production of tobacco in Western Ontario is enormous. The question naturally arises, to what extent can this be increased with a market to some extent limited. The answer appears to be that the tobacco growing industry will eventually come to its proper place, namely, as a business not to be undertaken, except by those who are prepared to grow the best tobacco and house it properly. This means that a lot of people who have been growing it as a side line, and giving it little attention, will either quit it or else become proper growers.

Like everything else in these advanced times, quality is evidently required in the growing of tobacco.

Produce & Provisions

Shrinkage Already Causing Loss in Eggs

So That Although Values in Country are Easier, City Retailer Pays Just as Much—Receipts are on Liberal Scale—Undertone of Easiness in Butter—Demand From West Has Kept Eastern Decks Clear.

Complaints are already being voiced by wholesalers from different centres of loss in eggs through shrinkage, which appears to be quite large for time of year. This generally increases to larger proportions as weather becomes warmer, but no doubt could be considerably reduced if proper precautions were taken by country merchants who ship eggs. Candling of supplies as received is necessary, followed by proper care of stock before and during shipment.

Quality of bulk of present receipts is said to be only fair. For this reason, although easier values are being paid in the country on account of this loss, prices to city retailers have shown little reduction. Receipts continue to show a quite substantial increase, but a good demand is balancing this to some extent. Some storing is being done, although weather will soon be a little warm.

As far as actual quotations are concerned, there has been little change in butter, but there appears to be an undertone of easiness. Prices are now above normal, and situation resolves itself simply into a question of supply and demand. Receipts in East have been increasing, but a demand from Canadian West has kept decks clear. West should shortly be able to care for her own wants, while excellent pastures should work for a general good production. June butter is considered as desirable for storing, but as one wholesaler remarked, "at the right price."

Generally speaking, new cheese has held fairly steady during past week, although slight waverings are reported from an odd centre. Just at this time a number of factories change from butter to cheese, and as other conditions continue favorable, a larger production of cheese this month than last June is expected by some in the trade. Old cheese maintains a strong front.

POULTRY.—With a number of the large trans-Atlantic liners in port every week, trade has brightened up, and quite a good volume of business is being done.

HONEY.—Trade is not up to the mark of last year, but at this time honey is not consumed to any great extent. All comb varieties are practically exhausted, while white clover should be a little cheaper.

PROVISIONS.—Another ½ cent advance in smoked hams is made by several firms this week. Heavy mess pork is quoted at $20 to $20.50 per barrel. General tone of pork products is steady, with smoked and cooked meats coming into greater prominence.

Live hogs are easier, ranging about $8.15 at country points this week. Delivery is a little freer, while packers who are fairly well supplied for moment think that prices were boosted a little higher than was really warranted.

BUTTER.—Quotations on butter remain about as a week ago, but there is an easier undertone. Demand from the West has continued longer than anticipated, but is expected to ease up at any moment. There has been plenty of rains, pastures are in an excellent condition, and there should be a big production of butter during month. June butter is considered desirable for storage purposes, but dealers say prices must come down before that will be possible.

EGGS.—As announced last week there was an easier feeling in prices paid in the country, but this has been balanced up by loss through shrinkage, so that there is little difference in the price being asked the city retailer. "We are paying lower prices in the country," said one dealer, "but the amount of shrinkage makes the cost to us just as large."

With warmer weather loss through this source generally increases. The weather is getting a little warm for storing eggs, but some are still being disposed of in this way.

Receipts are large and undertone of market somewhat easier.

Butter Price Changes in Past Three Years

Figures Show Some Interesting Similarities — Highest Point Each Year Reached in Early April—In 1910 and 1911 Prices Were Well Maintained Through Summer Months.

The difference between the high and low point of butter in past five months has been much greater than during the same period of recent years. The high point reached by creamery in Montreal since the first of the year was 38½ cents. The low point was 28½, showing a total variation of 10 cents per pound.

Another interesting fact is that butter has ranged much higher than for several years. As stated before the high point for creamery in Montreal during past five months was 38½ cents. In 1911 the highest point reached during the same period was 27½, a full 11 cents difference.

Similarity in High Prices.

In 1910, it went as high as 33 cents and a peculiar coincidence is that the high point during past three years has been reached at practically the same date—during the first week of April.

Dairy has followed the trend of creamery pretty closely as is shown by the following comparative prices of first six months of past three years:—

Heat Checked Drop.

The history of butter prices during past year makes quite an interesting study. Just one year ago under the influx of the new make, prices were on the tumble. However they did not make any drastic drop, for quite early in the summer the pastures began to show the effect of severe heat, the flow of milk lessened and make of butter followed suit. Not only was this true in our own country but in all the butter producing countries of the world. So the fall was commenced with prices above normal, small stocks held general and prospects of record prices being reached before another season had arrived.

The April Record.

Nor did prices fail to follow the fall predictions. When 1911 arrived values were already above normal but as the year advanced, stocks grew into smaller compass and prices soared. The climax was reached in early April when creamery at Montreal registered 38½ cents. Then with the new make commencing to put in its appearance, prices shaded in the other direction, there being a decided slump during the month, which, however, dealers were prepared for as purchasing had been in small lots for some time before.

Butter has not yet reverted to normal. Creamery in Montreal is 6½ cents above a year ago and 3½ cents above two years ago. There is a reason for this. The new make this year came on a market decidedly bare and so was badly needed. Besides this the season was somewhat backward, holding back the production considerably while scarcity of supplies in some sections, particularly the West, kept decks clear at other centres and steadied the situation.

Summer Prices Maintained.

A comparison of prices during 1910 and 1911 show that prices ruling on June 1, with exception of a cent or so variation, have been maintained for the following two months. Is this to be the case this year?

June butter is considered good storage stock and in other years surplus supplies have been disposed of in this way. However, in other years prices have been at a more reasonable level while this year they are above normal. Dealers apparently consider it rather risky to store butter until it reverts to a more normal basis.

The Texas Bermuda onion crop this season will total about 4,000 cars. Each car represents approximately 600 crates, making a total of 2,400,000 crates. Texas has outstripped Bermuda so far in raising Bermuda onions that the matter of giving the Texan product another name is under consideration by some growers. It is said Bermuda crop will not exceed 200,000 crates this year.

GILLETT'S LYE

One Of The 500 Purposes

GROCERS: Gillett's Lye can be recommended as a positive exterminator of rats and mice,and it has none of the objectionable features of a poison. The process for using it is simple. Just sprinkle a little of the Lye in and around the holes made by them. In addition to this, make a circle of Lye about one-quarter inch deep on a thin board about a foot square, and place some cheese or meat in the centre. In endeavoring to get at the bait their feet will be burned,and the whole colony, whether large or small, will immediately disappear.

"GILLETT'S LYE EATS DIRT" and besides, is useful for over 500 other purposes.

IT PAYS THE DEALER TO CONCENTRATE ON L. & B. BANNER BRAND JAMS AND JELLIES

You may have the cleanest and brightest store in your town. The first impression people get of it may be most favorable. The first impression is important, but it will not go far unless backed up by the right goods.

If you pass out inferior goods—jams especially, (Factory made jams always receive severest criticism) the customer figures that she has been deceived, and the store gets a black eye.

Concentrate on L. & B. Banner Brand Jams and Jellies and watch the volume of your jam business increase.

EZY-WASH

Here's another of our specialties Mr. Grocer, one which will be looked for by the housewife just as eagerly as Odor Starch.

No Wash-Board

No Wash-Machine

neither of these is needed with EZY-WASH.

No necessity to rub the clothes therefore no wear, no tear.

EZY-WASH will not injure or fade the finest goods or colors.

No potash, no lye, no acids, just a splendid easy washer, the result of years of thought.

RAMSAY'S FARM CREAM SODAS

There is always one by which the rest are measured. In the Soda biscuit world that one is Ramsay's Farm Cream Sodas.

Ask the women customers of your store who have used Ramsay's (and are invariably buying Ramsay's Farm Cream Sodas yet) if there is another Soda biscuit that has that delicious creamy taste, that satisfying daintiness unknown to other brands.

Every item of known worth in the making of Sodas is part of the Ramsay policy in the manufacture of Farm Cream Sodas. Made in a factory of modern equipment and perfect light.

"We both use FIVE ROSES flour and sell it too. We sold 2 or 3 sacks of it to people who told us they had never used it till they bought it from us and they said they had never had such good bread in their lives as they had with it out of what they had bought from us."

(Name on Request)

The FIVE ROSES flour package has kept many a merchant from shipwreck. When others have gone under, it has kept buoyant.

It has ignored the reefs of Unreliability, braved the winds of Dissatisfaction, avoided the deadly iceberg of Competition. Why shouldn't YOU enjoy steadily increasing sales—permanent growing profits?

Just think how successful our customers must be when the output has grown from 800 barrels in 1888 to 10,500 barrels a day.

Ask YOUR jobber for FIVE ROSES, or write nearest office.

The New Two and Five Pound

Canada's First Sugar at Its Best

Sealed Cartons of REDPATH Extra Granulated SUGAR offer important advantages to dealers.

They save the time you have had to spend in weighing out sugar into paper bags.

They save the pound or two you can scarcely help losing in every hundred you weigh out.

They save the loss and annoyance due to paper bags bursting in delivery.

They brighten up your store and your window displays.

They remind people of their sugar needs.

They enable you to deliver to your customers, in absolutely perfect condition, the sugar which for over fifty years has been recognized as Canada's best.

The handy, cleanly Sealed Cartons please and impress your most particular trade.

The new Two-Pound Package will prove a good supplement to the Five-Pound. Better order a supply at once.

THE PROBLEM SOLVED

YOU are losing profits every day by spoilt stock—due to improper refrigeration. Proper refrigeration represents so much dollars and cents to the grocer—Why not get it if you would attain success?

The NORTH STAR REFRIGERATOR

has perfect ventilation with absolute dryness, so that a match can be lighted on the interior walls of the ice chamber. Different odors of produce cannot mingle. It is the one sure means of stopping the drain of profits through spoilage.

Send for illustrated catalogue or write us your refrigeration wants, we will be pleased to quote you.

ESTATE JAMES DAVIDSON
Ottawa, - - Ontario

With the proper system of account keeping you can put an end to accounting worries and know the amount of accounts outstanding at a glance.

The ULLMAN Account Register

is the safest, simplest, quickest, surest to charge and most satisfactory of any system on the market. It satisfies the customer as well as the merchant. There is a decided advantage to the grocer who uses an Ullman Account Register. The customer knows, every time he makes a purchase, how much he owes, and naturally tries to keep it as low as possible. Put in an Ullman Account Register and stop the incessant night work and worry of retail bookkeeping.

Send for illustrated booklet or ask for demonstration.

We want dealers to handle the Ullman Account Register in some localities.

Place Two or Three Bottles on Your Counter

Said an enterprising grocer to us: "While I make it a rule to keep my counters as free from goods as possible, so that customers can be waited on more easily, still I've found it a good plan to place two or three bottles of on the counters. The counters being free from other goods, the attention of customers is attracted directly to Shirriff's True Vanilla. A large percentage of them take a bottle up in their hands, or make some remark about extracts, or ask a question about Shirriff's. This gives me the opportunity to tell the advantages of using a real vanilla extract like Shirriff's, and I seldom fail to make the sale."

On request, we will be pleased to send you a list of selling points that have been found effective in promoting the retail sales of Shirriff's True Vanilla.

To Being Successful

There are many ways to reach the much-sought-for goal, but chief among any for the retail store is to look successful and be systematic.

There is one department of a retail grocery that should a leak occur your efforts at success are futile —that is account keeping.

THE McCASKEY ACCOUNT REGISTER

has done the needful for hundreds of Canada's grocers, and to-day the most successful retailers of Canada are users of the McCaskey Account System.

Besides being the guard to success, it has the looks that modernize a store and place it high in the minds of its trade.

Ask us for demonstration in your business. We are certain it can make you successful; or send for new catalogue, giving full particulars.

THE TEST OF SERVICE

Few electric coffee mills develop trouble in the first year of their service. To the new owner, enthusiastic over the beauty and convenience of his new mill, what is out of sight is more than likely to be out of mind.

But to the level head buyer the value of foresight in what is out of sight needs no explaining. He knows that on these parts depend the life and service of his mill. Many a COLES mill is to-day, after three or four years service, giving just as good satisfaction as when it came fresh from the factory. Is this kind of service worth anything to you?

Ordinary milk passed through the mechanical process of homogenization makes

LAURENTIA MILK

This process of homogenization intricately mixes the milk and cream by the breaking of the little globules. The milk and cream thus mixed becomes more digestible, is more wholesome and nutritious, and when drinking one has the sensation of drinking thin cream. Laurentia Milk will keep indefinitely in any temperature but frost. It is always pure, sterile and sweet.

Why Don't You do Like Him?

H. J. Buckley of Moberly, Mo., who bought a No. 84 Kingery Corn Popper with Peanut cylinder extra for $94.00.

He writes that the machine is doing fine. I pay $40.00 per month rent and have four people employed and machine pays rent and help.

Now to get at his profits in this little, big business, let's do a little figuring. Rent $480 per year. Four clerks at $5.00 per week each, $1,040, total $1,520 or 15 times the cost of his machine. Did you ever add anything to your business that beats it? In some cases they have earned more net profit than that of the business of the entire store. Furthermore its attractiveness turns the eyes of passersby upon your store. Often it is the agent of sending them in. It helps the business in the store. The Kingery Peanut Roasters and Corn Poppers are of many kinds and styles—Steam, Electric, Spring and Hand Power. Ranging in price from $8.50 to $350.00. Sold on liberal instalments.

You should have Kingery's Book of Possibilities and Catalog No. 39. They are free.

This is how the "Barr" Looks in use

Note the arrow pointing to the depressible table. No matter what leaf of the steel book you pull down, it is ALWAYS on a level with the table of the register. The spring balance enables you, with hardly any effort at all, to move the leaves up or down, and the automatically adjusting table allows you a writing surface that is always at the right writing level. This is but one of the many advantages that the Barr Register possesses over all others.

The Barr Account Register System will make your collections doubly, quadruply easy. It will reduce your outstanding accounts by half. It will reduce and improve your book-keeping and take away all the mistakes and worries of the clumsy day-book and ledger system. It abolishes the old monthly and semi-monthly account rendering bugaboo.

The Barr Register will save its cost in the first few months of its use, and will save you many hundreds of dollars in its lifetime. It is a real necessity in the proper and successful conduct of your business. Use the coupon NOW.

MONTREAL—CARDINAL—TORONTO—BRANTFORD—VANCOUVER

A splendid window display showing result of careful thought in arrangement and selection of seasonable lines.

Wise and Otherwise Window Displays

Seizing the Opportune Time to Attract the Purchaser—Selling Goods in Season, the Plan of Least Resistance—A Barrie Window Typical of the Selling at the Psychological Moment Idea.

Displaying or advertising lawn mowers in December or mitts in July in a climate like ours would be considered suicidal to the best interests of the merchant foolish enough to attempt such a thing. Reverse the order, and you have a strong aid to sales.

Psychology teaches that the power of suggestion when the mind is in a responsive condition, creates a desire on the part of the mind to possess the article suggested. Imagine yourself walking down street in search of a necktie. You come to several men's wear stores in a row, but in only one is there a display of neckties. Ten chances to one you buy your tie there.

Dealers who display umbrellas or raincoats on a rainy day find sales are made. Ice cream and cool drinks bring trade in hot weather. Carpet cleansers and housecleaning assistants move fast in spring, and vegetable plants sell well in May and June. All this is so quite natural that it needs no explanation.

Chances Not Always Accepted.

But are advantages taken by the retail dealer of all seasonable goods? Does he always strike while the iron's hot, seize the opportunity when it knocks at the door, or prize the proverbial bird in the hand?

The answer is obvious to anyone who calls frequently on the trade.

"Oh, I'm too busy to attend to all that sort of thing," he will probably declare. "I have no time to study conditions and plan ahead; I don't get the time."

This is exactly what should keep him busy above everything else. It is what does keep the live man busy, and what brings him in the business. It is the creator of business, rather than the man who works out the detail, who is responsible for the results. To him the honor is due.

An Opportune Display.

The window shown above is an evidence of the appreciation of the power of suggestion at an opportune time. It contains canned corn, tomatoes, beans, peas, sardines, kippered herring, catsup, radish, pickles and olives—goods that always sell well with the advent of hot weather.

This display was shown last week by Hinds Bros., Barrie, Ont., grocers, and from an attractive standpoint is to be highly commended. In its construction Mr. Hinds has paid particular attention to symmetry, and to placing in it only goods associated with the season of summer, when such goods sell with the least effort.

The method of tilting alternate cans of corn is one not frequently observed, and might well bear repetition. It is done by resting the bottom of the tilted can against the top of the upright one to the right—and its side against the top of the other on the left. On the next step is another row of corn, a few inches apart, with cans of tomatoes resting on the edges of the tops. The other steps contain sardines, catsup, pickles and olives, while on the right is to be seen a pyramid of canned beans and on the left a similar one of peas. The kippered herring is shown one can beneath the other, with two on either side, showing the tops of the cans.

Ranks High in Selling Power.

Contrasted with some grocery windows, and particularly those filled with a promiscuous assortment of goods, this window of Hinds Bros. stands out prominently. It has all the earmarks of a good display, with the possible exception of a show card or two, suggesting that the goods on display are, for instance, "tasty time savers," for luncheon, or other applicable phrase. Neatness, regularity, originality, arrangement of labels and selling power are all commendable features, too prominent to be overlooked.

The final test of any display is its power to make sales. Mr. Hinds is a careful window dresser, and he gets results. He takes time to make a display because it pays, not because someone else does it. He has three windows altogether. At this season one is usually given up to fruit, another to fancy biscuits, etc., and the one represented here to seasonable grocery articles.

Canned Goods Should be Sold.

Any dealer is wise who at this time of year makes it a point to get rid of canned goods. The season of fresh fruits and new vegetables is almost here, and its advent naturally curtails sales of the canned vegetables and fruits. The housewife's supply cellar is getting pretty well depleted, so that in every way it is an opportune time to attract with these goods the eye of the woman whose duties are to provide the home with tasty and wholesome food.

A Crafty Move for Selling Best Sugar

How a Dealer Sold Carload of No. 1 Grade at Fair Profit While Competitor Lost Money on Poorer Quality—Selling Power of a Grocer's Advice—Points on Increasing Sales During Preserving Season—Suggestion for Sugar Window.

The sugar trade of many a grocer can be compared pretty closely to the crops of many a ne'er-do-well farmer. Both are allowed to pretty well take care of themselves, and results and profits accordingly fall far below what they otherwise might be. You know that farmer who reaps whatever kind Providence may send his way, but who makes absolutely no effort to increase the yield to secure a greater profit on his yield.

Perhaps you are not unacquainted with the grocer who regards sugar in about the same light and who is apparently content with whatever trade may by chance come his way, and with whatever profit or lack of profit he has been securing in the past.

Overcame Low Price by Quality.

One does not often find real salesmanship applied to the sale of this staple of staples of the grocery store. Here is an example that should provide some food for thought for those troubled with price cutting in this line or unfair competition from those who sell inferior sugar. It happened a couple of years ago in a normal sized country town. The merchant himself gives the particulars.

"It was during the preserving season that one of my competitors began to cut the price of sugar. We had been selling all along at 18 pounds for a dollar, but he raised it to 20 pounds. I wondered how he could do it, for I knew he couldn't buy any cheaper than I, and if I had sold at 20 pounds for $1, I would have been losing money.

"I shortly found out the exact reason. He had purchased a car of second grade sugar, getting a few barrels of the best, along with it. It was the second grade he was selling at the low price.

Took the Opposite Course.

"I spent some time considering how I would combat this competition. At last I reached a decision. I ordered a car of the best, and a few barrels of No. 2—just the opposite, you see. I went him one better, and advertised 21 pounds for a dollar.

"No, that wasn't the price on No. 1. That was for the second grade. I continued to sell the best at 18 pounds for a dollar. At the end of two weeks my competitor, who had cut the price still further to 22 pounds, had sold out his car of second grade—at a loss. I, on the other hand, had sold my car of No. 1 at full price—and still had nearly all my second grade left.

Dealer's Advice Accepted.

"This is the way I did it. When a customer came in I would tell her I was giving 22 pounds for a dollar—but of the second grade. I advised her to buy the best at 18 pounds for a dollar, and practically everyone followed my advice."

This case demonstrates explicitly that if time is taken to lay the facts before customers, they can be induced to buy the highest quality. It is desirable that grocers sell the higher grade. They can recommend this with confidence and not only with greater profits to themselves, but a higher degree of satisfaction to their patrons. There are too many dealers selling poorer sugar when people would be willing to purchase the better grade and pay a higher price for it.

Is Easily Given Away.

Sugar may be one of the most staple lines which the grocer handles, but that is no reason why he should sell it at a loss. Every line sold in the grocery store should be made to bear its share of the burden of maintaining the store. The grocer should secure a fair living profit on sugar, and if he handles the highest grade, he can exact it too. By emphasizing the fact to customers that he handles the best sugar, he can get his price.

Not only is it well that the grocer sell the best grade of sugar and exact a fair profit from it, but he should attempt to sell just as much as possible of this article. Some dealers apparently think the demand for sugar is set, and that it cannot be increased. This is far from true. There is not an article, no matter how staple, the sale of which cannot be reasonably increased by proper salesmanship methods. Potatoes are also a staple line—equally as much as sugar, for they are used daily in every household. Who would say that a nice display of smooth clean potatoes in a prominent part of the store with a show card attached would not sell more than if they reposed in a back bin in the cellar. The same is true of sugar. It's sale can be increased by proper methods.

Increasing Sugar Sales.

The preserving season is now not far distant. There is going to be a big sale of sugar, but it is going to be much larger for the grocer who puts forth some effort to increase its sale. What methods are to be used to do this?

The grocer has advertising, personal talks and display at his command, and in all three, quality should be made a big feature. It is a good subject to harp on continually, for the people of to-day are, above all, demanding high quality goods.

Now that we are entering upon the preserving season, window display could be used to good advantage in pushing sugar. The time to push an article strong is when it is in demand. Some good window trims can be easily arranged.

A Window Suggestion.

Here is a suggestion: Cover the floor of the window with blue paper. At the front the words: "Best sugar only" can be worked out with loaf sugar. If preferred the words may be spelled out with the white granulated sugar. It may be difficult to form the letters with loose sugar unless you know the method. Roll a piece of heavy paper into a cone shape with only a small opening. Fill the cone with sugar, holding your hand over the small opening. You are then ready to write the words by allowing the sugar to flow slowly through the opening.

From each rear corner of the window, a sugar barrel on its side is slanted in towards the centre. Loose sugar is allowed to flow out of the mouth of each barrel. Extending from one barrel to another is placed a large show card. At each side of the window is a cwt. sack of sugar. Dollar packages may be placed at other parts of the window.

Sugar Show Cards.

We sell only the best.
Did you order sugar?
You want the best. We have it.
What is fruit without good sugar?

A despatch from Stockholm says a Swedish fruit syndicate has been registered which bids fair to prove a powerful competitor in the European fruit markets. The company intends to operate a steamship of its own and to begin a service with Western America on opening of Panama Canal.

Method for Keeping Track of Expenses

Are Divided Into Five Columns for Sake of Convenience—Proprietor's Salary Should be Included—Either Rent or Percentage of Value of Premises Also Among the List—Goods Taken From Store for Owner's Use.

* By F. C. Higgins.

My few remarks on the "Cost of Doing Business" will be for the purpose of throwing out some suggestions for our meeting's consideration.

At the outset let me draw your attention to the vital necessity of knowing the cost of doing business. In the first place it is an acknowledged fact that in these days of keen competition, the securing of large profits is practically impossible.

Secondly, the high and constantly increasing cost of so many of the goods we handle, makes it doubly difficult to maintain a proper and necessary percentage of profit.

Thirdly, the very heavy increase in the expense column, due to higher cost of help, soaring prices for horse and wagon maintenance, high rents and heavy taxes, makes it necessary to know where we are.

Times Have Changed.

In the good old days of high profits, it might be that one could perhaps afford to be ignorant of the exact cost of doing business, but not so to-day. Conditions are changed. Profits are not large enough to take anything for granted.

Paul's injunction to "prove all things" is good advice for the merchant. In order to know the cost of doing business we must have correct records of all items of expense, and this calls for the keeping of a proper set of book.

Itemizing the Expenses.

Let us put the items of expense under say five heads: First, wages; second, light and heat; third, horse and wagon; fourth, rent, taxes and insurance; five, sundries. Now, as to what is properly charged to the wage column, I want to impress upon you that not only the wages of your clerks, bookkeepers and delivery men be included, but also your own personal salary. In reference to this matter of proprietor's salary, I am afraid many merchants do not keep a correct record. In some cases the supplies for the table are taken out of stock and no record whatever kept of them. I maintain that a fixed amount should be drawn by the proprietor, and that his supplies taken from stock should be bought and paid for in the same way as any other customer.

*An address given at last meeting of Grocers' Section, Toronto branch of the Retail Merchants' Association.

As to the second and third columns, light and heat and horse and wagon, it is sufficiently clear as to why their own expenses should be charged up to them respectively. The fourth column, that of rent and taxes, requires particular mention . If one is the owner of the building, and not paying rent, he should undoubtedly properly charge up to the cost of doing business 6 per cent. of the valuation of the premises. The fifth column, that of sundries, should contain all items of expense not covered by other heads. This is a column that is capable of great variation, and requires most careful watching.

Figures Cost at 15 Per Cent.

For the purpose of illustration, let us figure that our expense totals for a month show $500. In order to determine what percentage of cost this bears in relation to our sales, it follows we must keep a correct record of our sales, both cash and credit. Suppose we find our sales for a month to be $2,500. Then it follows that our cost of doing business is one-fifth, or 20 per cent. of our sales.

From my own experiences I should say that the actual cost of doing a grocery business in the city of Toronto is about 15 per cent. of sales. I have arrived at this conclusion by most careful examination of my records of expense, goods purchased and amount of sales. Of course, expenses from month to month vary somewhat, as one month it might be necessary to purchase considerable feed or wrapping paper; but taken on an average the year round the cost of doing business in this city is as I above stated.

* * * *

Easy Matter to Determine.

At the conclusion of Mr. Higgin's address there was a general discussion of this subject, and it was evident that some dealers did not give the careful attention to expenses that they should.

From a close observation of the above address it will be seen how simple it is to always know exactly the cost of doing business.

Mr. Higgins in his address referred to his own methods. He has an expense book divided into the five columns mentioned, and in which are kept the expenses of the business. The amounts of invoices are shown in another book, as well as sales, so that at the end of every month he can easily total up expenses, purchases and sales, thus knowing pretty accurately how his business stands twelve times a year. Of course, the matter of amount of stock must be taken into consideration to get an absolutely correct standing, and this is found after stocktaking at the end of each year.

At the next meeting of the Grocers' Section of the R. M. A. the subject will be again discussed.

A PROFIT PERCENTAGE PROBLEM.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—To settle a discussion we submit the enclosed problem, and will thank you for your solution of same to be published in your next issue.

R. O. RIESTER,
Coaticook, Que. Woodman & McKee.

Here is the problem: 1 dozen of a certain article cost $2, and 1 dozen of another $4. The first is sold at 25 cents each, and the second at 50 cents. What is the percentage of profit on the transaction.

Answer.—The invoice cost was $6 and sum received $9, leaving a margin of $3 to cover cost of doing business and profit. Profit should be figured on sales and $3 is 33 1-3 per cent. of $9. The percentage of gross profit is therefore 33 1-3 per cent.

OUR NEWFOUNDLAND LETTER.

St. John's, Nfld., June 10.—The price of fish has dropped considerably, very little offering at present. Most of the Outport dealers have taken supplies and gone home, and late arrivals have only small quantities to dispose of. The price to-day for a fair article all round would be about $5.50 per quintal. This is a drop of about $1 per quintal.

Lobsters are now quoted at from $17.25 to $17.50 per case of 4 doz. No new pack along yet. All sold so far have been fresh, at from 15c to 25c apiece, according to size.

Fresh salmon is exceedingly plentiful and can be had for 8c per pound.

AN AD. GOING TO SEED.

How a retailer can expect results from newspaper advertising and never change his ad. is beyond explanation. Yet there are scores of merchants in Canada today spending good money in advertising and yet allowing their advertisments to go to seed.

To establish a case in point: The Grocer has been shown a newspaper containing a merchant's ad. which has not been changed since the first copy appeared on the contract on February 29 last. That is practically three and a half months ago. This dealer is paying into the bargain 25 per cent. extra for preferred position on the front page.

Here is an opportunity for attracting new business and increasing trade with old customers that is not taken advantage of. Any live man could make such a space pay a splendid dividend by handling it properly.

Newspaper advertisements should not be repeated if best results are to be secured. If something new appears from day to day the space will be looked forward to with interest by possible buyers. But if an ad. is repeated, readers soon learn that such a space cannot be depended upon for news and ignore it when a change is made.

Repetition in advertising is a leak through which money disappears with no returns. Change the ad., give readers something definite to look for, get results and stop the leak.

BUSINESS ETIQUETTE LACKING.

Wherever one goes, he hears complaints from members of the trade agaisnt new men starting in business who attempt to secure custom unfairly. This breach of retail etiquette consists in soliciting orders from house to house from customers of other dealers under the promise of being able to sell cheaper, give better services and better goods.

It is to be assumed that retailers who have been in the business for some years, know pretty nearly at what prices goods should be sold to produce a living profit. The newcomer, particularly if he has had no previous experience in retailing groceries, usually overlooks the matter of overhead expenses, and thinks he can sell goods cheaper than established competitors and still make a fair profit at the year end. This is the delusion that has been the cause of so many short-lived grocery businesses, and the quicker it is dispelled, the better for the trade.

While there is no law, and likely to be none, against new dealers calling personally at the homes of other's customers and soliciting business on the promise of cheaper goods, yet it does not appear to be square dealing—dealing as one would like to be dealt by. If, however, a merchant hears of someone dissatisfied with the services or goods of her grocer and wants to change, he would scarcely be termed a live dealer if he did not go after the business. There are plenty of straight-forward, honest and above-board methods of attracting trade without resorting to petty methods. The latter are what produce unfriendly feelings among dealers of a town, when they should be co-operating with one another to improve conditions of trade.

A SMALL MATTER, BUT IMPORTANT.

It is rather surprising the number of people working in stores who cannot wrap or tie a parcel in half decent manner.

Either through carelessness or inability the product turned out by many is crude. The paper sticks out somewhere or a half foot of string is left to the knot, giving it an ill appearance. The clerk who wraps a bundle neatly and quickly inspires one with confidence and respect. He impresses upon one the fact that he knows the business thoroughly.

A customer does not care to walk up the street with a parcel breaking out at the end or presenting a poor appearance. A little carefulness upon the part of the clerk in this respect is always appreciated.

LOCAL PARCEL POST SYSTEM.

At the convention of the Ontario Postmasters' Association, held in Toronto during the week, a subject of much interest to the retail trade in country towns was discussed. It was in relation to the parcels post problem; in fact, an endorsation was made of what might be termed a mild form of parcels post.

The association went on record as favoring a local parcel post service in connection with the rural delivery system to give tradesmen and merchants the facility of having their parcels delivered through the post offices along the rural routes at the rate of one cent per pound, with a minimum charge of five cents. The regular parcel post coming through the mails from outside points would not come under these rates.

Such a system would naturally benefit postmasters, and local merchants in districts where rural mail delivery is in effect. Postmasters would sell more stamps and merchants would be able to fill phone orders from the country by sending the goods through the post office. During the summer months when farmers are busy on the land, such a service might be used to good advantage. Five pounds of groceries—providing heavy goods were omitted—or dry goods could be sent for five cents, which would be much cheaper than hitching up a horse and driving into town.

On the surface this appears to be a good scheme, as long as it would not evolve into a general system of parcel post coming through outside mails. Merchants would, of course, have to add to their selling price the amount of postage, else there would be a considerable leak in their business in a year, if much goods were sent by post.

"WHIPPEN."

UNDER this heading, a story was published in a recent number of the Saturday Evening Post, which contained the strongest argument for pushing quality goods which the writer has encountered for some time.

Whippen was a clerk in a grocery store. He had ideas of his own and was just chockful of confidence. He discovered one day, more by accident than anything else, that people like to pay the highest price for things under certain circumstances—that they do not think they are getting the best unless they pay the highest price. This, he decided, was a law of human nature which contained the promise of a fortune for those who used it. Whippen used it. He went to New York and bought a share in a candy business, taking upon himself the responsibility of the sales end. He rented a store on the most exclusive street, fitted it up regardless of expense, and put in a stock of candy made of the very best material. Before his advent, the most expensive candy to be obtained in the American metropolis was 80 cents a pound. The audacity — or shall we say genius? — of Whippen made it clear to him that he must not only beat this topmost figure, but he must beat it good. He fixed his price at $1.50 a pound. In doing so, he believed that the unheard-of height of his price would make people believe the candy to possess unheard-of merit.

Just to make sure, he started to advertise, and again that shrewd instinct of his told him that he must advertise extensively or not at all. He signed advertising contracts for figures which would have staggered a man with the least touch of timidity in his nature. Soon the newspapers and weekly publications blared forth the fact that

IF HE DOESN'T GIVE HER WHIPPEN'S,
HE DOESN'T GIVE HER THE BEST.

People looked at the price and were convinced instanter that Whippen's must be the best. There was no getting away from the proof in that colossal figure of $1.50 a pound. It was a challenge to every young man in Gotham with a "best girl" to buy Whippen's.

To make a long story short, Whippen captured the cream of the candy trade. He sold as much as he could make; and could have sold more, only again his genius came to the rescue, showing him that to restrict the output was to ensure permanence to the craze.

This story may seem exaggerated and partaking more of fiction than of fact. In the opinion of the writer, however, it reveals a basic truth. People who can afford the best, want the best, and are prepared to pay for it. Furthermore, paying the best price is the surest way that people have of convincing themselves that they have got the best. When a man buys an article at a low price, he does so at the dictates of necessity, and he suspects flaws in the goods. If he pays the topnotch figure, he accepts the value of the article absolutely. He may grumble at the price, but he never questions that he is getting quality.

It should be understod, however, that Whippen sold a candy which was as good at least as any other on the market. The margin he demanded was possible, perhaps, in that line of business. It would not be possible in the sale of the necessities of life. A grocer who marked cooked ham 80 per cent. higher than the others in the trade would soon have the sheriff in charge.

The story demonstrates two truths, however. The first is that it pays to handle quality goods. The second is that when an article is the best on the market, it is safer to put the price above the market level than to cut below.

Profits on Groceries and Real Estate

How They are Calculated on Each—Only When Inventory Has Been Taken Can Dealer Say He Has Made So Much on His Investment—The Dealer's Selling Power—Developing Condensed Milk Sales.

* By Henry Johnson, Jr.

A certain Ontario grocer, who a year ago sold no evaporated milk, now enjoys a good trade on it. Here is how it happened, as related in the Spring Number of The Canadian Grocer:

Against his will, yielding to the persuasions of a salesman, he put in a dozen 5c tins. He did not grip the argument of the salesman, however, for he made no attempt to sell the milk. Thus it laid on his shelf for six months. Then a woman came one day and bought one can. She came back for another can each suceeding day, until she had bought the entire dozen. Then he woke up a bit and asked the woman what she did with the milk. She pointed out to him that fresh milk was 8c a quart, and her family used more than a pint daily, so she had to buy a quart; but she could buy a tin of evaporated milk for 5c, and it was enough for an entire day, so she saved the 3c difference.

Developed the Selling Power.

The dealer used this information. He also studied the subject carefully; learning thereby that only the water was taken from the milk through evaporation, and that water was cheap enough for anybody to add again; that the cost of daily delivery of fresh milk constituted such a heavy expense that the handling accounted for much more than half the 8c paid; that evaporated milk was sterilized so it was free from germs and would therefore keep well, as well as being safe to feed to anybody. His Selling Power was so greatly developed by this knowledge that now he gets rid of a case of milk each week, and his trade is growing.

Why not you? Why not add this item to your sales—and profits?

Vancouver, April 4, 1912.

The Canadian Grocer:

Gentlemen.—Since you have so kindly given my letter space in your columns, I can do no less than work out the little problem you ask me. The problem is as follows:

I sold two pieces of property for $2,500 each. I made 25 per cent. on the one and lost 25 per cent. on the other. Did I gain or lose as a result of the transaction? If so, how much did I gain or lose—or did I "play even?"

The transaction on the first piece of property on which I make 25 per cent., figures as follows:

Cost plus profit $2,500
100 per cent. plus 25 per cent. equals 2,500

100 per cent. equals $2,000 (cost); 25 per cent. equals $500; (profit or gain).

On the second piece of property I lose 25 per cent.

Cost less loss equals $2,500; 100 per cent. less 25 per cent. equals $2,500; 100 per cent. equals $3,-333.33 (cost); 25 per cent. equals $833.33 (loss).

On the two transactions I lose $333.33.

Now, had I figured the transactions as you figure margins on groceries, one transaction would have balanced the other; but, as a mater of fact, I lost, because the two pieces of property did not cost the same, and 25 per cent. profit, or gain, on the one transaction did not offset the 25 per cent. loss on the other.

I am glad you made the problem one in real estate, because I know more about profits in that line than on groceries; nevertheless, I read your paper eagerly, for there are many good things in it, and when I turn the sheet over to my grocery store manager, I tell him to profit by what he reads.

Speaking of problems, the worst one I have had to work out in my store is the selling of articles two for a quarter, three for a quarter, six for a quarter, when they ought to be fifteen, ten or five cents; and that a fair profit on the straight price is turned into a positive loss by the cut. In this section, very little stuff is sold odd cents. It is either five, ten or other multiples of five, and the pennies are either given or taken in the transaction; mostly given away, I am sorry to say.

If you differ with me in the above solution of the problem, will be glad to hear from you.

Yours very truly,
W. F. R.

* * * *

Agrees and Differs.

No: I shall not differ with you very much on the real estate solution, but your conclusion that the same problem applied to groceries would result in neither loss or gain is not sound, as I shall show. The reason I printed that problem is that it strikingly illustrates the difference between a margin and a Profit or Loss.

Note, first, this curious thing: That in arriving at your loss on property, No. 2, you divide what you get by 3 to show what the property cost you: 1-3 of $2,500 being $833.33, and the two added together making $3,333.33. If, now, 25 per cent. is 1-3 of your COST, it surely must be ¼ of your SELLING PRICE; for, if you were to use the same rule for computing the required sum to equal 25 per cent. margin on the $3,333.33 which property No. 2 cost you, you would be compelled to get $4,-444.44 for it. But, while you see at a glance that a loss of 25 per cent. entails the loss of ¼ of your investment, you do not see that the same rule, applied to the property on which you made a profit, would make your margin on property No. 1 not $500, but $625.

The Loss on Groceries.

I shall get back to this in a minute.

Meantime will say that the loss on those two transactions, if applied to groceries, would be not $333.33, but $208.33. This, because 25 per cent. margin on $2,500 is $625; and $625 taken from $833.33 leaves a net loss of $208.33, as stated. 25 per cent. loss must be ¼ of what we paid for a thing. 25 per cent. gain is ¼ of what we Get for that thing. The same divisor is used in each case.

* * * *

The Computing of Margins.

I have adopted the plan of talking about Margins in discussing the daily transactions of the grocer. Why? Because a margin is a difference between cost and selling price, which difference is intended to provide for both expenses and a Profit. Many reasons can be given, but the great point is, that our expenses are always divided by our sales to get our percentage of expense; hence our gross margins must be computed the same way.

All the transactions between inventories cover process of making a profit or a loss. We must be sure the process is right and safe, or we shall end up with the loss we do not want, instead of the profit we are working for. To figure on cost of merchandise only is to include only a portion of the capital investment; for we must provide also for the capital necessary for operating—equally a cost with what we pay for merchandise. At another time I shall borrow from a very able writer for more details. Meantime, I shall get back to the Real Estate field.

---

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

The Problem Completed.

When the grocer reaches inventory time; has "taken stock," listed his fixtures at fair values, entered his depreciation charges, scaled his book accounts, computed his interest and charged that into expenses; in other words, boiled down his tangible assets and what is owing him so they make up a conservative assortment of values, he has completed his problem.

At this time we hope he may have a net profit; but whether he has or not, whatever he has is a figure to be applied to his invested capital. This is the only time in the year when he can properly use that term, "investment," as real esate men use it every day; because this is the one time when he has a FINISHED TRANSACTION to handle and record.

Hence, now, if he has $1,800 left over and his total capital account is $5,000, he can properly say that he has made 36 per cent. on his investment.

The Real Estate deals are easily and promptly put through on the cost, or investment, basis, because they are so simple. If a man puts $5,000 into property and sells at the end of a year for $6,800, there is no work about figuring where he stands. He has not got to make purchases and sales aggregating $30,000, and involving 90,000 small transactions, the employment of four or five people, and the infinite variety of petty details of a grocer's daily life, to make that gross margin of $1,800. No; in the course of 30 minutes he can list every expense to which he has been put, including $300 interest charges, and when he then finds that he has made a net amount of, say, $1,400, he can say that he made 28 per cent. on his investment.

All of which, as I read it over, looks to me to be about "as clear as mud;" but if you do not see it any better, ask me again, and I shall try again. I know it is right; and I hope some day to be able to clearly demonstrate why.

Getting an Hour More Daylight After Work

Orillia, Ont., Clocks to be Moved Forward—Merchants and Clerks Will Have Sixty Minutes More For Recreation—But Work Will Begin an Hour Sooner in the Morning.

Orillia, Ont., June 13 (Special).—If you rose an hour earlier in the morning would you retire an hour earlier at night?

This may seem an unimportant question, undeserving of much attention, but in Orillia it is at the present time an all absorbing problem. Orillia is going to have more daylight during the summer months. There will be an extra hour—one hour more than Barrie and Midland, for instance.

It must not be understood that the sun is going to shine on Orillia sixty minutes longer than on any other part of Ontario. Orillia is a good town, but Old Sol spreads his rays on the unjust as well as the just. The fact of the matter is that Orillia is going to turn her clocks on an hour, late on Saturday evening, June 23, or early the following morning. The obvious result of this is that 7 o'clock on the next Monday morning, according to Orillia time, will be an hour ahead of the time of the rest of Ontario. Stores and factories will open at this hour and the good citizens will all be up and astir full sixty minutes before those in Barrie.

Quit Work Earlier.

But it is an ill wind that blows nobody good. When the hands of the Orillia clock point to six in the afternoon, factories and stores close for the day, whereas in the remainder of the province, it is only five o'clock with another hour's work ahead.

Now we come to the main object of the scheme, which is embodied in a by-law passed by the local council.

Supposing darkness to set in at 9 o'clock Ontario time—and therefore 10 o'clock Orillia time—Orillia will have four hours' daylight after the expiration of work. Other people will only have three. It is to gain this extra hour that a law has been passed coming into effect on June 23 and expiring August 31.

Conflict With Railroad Time.

On the former date all clocks are advanced an hour. Everyone will be urged to forget that 7 o'clock in reality means six — except, of course, when a train has to be caught. Then timepieces must be considered an hour fast; but they are better fast than slow when a person is traveling.

The Council's Resolution.

The council of Orillia passed the by-law on the recommendation of the Board of Trade, and the petition of the manufacturers. The wording of the resolution that brought about the change was as follows:—"That in accordance with the request of the Board of Trade, and with a view to affording an additional hour of daylight in the evenings, during the summer, His Worship the Mayor be requested to issue a proclamation calling upon the loyal citizens of Orillia to put forward their timepieces one hour before retiring on the night of Saturday, June 22nd, the local time thus established to govern in Orillia until the 31st of August, proximo. That between the dates mentioned the town bell be rung at the usual hours, in accordance with 'Orillia time,' and that those in control of other bells and whistles within the corporation be requested to have them rung or blown by 'Orillia time.' That His Worship the Mayor be requested to take, in conjunction with the President of the Board of Trade, such other steps as they may deem desirable to make the proposed change as widely known as possible, and to obviate inconvenience in connection therewith."

All Work and No Play.

The manufacturers considered the plan to be a worthy one, in view of the fact that their employes would have an extra hour of daylight in the evening for recreation. Clerks in stores and employers will be similarly benefited by this extra hour. Orillia, too, expects to receive considerable publicity from the innovation.

There are those who do not look on the proposition with favor. A clerk in a retail store tendered his objections because he would have to get up an hour earlier and yet would be inclined to cheat his downy couch of the extra hour at night, knowing that Orillia time was an hour ahead. One or two travelers have been heard voicing their objections because of difference in time with outside places. But the majority seem to favor the change and it will be given a fair trial.

(Editorial Note.—It is interesting to note that some two years ago The Canadian Grocer published an editorial on this daylight saving scheme, pointing out its advantages and suggesting that a trial might be given it with favorable results. Moose Jaw, Sask., and Orillia have taken the lead, and their experiences will be followed carefully. If the innovation is appreciated, next year we may expect to see many other centres adopting it.

In fact, we have at present a similar condition of affairs existing between Detroit, Mich., and Windsor, Ont. The clocks of Detroit are an hour behind those of Windsor, which is just across the river. The citizens of Windsor have therefore the advantage of an extra hour of daylight after hours over their friends on the other side.)

Instances of Goods Sold Above Demand

Salsemanship as Contrasted With Order Taking—Sixty Tins of Baking Powder in One Week Among Extra Sales—Cases Where Window Brought Results — Direct Returns From Newspaper Ad.

That goods can be sold over and above actual demand is being demonstrated constantly in progressive stores in all parts of Canada. While there are still those who continue to merely hand out the goods which may be asked for by customers, they are becoming fewer in number for they must necessarily go down before the competition of live business men who recognize that demand for goods may be built up and increased by proper salesmanship methods.

Fred C. Harp, proprietor of the Cash Bargain Grocery, Brantford, Ont., is one who believes it possible to extend the volumes of sales. Not only does he believe this but actual instances drive home the truth of the assertion. Here is a case:

Boosted Candy Sales.

Previous to Christmas last year a certain kind of candy that should appeal to customers, especially at this time of the year, was stocked. The truth of the matter is that nearly every other grocer in town had the same candy. In a good many stores it calmly reposed beneath the counter or in some other inconspicuous position. Not so at the Cash Bargain Grocery where it was decided to make a special of it around Christmas.

Appropriate with the season, it was called "Santa Claus Candy," and a window display entirely of this line was made. In keeping with the name of the candy, an effigy of Santa Claus was placed in the window. Outside of this there was nothing very unusual in the display. A goodly quantity of the candy was placed in the window and a price card used. Result showed that the special efforts put behind the line returned good dividends. The store sold 1,100 pounds of the confection during Christmas week. It shows just what is possible in this regard.

Sold Their Baking Powder Easily.

Many grocery firms send men out to take orders. Sometimes these men are merely order takers and make little or no effort to use salesmanship methods. The result is that only the stated actual needs of customers are supplied and, coming unfrequently to the store, the chance of increasing volume of their purchases is small.

The Cash Bargain Grocery send a man among customers to solicit orders, and apparently he is a salesman. He is Arthur Harp, brother of the proprietor. Recently he sold 60 cans of a certain baking powder in one week, simply by pointing out its character and advising customers to buy.

Figs Didn't Last Long.

He generally makes it a point to have some special article with him each day on which to concentrate his efforts. Not long ago the firm received a 30 lb. box of pulled figs at a fairly reasonable price. Next morning he took a sample with him. Before noon he telephoned in not to sell any more out of the box as he had disposed of them all to different customers on the route.

Fred Harp, who has twenty-three years' business experience behind him, is a strong advocate of price tickets as a means of increasing sales, and a plentiful use of them is made in interior and window display. Not only are price tickets used on occasions of a special price, but on any line, to acquaint customers with the price of it.

"I have found a plentiful use of price tickets good business," states Mr. Harp; "so much so that I continue to increase the number about the store. I do not allow any one ticket to remain too long, but change them constantly. A clean card is essential, for it is a bad advertisement to have a dirty card on a display of food."

Jam Window Attracts New Buyer.

In a recent window display of this firm, one of the lines shown was a pail of jam. A price card was attached—just the ordinary price being quoted.

A woman who had never dealt with the store was passing the window when she noticed the jam and the price. She came in to purchase, and by further creative salesmanship, when she left she had bought $2.40 worth of goods and had got started towards being a regular customer of the store.

Uses The Newspaper Columns.

Another method of increasing sales which the store uses, and to good advantage, is advertising in the local paper.

"It has been argued," says Mr. Harp, "by certain merchants, that advertising in a town such as this does not pay. Many come to this conclusion because they cannot always see direct results from advertising, and therefore are inclined to be doubtful of its value. A sure proof that ads. are read is shown by the fact that if a merchant happens to quote a wrong price, that is below the proper figure, he finds an immediate flood of customers."

"We have always advertised, and believe it pays. We believe in quoting prices, but also using space to work up interest of readers in the goods. We had an instance of an advertisement of flour, quoting a price. The paper was scarcely off the press until we had a woman ring up and enquire about the flour. We succeeded in selling her a nice bill of goods, which went a long way itself towards paying the cost of the ad."

TO LESSEN EGG SHRINKAGE.

Ontario May Have Law Prohibiting the Marketing of Bad Eggs.

Toronto, June 13.—It is estimated that the State of Michigan alone loses annually $1,500,000 due to the poor average quality of eggs. The Dominion Government has fixed the shrinkage loss in Canada at 17 per cent.

At a convention of produce dealers held across the line recently, and which was attended by some Canadian men, the egg problem was the centre of interest. Ways and means were discussed for getting the farmers to take more interest in the production of eggs, and also of protecting wholesale men against having to pay for rotten eggs.

As yet no definite law exists in Ontario covering the egg problem, but the Government is moving towards it. The production of eggs is an important factor in the community, and in the long run the farmer would find that it pays to keep a good stock of poultry, provide sanitary conditions for them, and use intelligence and care in the handling of them for brooding and laying purposes.

There is no excuse for the farmer marketing the bad eggs that come in. The candling process is so simple that old or incubated or the average diseased eggs may be readily detected. Under the Government regulations suggested the farmer would get more for his eggs, and the consumer would give less, as the waste would be cut out.

In past issues of The Grocer an error has been made in the signature of the H. E. Vipond advertisement. This has appeared "H. E. Vipond & Co.," when it should have been "H. E. Vipond."

Canadian oystermen who attended the recent annual convention of the Oyster Growers' and Dealers' Association of North America, at New Haven, were T. J. McKey and George Laird, of Toronto, and D. J. Byrne, of Montreal.

Current News of the Week

Quebec and Maritime Provinces.

Holmes & Thenholm, grocers, Amherst, N. S., have formed a partnership.

The box factory of the Rock City Tobacco Co. was partially destroyed by fire recently. The loss was covered by insurance.

The grocery business at Sydney, N.S., conducted by Harrington's, Limited, has been purchased by Fand J. Morley. The latter have disposed of their crockeryware business to the Harrington China Company.

Some Halifax grocers have sustained losses in biscuits recently by a clever dodge on the part of a swindler on a small scale. This man called at the stores and asked for some biscuits. When these were wrapped and in his hand he would ask for butter, and while the proprietor went to the refrigerator he would make his escape with the biscuits. The trick has so unnerved one woman grocer that she intends giving up business in the fall.

Ontario.

G. M. Mowat, grocer, Toronto, has sold to B. Bouskel.

J. A. Buchanan, grocer, Fort William, has sold to A. Teeft.

Wm. Ferguson, grocer, Toronto, has succeeded Parkinson Shaw.

Grimsby Co-operative, Ltd., Grimsby, Ont., has obtained a charter.

The Consecon Canning Co., Consecon, Ont., has received Ontario incorporation.

N. Lesser & Son, general merchants, Blind River, Ont., sustained loss by fire recently.

Thomas H. Miller, formerly engaged in the grocery business on Wellesley Street, Toronto, died on Thursday last.

J. J. McEwen, grocer, Goderich, Ont., is on a month's trip to Western Canada.

Thos. Mulcahy, general merchant, Orillia, Ont., was in Toronto on business this week.

D. Bell, grocer, Yonge Street, Toronto, was on a fishing expedition to Lake Scugog last week.

In last week's fire at Cobalt, Ont., Milton Carr & Sons, general merchants, suffered loss of $30,000, and Charles Reekin, flour and feed, $2,000.

A. Ostrum, grocer, Fort William, Ont., is succeeded by. Wm. Johnson. A Teeft, grocer, of the same town, has sold to J. A. Buchanan.

The Hamilton and Brantford grocers will again join this year in their annual picnic. It will be held to Grimsby Beach on July 17.

E. J. Ryan, London, Ont., has sold his busines to Robert G. Collins, for many years with Hocken Bros., and previously with The New York Store.

Michael Fury, of Woodstock, Ont., died recently at the ripe old age of 80 years. He had been in the grocery and fish business there for more than half a century.

F. E. Robson, of F. E. Robson & Co., grocery brokers, Front Street East, Toronto, sailed on the Corsican on Tuesday for England, where he will spend six weeks.

Toronto wholesale fruit dealers waited on Customs Collector Bertram and were assured that hereafter there would be no further delay in shipments of perishable goods. A special officer will be engaged to pass the fruit.

WHY ONE MAN STOPPED TAKING CANADIAN GROCER.

New Liskeard, Ont., June 6th, 1912.

Editor, Canadian Grocer.—As I am out of the grocery business and working at the hardware, it would greatly oblige me if you would cancel The Canadian Grocer you have been mailing and send me The Hardware & Metal.

I consider The Canadian Grocer one of the best investments I made in book line; am trusting I will be able to say same about Hardware & Metal. I remain,

Yours truly,
ASA E. JEWELL.

The Toronto Retail Grocers' Association will hold their annual excursion to Niagara Falls on July 17, via Niagara Navigation Co. It was their intention to go to Grimsby Beach on July 24, but satisfactory arrangements could not be made. Arrangements for the excursion as well as several important trade matters, will be taken up at their meeting on Monday night, June 17.

Western Canada.

J. Brand, grocer, Winnipeg, has sold to H. Arthur.

C. C. Cronk, grocer, Moose Jaw, has sold to Thompson & Loucke.

E. T. Jones, general merchant, Canora, Sask., has sold to W. J. Reid.

T. R. Harrison, grocer, Calgary, Alta., has sold both his stores.

W. Stewart Campbell has opened a grocery store at Port Mann, B. C.

A. W. Gilbart, general merchant, Erickson, Man., has sold to F. Campbell.

N. J. Nicholson has purchased the general store of C. H. Carroll, Marquis, Sask.

M. Snow, general merchant, Keeler, Sask., is succeeded by Morin & Longthorn.

W. D. Gunson & Co., Yeomans, Sask., has sold his general store to E. J. Butterworth.

Moses Cohen is discontinuing grocery business at Winnipeg and locating at Melville.

H. H. Ruh, general merchant, Flagstone, B. C., has disposed of his business.

J. T. Jordan, general merchant, Lewvan, Sask., has succeeded the Lewvan Mercantile Co.

Whiddon & Richardson, grocers of Saskatoon, Sask., are going out of business.

The grocery stock of the Wilson Estate, Winnipeg, has been sold to I. B. Dugman.

Escott & Harmer, grocery brokers, Winnipeg, Man., have established their own offices at Regina, Calgary, and Edmonton, so as to be in a position to attend to their trade in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The Knight Sugar Co., with a beet sugar factory at Raymond, Alta., is receiving a shipment of 2,700,000 pounds of raw cane sugar from the British West Indies, which they will refine in their factory.

F. R. McMillan, Saskatoon, Sask., will erect a departmental store. He recently took a trip through Canada and the United States for ideas and expects to have a model store. It is estimated that the interior fittings will cost about $203,000.

The convention of the Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada will be held on September 18 and 19 this year and not on June 13, 14 and 15, as announced in last week's issue. This postponement was made necessary owing to the death of J. T. Hall, the permanent secretary. Since his demise the work has naturally been somewhat neglected. Chas. Webster, secretary Calgary Board of Trade, has been appointed to the permanent secretaryship, and preparations are underway for a good convention. It will be held at Moose Jaw, Sask., this year.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Spices—General firmness.

Rice—Quite strong.

Sugar—Somewhat of a puzzle.

Montreal, June 13.—The cold spell of last week interfered with business to a certain extent, but the present warm weather will give business quite an impetus and make things even more satisfactory than at present, though no complaints from wholesalers are forthcoming, as general activity has been the rule for the past number of weeks.

Collections are reported not so good as usual, and the chief cause may be given as speculation. Montreal is now under a real estate boom, and it looks as if the surplus of many is being laid away quietly in Mother Earth.

The sugar market is again becoming somewhat of a puzzle, while the coffee market is a little easier, but evidently not for long.

SUGAR.—While refined has advanced in New York, there is no change in the local market, and there does not seem to be any likelihood of a decline just now. There is a considerable amount of business passing now that the preserving season is at hand, and those dealers who were simply buying from hand-to-mouth will hardly make any mistake in spreading out some.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES—The same strong feeling prevails on the molasses market, but no one will say that a further advance is certain. The demand is good and will last. Barbados reports that all their molasses has been exported, but it is believed that all has not yet been shipped; if there is any remaining, it will not affect the market much.

Syrup trade has slackened somewhat during the past two weeks, but no great volume of business is done in this line during the summer.

DRIED FRUITS—The local market shows little change. The jobbing trade report just the usual amount of business, which passes at this time of the year. California prunes are most active on the coast, the orders being for futures. There is considerably less speculation in prunes this year, and even foreign buyers are only ordering in small quantities to fill immediate calls.

Apricots are quiet, and it is likely that a little shading will take place in order to clear up stocks. There should be a better demand from bakers during the next few weeks for peaches, and the improvement in demand will no doubt be appreciated.

The demand for California seeded raisins is slow, and the market on the whole is doubtful. We spoke last week of a probable shortage of currants in Greece. Since then more optimistic reports have come to hand, and a better market is expected.

TEAS—The new season being now open there is considerable activity in Japans, prices ranging from one cent to two cents over last year. Fancy teas show the least advance, while teas in the grade 25-26 cents (being the lowest grades on the market) show the greatest. The season, of course, is somewhat later than last year, and picking is only now becoming general. Frost during the early part of April caused the setback, but the weather during May was good, with the result, a good crop. The bushes came to fine condition, but there was some tendency shown to resort to coarse picking, and in some cases it was impossible to secure as good style teas as in the past. As stated in recent issues, the cup quality, however, is fully equal to last year's, but some allowance must be made for the bolder style of the leaf.

COFFEE—The market has become a little weaker owing to refusal of injunction in the valorization case, which was expected to start in the United States. Trade, however, continues on the hand-to-mouth basis, there being nothing of any great interest to note. Still there is talk, but only talk, of higher prices in September, owing to the fact that the new crop may be late in moving, making it more difficult for the country to obtain actual supplies. However, little definite information along the new crop can be given, as it is much too early yet.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—Tapioca is in good demand, but the market does not present the same activity as the rice. The Rangoon market is strong, and prices will advance, even if they now are 50 per cent. higher than those obtaining this time last year. A Formosa report states that owing to increase in sugar planting it is estimated that the coming rice crop will be less than normal, and dealers are buying ahead at high prices. The markets, indeed, are all strong, and there is no indication whatsoever of weakness. Many eastern countries continue to draw on Rangoon for supplies to make up their own deficiencies. It is a question how long this will last.

SPICES.—The market remains firm, and peppers, which were somewhat easier last week, have firmed up. Cream of Tartar is also firming up. In fact, the situation is generally strong, and prices show an upward tendency.

Toronto, June 13.—There has been a general healthier and more active tone to grocery trade during past week. This is evident to those who have been visiting the wholesale houses, and was impressed upon the Grocer representative by the length of time he had to wait in many houses before being able to converse with the principals. Not only was there a good sprinkling of retailers purchasing in the houses, but orders were coming in over the 'phone from both city and country dealers. Orders were made up of general lines seasonable at this time.

In contrast to the general satisfactory trade reported in Canada is that existing on the other side of the line. Here is what one U.S. grocery paper says of conditions: "Not in many years has the first of June found the foodstuff markets of the Middle States in such a generally deplorable condition. Month after month during the late winter and early spring, the hope has been expressed that the sunshine and showers of April and May might dissipate the spell of apathy and stagnation that has hung over the country for so long. But it would seem that such was not the case—indeed such has not been the case."

Grocers are beginning to realize that summer and the demand for summer goods is really here, and they are buying and displaying those lines that the housewife naturally seeks at this time of the year. The picnic season is beginning to develop, and picnic and camping supplies will soon be in request, the more so as the fishing season opens on June 15, and there will be many excursions to lake and river. Canned goods will be in demand, more especially fish, including salmon, sardines, herrings and lobsters. Summer drinks, condensed milk and camp coffee are other lines.

Light breakfast foods, pickles, olives and sauces are other lines which held to put the public's appetite in trim. Pines are being preserved, while strawberries are now coming on, bringing a demand for sugar, fruit jars, rubber rings, etc. Fly destroyers are becoming a very seasonable line as well. Urge the housewife to get after the house fly early.

Sugar continues weak at last week's figure of $5.35, as against $4.70 a year ago. With market in present state, purchasing is for immediate wants. With preserving season about to open consumption should be good from now on. The Canada Sugar Refining Co., who in early part of year put a 5-pound carton on market, have now added a two-pound size as well. Both cost the retailer 30 cents per cwt. over bags; but 5-lb. is packed 24 to case, and 2-lb. 60 to case. There is no fixed selling price.

There have been advances and advancing tendencies in several lines of late which are not accustomed to fluctuate. Wrapping paper is firmer and quoted 10 per cent. higher by several manufacturers. Another advance is that in all kinds of canned beef, while jellied veal has had a big rise. Pork and beans are firm, with some canners said to be asking higher figures.

While it is not general, some brands of English pickles are higher. One jobber referred to one brand that is up 25 cents per dozen on pints. Canadian pickle men appear to have made no alteration in prices.

As has been noted before, marmalade is higher this year, the advance over last year ranging from 10 to 20 cents per dozen. Higher sugar is one cause, while a contributing factor in this, as well as pickles, is higher prices on glass bottles and jars.

SUGAR.—There is no further change in refined prices. Market is pretty well a repetition of last week, with situation rather uncertain, and dealers awaiting a further readjustment. On the whole market at moment is weak, as reflected in both Cuban, raws and European beets. The negro uprising in Cuba was a firming factor a short time ago, but this year's crop is pretty well progressed, so that this steadying feature has disappeared. It is difficult to gauge what future may hold in sugar, but market at present is still weak.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES. — There are no price changes to record in either syrups or molasses. Naturally with butter more reasonable demand for syrup is quieter, but a seasonable trade is reported. Unlike a few years ago, there is a steady demand for both corn and maple syrup right through the summer months.

Barbados molasses is firm, and reports from that island say there are no further shipments to offer, the entire crop having now been marketed.

DRIED FRUITS.—There is nothing particularly new in spot situation. "Trade is pretty draggy," was one wholesaler's comment. "Nothing to crow about," said another. "Fairly good for season," said yet another.

There is perhaps a little stiffer tone to evaporated apples. Wholesalers say that they are carrying small stocks and that there are few offering.

Although there is little in the way of booking on part of wholesalers, interest is being directed towards futures. Prunes are, of course, an important item and opinions from different sources regarding the 1912 crop vary greatly. There is even a great variation in ideas as to probable size of California crop. Things look far from promising in Oregon. One big dried fruit firm on Pacific coast have estimated world's crop this year as 348,000,000 pounds, as against 376,400,000 last year. They believe yield in California will be much the same as last year, namely, 200,000,000. Oregon and Washington are only given 8,000,000, as against 23,000,000 last year; Bosnia and Servia 60,000,000, as against 103,400,000 last year, and France 30,000,000, as against 50,000,000 last year. They allow 50,000,000 carryover this year, while last year there was none.

TEA.—There is no material change in general tea situation, either here or elsewhere. No great interest is as yet shown in new crop Japan. The market is generally higher than last year, fancy showing the least upward movement. Cup quality of samples has been generally good.

SPICES. — As reported last week, there is general firmness in spices. Black and white pepper as well as allspice present a steady tone. Mace is much stronger, while celery seed has lost none of its firmness.

Trade is satisfactory and with opening of pickling season litle over six weeks away, wholesalers are looking for a continued good movement.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.—As pointed out last week there is a general strong tone to rice. This includes nearly all varieties, and prices in the producing sections of the East have been moving upward. "Rangoon market has been very excited," says an English report. "Continental millers have advanced their prices for Java. Bassein is very scarce, and it is difficult to get any quantity free from stained grains. Patua has also risen 1 shilling per cwt."

WRAPPING PAPER.—A few weeks ago paper bags were advanced about 15 per cent. It was pointed out at that time that wrapping paper would probably advance also. Several firms have raised prices. The upward movement has been about ten per cent. This is the amount noted by one firm at least. The increased cost of raw material as well as higher wages that now has to be paid in the mills is the reason assigned for the advance. It will also be interesting to the grocer to know that note books, writing papers and similar lines are also higher.

The varieties of wrapping paper used mostly by grocery trade are Manila, grey wrapping and fibre. No. 2 Manila is quoted at $3.85 per cwt., grey wrapping at $3 per cwt., and fibre at $4.25. Brown wrapping paper costs $3.25. Slightly higher prices are asked for small lots.

CANNED GOODS.

Toronto.—Those dealers who have been watching the soaring price on beef and other fresh meats will not be surprised to learn of an advance in canned beef and jellied veal. Manufacturers in advancing prices, point out increasing cost of raw material.

The advance in beef has been about 10 per cent. Corned beef in 1's, which was formerly $2, is now $2.25, while 2's, formerly $3.35 are now $3.75. These same figures apply to roast, boiled and ready lunch beef as well.

Jellied veal has shown a much larger advance. The price on 1's is up from $2.20 to $3.30, on 2's from $3.00 to $5.75, and on 6's from $14.40 to $17.25 per dozen.

All these lines are just beginning to move freely, being big sellers during the summer months.

Every retail dealer knows how prices on white beans have been going upward. It is needless to say that manufacturer's profits on pork and beans have been reduced to a fine point, and that this line is firm. Some canners are said to be asking firmer figures, but there has been no general advance as yet. "Do you think beans are going up?" one broker was asked. "Well, they won't go down," he replied. "You can bank on that."

Several jobbers note salmon as moving well. From now on there will be a good demand for this line. More wholesalers have received their first shipment of new pack lobsters. From $2.90 to $3 is being asked for ½'s.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Canned Beef.—Advanced.

Sugar—Steady.

Cocoanut—½ cent dearer.

Winnipeg, June 13.—Wholesalers report business done in the month of May as greatly in excess of that in same month in 1911. The business outlook continues satisfactory, and orders are coming in freely since June 1.

Sugar market has remained steady during week, with a steadily improving demand.

There is nothing new in coffee situation as regards a reduction of price. The litigation now going on in United States in connection with alleged coffee trust is being watched with considerable interest by local trade.

There is now a good demand for what may be called vacation groceries, the better class of canned goods, jams, etc. Many city people are opening up their summer cottages at Lake resorts, and they usually stock up extensively, with easily prepared viands when doing so. In this connection an advance of thirty to forty cents a case on corned beef is announced.

The crop situation is considered excellent, and labor is well employed at good wages. Taken all round the business outlook in the West is first rate.

SUGAR.—Sugar prices are steady and demand is good and will improve with opening of preserving season at end of month. Native fruits promise an excellent crop.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, June 13.—With exception of a drop in sugar and oatmeal, markets during past week have been exceptionally quiet. Sugar, it is said by local wholesalers, has reached pretty nearly lowest mark anticipated, and may probably stay at present quoting for some time. Market in oatmeal which has been steady and unchanged for some time has dropped 25c per barrel. Otherwise there are no changes of interest.

In the country market potatoes are still plentiful, and range from $2.25 to $2.50, while eggs and butter are much cheaper than formerly. Price asked on eggs went as low as 18 cents retail in some sections last week, while butter could be bought for 20 cents. Cheese is a little easier also.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, June 13.—The most important change in the local grocery list this week is another drop of ten cents per hundred pounds in the price of all grades of refined sugar. Quotations now are: Extra standard granulated, $5.30; United Empire, $5.10; Bright Yellow, $5.10; No. 1 Yellow, $4.80; Unbranded, $4.75. There is a slightly better demand for sugar at the lower prices.

Butter is now coming on market in better supply, principally in small tubs, but the prices continue to hold up. The best stock is quoted at 26 cents.

Creamery continues firm, with no change in the price. Eggs are in fair demand at 21 cents for the best stock.

Business generally is reported to be in a good condition, and collections are fully up to expectations for the season of the year.

A FREIGHT WRECK SALE.

Vancouver, B.C., May 29.—In full page newspaper space, Wood & Sons Old Stores, Granville street, Vancouver, B.C., recently set forth a striking advertisement under the heading, "A Fearful Freight Wreck." A line drawing is used showing a wrecked freight train with boxes of dried fruits, sugar, soap, groceries, clothing, etc., strewn all over the ground. The idea was to convey that "wreck" prices were made on certain goods that had been in a freight wreck.

The introduction read:— "$50,000 worth of dry goods, clothing, shoes, boots, sugar, soap, etc., bought from the railroad company—together with Wood bankrupt stock—purchased from the assignees at 28c. on the dollar—sacrificed at mere fractions of original worth. Sale starts Friday morning at 10. Come early.

"This sale will eclipse any of its kind ever held in Vancouver, etc."

TIMES HAVE CHANGED SOME.

"In the old days in our grocery store," says a retail grocer, "we never closed without going around trying all the doors in town, for fear some one might be up who possibly would need some groceries. And as for opening in the morning—well, one morning I got to the store at 5 o'clock, and the boss wanted to know where I had been all forenoon."

Grocers' Letter Box

The Canadian Grocer solicits enquiries for this Column on Trade Questions. If you desire the manufacturer of any line of goods, where an article can be secured, etc., etc., write us.

Editor Canadian Grocer. — The business men of this town are trying to get the council to pass an early closing by-law for three nights a week. Is such a by-law legal? Can we compel those to close who do not sign the petition?

D. A. HEWGILL,

Milton, Ont.

(Editorial Note.—From our investigations we would say that such a by-law can be legally passed by the council of any municipality in Ontario, and that all can be compelled to close, whether they sign the petition or not. This is with the exception of druggists, who are allowed some special privileges.

There are two ways of securing early closing. If three-quarters of those engaged in any line of business petition the council, it has to pass a by-law covering that line of business, and all dealers must comply with it. Or the council may itself, without any petition, pass such a by-law covering one or all lines of trade.

"Here's some fish, sir, marked C.O.D."

"Send it away. I ordered shad."

Mill Feed Lower--Flour Market Steady

Bran and Shorts Both Lower in Price—Falling Off in Demand for Feed Gives Somewhat Steadier Tone to Flour — Rolled Oats Unchanged Since Last Week's Decline—Demand Inclined to Quietness.

A feature of the week is an easier turn to mill feed, both bran and shorts showing a dormant tendency. It will be remembered that bran was reduced a couple of weeks ago, while shorts remained steady. This time, however, shorts as well joined in the downward movement, and there has been a general decline of $1 per ton in both these lines. There has been a let up in demand for feeds, as is usual with the coming of an abundance of grass. There is, however, more call for shorts than bran.

Flour is unchanged, although with a decline in mill feeds, more strength is thrown on flour and there is a steadier tone. "Manitoba flour is strong, and I wouldn't be surprised at an advance," stated one miller, pointing to the added steadiness by reason of this. "However," he tamed down his prediction, "I wouldn't guarantee that." One reason that some millers rather doubt any advance in flour is that trade is at present on quiet side. Retailers apparently are fairly well supplied while buying continues of a hand-to-mouth character.

General situation in rolled oats is not changed since the recent decline of 15 cents per sack. Trade in heavy cereals usually falls off to some extent during warm weather and history is apparently repeating itself this year.

The world's visible supply of wheat is 160,265,000 bushels against 135,657,000 last year, which is an increase of 24,608,000 bushels. Stocks of wheat in Fort William are 6,804,141 bushels, a decrease of 1,025,000 bushels from last week. Last year at this date stocks were about three million bushels.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—The market is steady and full attention is given to the coming crop, everyone being on the lookout for information about possible output, etc. There is considerable inquiry from England for flour, but prices are away out and little business has been transacted.

FLOUR.—Business in flour is rather quiet, export trade being decidedly dull. As far as domestic demand is concerned, dealers say it is no more quiet than other years at this season.

Flour holds a steady position, perhaps strengthened to some extent by easing off in feed prices. Winter wheat grades under small offerings and poor prospects are steady.

WILL DAIRY EXPORTS DISAPPEAR?

Montreal, June 6.—Montreal produce man predicts the end of Canada's dairy export business within the next four years. He bases this prediction on the fact that for the past few years Canada's dairy exports have fallen off and that there is every reason to believe that they will continue to do so in the near future. He further states that while Canada's population has been increasing by leaps and bounds, its butter and cheese production has not been increasing anywhere in proportion. He points out that the internal trade between the east and west is drawing from our export trade, and that this will increase until there is none left for foreign trade.

This opinion is not held by all, for some dealers say that the past is no pattern for the future. It is contended by others that the three Northwest provinces will eventually become the great producers of butter and cheese, which will be forced upon them by mixed farming.

It seems a question for time to solve.

The Handlers of Confectionery in the West

Outside of Larger Cities It is Practically All in Hands of Grocers and General Dealers—The Masses the Greatest Consumers of High Class Goods—Profits are Good.

In Western Canada the retail grocer sells a lot of confectionery and makes good money from it, too. Owing to the fact that there are such a large number of towns in the West with a limited population, the exclusive confectioner would not find his business very remunerative.

The grocer in all these towns is in a position to cater for a very wide range of trade, and it is evident that the majority of them have taken advantage of the opportunity to stock confectionery, and it is further evident that with the increasing stocks of confectionery which they are carrying year by year and the attention they pay to that department, that they find confectionery a valuable asset to their business.

Where the Masses Reside.

It must be remembered, however, that in the larger cities of the West, for instance, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Saskatoon and Vancouver, that exclusive confectionery shops may be found, and the number of shops in each city varies with the population of the city; but these cities are, after all, a small part of the West and the great mass of people deal in centres with a limited population.

Although in the above mentioned cities there are exclusive confectionery shops, in many cases they are not of the best type of stores, but are managed by people from foreign countries, who have inadequate knowledge of retail conditions here, and, to say the least, most of these shops present a very unattractive appearance.

Grocers Carry Larger Stocks.

This being the case the grocer in the large centres finds it greatly advantageous to carry complete lines of confectionery stock, and he is well enough experienced in retail merchandising to know that this stock must be kept attractive, and that attention must be paid to it. In doing so he is enhancing his success in that department.

The inferior merchant who handles an exclusive confectionery stock does not always carry the best confectionery, and he cannot appreciate a high class confection, such as the grocer can and does, and it is fully recognized that everywhere in Western Canada where there is a good grocery store, that that grocery will have a highly developed confectionery department.

Of late years it has been recognized that the high class brands of chocolates and creams done up in fancy boxes are not as popular, with the wealthy and with the social set as formerly, but even though this class of trade were well maintained, it could not hope to equal the great volume of trade which is now going on in this class of confectionery to the middle class.

The grocer in a small town surrounded by a well-to-do agricultural community can well afford to stock the very best standards of fine confectionery, as the number of customers for this class of goods is greater than any grocer or confectioner can hope to get from the more highly developed social class of any community. For this reason, the grocer everywhere in the West carries a full stock of confectionery, and has perhaps unconsciously taken advantage of this condition of the public mind.

The Preservative Qualities of Spices

At One Time Were Considered Indigestible—The Important Ingredient of a Spice is Its Essential Oil—Cinnamon Preserved Apple Juice—Southerners Like Mustard.

It was not uncommon to hear a few years ago that spice materials were indigestible and that spices themselves were rather an irritant than healthy stimulants of digestion. This idea is now disappearing under contradictory evidence of chemists.

Study of the preservative action of spices, demonstrates that such spices as cinnamon, cloves and mustard are valuable food preservatives, while nutmegs and allspice delay microbic growth of most kinds and thus help in the preservation of all foods with which they are mixed.

Essential Oils Valuable.

Nutmeg is used as a sedative in German medicine, replaces sleeping powders and would seem to be especially valuable for a restless people, such as our climate makes us.

The active antiseptic agents in these spices are their aromatic, or, as they are sometimes called, essential, oils. The essential oil of mustard is particularly active as an antiseptic. Cinnamon yields not only an essential oil, but also cinnamic aldehyde, which belongs to the same group of chemical substances as formaldehyde, the antiseptic action of which has made it very precious in recent years. Investigators declare that cinnamic aldehyde possesses a preservative action superior to that of benzoic acid, over the use of which there has rightly been so much discussion. Foods prepared with it keep much longer from spoiling than those to which no condiment is added.

Used Apple Sauce to Experiment.

The experiments were made on apple sauce, and it is possible to preserve specimens of this for long periods, even when exposed to the air, provided only abundant quantities of cinnamon are used in it.

It has often been a problem why men in warm countries like mustard and various other forms of rather hot spices. It would usually be thought that such additions to the diet were scarcely appropriate in the tropics, where the external heat would seem to be quite enough without any internal heating. It is in the hot countries, however, that food is particularly likely to spoil, and the use of mustard with it tends to neutralize such effects.

TESTING EARLY CLOSING BY-LAW.

Hamilton, Ont., June 13. — Seven Hamilton merchants who kept open in alleged violation of the early-closing by-law were before the magistrate last week. Their solicitor argued that the by-law was defective. The act under which it was framed stated that stores should close from 7 p.m. till 5 a .m. but the by-law provided that they should close at 6 p.m., and did not provide for any opening time. He thought that if a shopkeeper closed at 6 o'clock and opened again at 6.05 he would not violate the law according to the way it was framed. The magistrate reserved his decision.

The grocers are not connected with the early closing arrangement, only certain lines of business having petitioned for it. There is much opposition to the by-law by the smaller merchants and they have organized to oppose it.

Letters patent have been issued changing corporate name of "International Milling Company of Canada Limited" to "Continental Milling Company Limited."

Easiness in Both Old and New Potatoes

New Product Eased Off Rather Quickly and Holders of Old Potatoes at Several Centres Become Nervous — New Vegetables in General Easier—Canadian Strawberry Makes Its Debut—Good Demand for Pines.

There is a general easier turn to potatoes, and at several centres old stock, which has been noted this spring for scarcity and high price, is included as well as the new article. The easier tone has developed rather quickly, due to rapid increase in new product, which took place rather earlier than usual, and sooner than expected. Virginia has been the source of supply for Eastern Canada and offerings have been at a reduction.

This new turn has put rather a different complexion on old potato situation. Hitherto many holders have felt confident that there would yet be another squeeze before new season really arrived. This may yet be true at an odd centre, but at others, stocks are heavier than necessary, and dealers have become rather nervous and are offering price concessions. As prices lower on new potatoes, demand will naturally be shifted from the old stock. There appears no reason for any big slump, but the tone at many centres is decidedly easier.

New vegetables with advancing season are generally in larger supply and easier in price. This should work for increased sales in this department. Tomatoes are an exception to general trend and at present are scarce and high. Florida has now only a limited amount to offer, while Texas, although sending forward a few lots, is later than expected in getting under way. Mississippi is also about ready to ship.

The Canadian strawberry made its debut on Saturday last when one case from Essex arrived on Toronto market. This is a full week or more later than a year ago, and season is in general close on two weeks behind last year. Considerable quantities of straws are coming from the U. S., where crops are good, but duty necessarily adds to cost before they can be laid down at Canadian points.

Demand for pineapple continues good and large quantities are being sold to housewives for preserving purposes. Prices have been fairly cheap and probably have reached as low a point as they can be expected to touch this year. Cuba is still shipping, but will shortly begin to show a let up.

Attention was drawn last week to probability of high summer lemon market. Already it is beginning to take shape, and warm weather would no doubt make it more marked. Verdelli are due to arrive, and are worth even more than November cuts are now commanding.

MONTREAL.

FRUITS.—The lemon situation is becoming thoroughly interesting, and needs attention, as prices are showing an upward tendency, and it is quite probable that there will be a considerable increase later if the present cool weather does not continue. Trade in bananas continues heavy and warmer weather before us will bring about a further demand and possible increase. Oranges remain firm under steady demand. It is quite probable that navels are about exhausted, as it is noticeable that orders are passing to the growers for California late Valencias. Strawberries, as might be expected, are in really good demand, and are quoted at different prices, according to quality. But on the average, the price is fifteen cents, and that is hardly high, considering the levels reached by other fruits.

VEGETABLES. — It does seem strange that new potatoes at the minute are cheaper than the old; but there is no reason to look for a scarcity, as arrivals are pretty free. Carrots have been a little more plentiful, but prices are still high, and will remain so. Cucumbers have had a sudden fall, as also have beans, but the market fluctuates so frequently, that it is impossible to say how long they will remain at prices quoted. Canadian red onions are practically nil now, the Egyptian variety receiving most attention, and the demand is good.

New American vegetables will be on the market shortly, and their arrival should somewhat ease the situation.

GREEN FRUITS.—More seasonable weather is proving beneficial to fruit trade. There continues a good demand for pines, and they will probably be little or no cheaper.

The first case of Canadian strawberries came to Toronto market on Saturday last, just 1 week later than last year. Essex County was their source. Very limited quantities have come forward so far, and quite large shipments are coming from across the line, but prices have held quite steady.

The reference to lemons in last issue was well warranted. Already market is showing effects of stronger situation and $3.25 is being asked for fresh cuts, while November cuts are bringing as high as $4.50 per case. Verdelli are due to arrive and as pointed out last week, will be high, probably ranging from $4.50 to $5.00 per case. There are some California lemons on the market at $3.50 per box. Limes are selling better, bringing $1.50 per 100.

Watermelons as anticipated are easier and are selling well.

Apricots are arriving, bringing $2.50 to $3.00 per box. There will be some plums in latter part of this week.

VEGETABLES.—Vegetable situation is helped this week by more reasonable prices on several lines. On some new goods the reduction has been considerable, and should materially assist the sales of these lines. Among the lines which are lower are beets, carrots, cabbage, cucumbers, beans, radish and green peas. Large supplies at producing sections has been the cause.

Potato situation has undergone a considerable change of tone in past week or so. New potatoes have come along in substantial quantities, much earlier than usual this year, and prices have been on the slump, now selling at $5 per barrel locally. This low price was rather unexpected at this season, and has put a different color on old potato situation, and prices all along the line are easier, and although holdings are said to be in fairly safe compass, some dealers are nervous, and are cutting prices to reduce stocks. One city firm is offering English stock in 90 lb. bags at $1.50 per 5 bag lot, $1.40 per 10 bag lot, and $1.30 per 50 bag lot. There are others asking up as high as $1.90 for No. 1 New Brunswick.

Tomatoes hold steady. There will be some Mississippi stock in this week at $1.90 to $2 per 4 basket crate. Hothouse bring 21c lb.

Strawberry and Raspberry Crop Prospects

Drought of Last Summer the Primary Cause of Keeping Down Strawberry Yield—Prices Expected to be Fairly High —Big Crop in United States—Selling at Low Price There — Raspberries May be Better Than Year Ago.

From all accounts the strawberry crop of the Niagara Peninsula will be again short of the normal this year, and we may therefore expect fairly high prices for both fresh and preserved fruit.

Investigations made by The Grocer during the past week indicate that last year's drought has had a somewhat damaging effect on this year's prospects. Owing to the extremely dry summer, the strawberry plants did not run well, and many patches that were set out did not live or if they did produce a few runners, a considerable number of these on low ground were killed by the severe winter. The plants therefore began this spring under a handicap for a big crop.

Growing Vines Yielding Well.

Apart from this, the season so far has been favorable, and all the vines that came through the winter seem to promise a heavy crop. If there should be no untoward climatic influences, the crop, according to one fruit grower, might be as heavy as last year. This, however, is not saying a great deal, as owing to the prolonged drought the 1911 crop was very light, considering the showing there was at the beginning of the season.

What Might Have Been.

It has been estimated by one large grower that if the crop last year had turned out as heavy as anticipated it would probably have been the biggest the country ever produced.

The above opinion as to this year's prospects is corroborated by a large fruit preserver in the following statement to The Grocer: "Strawberries are certainly a short crop this season on account of the dry spell of 1911. The plants did not grow sufficiently to be strong enough to stand the hard winter. As I passed through the different strawberry sections, I found many patches, in places, winter killed."

He further stated that he would require 800 tons of strawberries for his own pack, and this will undoubtedly mean a large acreage in itself.

"Our own information," says another preserver, "is that the strawberry acreage is not so heavy as last year, owing to last year's drought. There is every indication, however, of a heavy yield according to whatever acreage there is."

Want Good Prices.

It is, of course, usual that growers who have berries for sale should be pessimistic as to yield, and hard luck stories appearing from time to time in the daily press should be taken with a grain of salt. But it is safe to say that the 1911 dry weather has had a far-reaching effect on this season's output. Under the circumstances it is difficult to anticipate with any definiteness what the crop will be, and consequently what prices will be as compared to last year.

Low Prices in U. S.

In the United States strawberries are an unusually heavy crop this season, in fact, they have been offered in carload lots as low as 4½c, f.o.b., shipping point, and as the boxes used there are almost 20 per cent. higher than Canadian boxes, the price is an exceedingly low one.

Outlook in Raspberries.

So far as raspberries are concerned, they will probably be better in comparison with last year. Raspberries have been a short crop for three years back, and therefore held over stocks of preserved fruit are small. There are those who do not expect a large yield. Some of the raspberry cane was affected by frost during the winter, but on some fruit farms prospects are fairly bright.

"I anticipate a crop of raspberries double that of last year," is the opinion of one grower, "but you must remember last year there was a particularly light crop in 1911, owing to the drought."

Black Looking for Blackberries.

As far as other small fruits are concerned the prospects seem to be bright with the exception of blackberries. Of these, such varieties as Lawton and Kittatinies have been almost annihilated, according to a grower, by the cold winter, so far as the crop this year is concerned, but no doubt such varieties as Snyder, Western Triumph and other varieties which are hardy should produce a crop all right.

Opportunities in Fish During Summer

Grocer Who Features Fish Can Work up an Appreciable Trade—A Good Summer Food— Opening of Fishing Season Brings Line Into Public Prominence—Mackerel Season at Its Height in Nova Scotia.

The usual summer trade in fish is reported from the various centres with conditions of much the same nature as have already been stated. Fresh fish constitute the bulk of business with a certain trade being done in smoked varieties.

Mackerel fishing is at its height on the Nova Scotia coast. Cape Breton appears to be having a fairly good season, although handicapped somewhat by lack of bait. Salmon is now in greater supply in East, while New Brunswick reports shad season well to an end.

Retail dealers would do well to consider the harvest to be reaped by handling fish during summer months. Fish are without doubt an excellent summer food, and if handled properly an appreciable trade may be created by the retail grocer.

The fishing season is opening up in many of the provinces. It opens in Ontario on June 15. Now this might be considered as detrimental to the fish department, but such is not the case. It brings fish prominently before the public, and as a good many have not the opportunity of visiting lake or river to secure their own, they naturally turn to the dealer for a substitute.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—For the season fish trade must be considered thoroughly satisfactory, and all leading lines are well looked after. There seems to be a greater interest taken in fish by the retail grocers, and it is a good and profitable line to handle. Prices on all lines are unchanged.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—General situation is running along in much the same shape as during past few weeks. There appears to be a moderate trade for season, about the same lines are selling while volume of receipts shows little or no change.

White fish and trout are selling well, while halibut, herrings, pike and pickerel are all doing well.

Open season for game fish in Ontario commences on June 15 and this will bring fish more into public prominence. This is the time for the grocer to give special atention to this department.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.—Feature of fish market during past week has been arrival of first real supplies of salmon. There have been a few caught during past fortnight, but they were not received in any quantities to speak of until a day or two ago. Wholesale, they are quoted at 18 cents per pound, while retail prices vary according to cut from 25 to 30 cents a pound.

Shad season is about finished and few are now being caught about St. John. Heavy shipments were made to Upper Canada, both of shad and gaspereaux while they were plentiful, but now both of these are about done. Large catches of mackerel are reported from along the coast and from Whitehead alone report was that for one day's fishing there had been 10,000 mackerel. This species of fish have been schooling in great numbers along the coast but disagreeable weather has interferred with fishermen in their work during past week since the fish have set in. Should finer weather continue there is reason to believe that the mackerel catch would be a record-breaker.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—The mackerel fishing on the Nova Scotia coast is now at its height and dealers and fishermen are working day and night. About ten thousand mackerel were landed here last week. Most of these fish were packed in ice and shipped to Boston.

There are good signs of fish along the coast, but they are wild and no large hauls have been made at any one time.

Salmon are now coming on the market in better supply and the price is lower.

Advices received here from Newfoundland state that owing to bad weather catches of codfish are below the average.

There is practically nothing doing at present in export of salt or dried fish. Foreign markets are not in satisfactory condition, and prices are lower.

Downward Tendency to Butter Prices

At Many Centres—Receipts are on Increase—Demand From West Has Fallen Off—Premium on Best Select Eggs—Supplies are Large and Some are Still Being Stored—New Cheese Shows Signs of Wavering.

That undertone of easiness which has been noted in butter for past week or so, but which was accompanied by little or no change in actual quotations is beginning to show more tangible evidence of its presence, and this week there have been some downward moves in prices at several centres. The East has perhaps shown the most marked easiness. At Cowansville, Que., on Saturday, the ruling price was 25 cents, a drop of more than a cent a pound below the previous week.

The tardy return of prices to normal is caused by several reasons. Markets were exceedingly bare when new goods began to come forward, and even when receipts began to be appreciable on Eastern markets, a strong call from the West prevented any accumulation. Reports from the West indicate, however, that Alberta and Saskatchewan will now be able to supply the needs in that direction. Season in general is progressing nicely, pastures being in excellent condition and receipts should continue substantial. Dealers therefore believe that the future holds a certain amount of easiness in butter. A counteracting factor just now is that many factories are turning from production of butter to cheese.

With advent of warmer weather there is generally a premium on guaranteed select eggs. Dealers at most centres state there is already considerable shrinkage, and that when receipts have gone through candling process prices are increased considerably. Speaking generally, there is softer tone to eggs with lower prices being paid in country.

There is a certain amount of storing being done. It is still maintained at certain centres prices are rather high for this. Reports from 41 produce houses in U. S. show supplies on hand on June 1 as 2,626,900 cases, 20,200 cases over last year at this time. Canadian situation is said to be somewhat on a par with this showing.

What has been said of old cheese in the past can be repeated. Stocks are well to an end at practically every centre, and nothing but a good strong front can be looked forward to. New cheese has maintained a stiffer position than many anticipated, but values at country boards show an inclination to waver, indicating that dealers feel with good June make it is probable that prices would point downward.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—Prices for all lines are steady with a fair trade passing in hams and bacon, but the other lines are quiet.

Lard commands a fair volume of business, and while prices are the same, nevertheless an advance is not at all unlikely as the number of hogs marketed is not as large as usual.

BUTTER.—The feature of the butter market is the weaker feeling which has developed, the cause being given as increased offerings from the country; the accumulation of stock on spot, and the falling off in the demand from outside sources for supplies.

CHEESE.—Prices remain steady and the trade is remarkably good for this time of year, still the undertone in new cheese is somewhat weaker. Shortly supplies will be a great deal heavier and prices must come down. Large Westerns are asked for strongly.

POULTRY. — During the summer months, when a large number of boats are in port, there is always a strong demand for poultry and all lines receive attention. Turkeys are in good demand and remain firm at twenty-four cents for No. 1, while the minimum price for the next grade is 22 cents.

Fowls are not so plentiful just now, and a slight advance may be quoted if supplies are not better within the next week or so.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS.—Movement of provisions is quite satisfactory, sales shaping more towards smoked and cooked meats, which are always in greater request during warm weather. Lard is again somewhat firmer, around 14 cents being asked for tierces. Fact that butter is not as yet exactly cheap keeps sales of lard at good level.

BUTTER.—There is an easier tone to butter this week, and a general tendency to reduce quotations. Indeed, more than one firm note a decline of 1 cent per pound. There has been more coming along, while let up in demand from West has brought about an easier turn and wholesalers are paying lower prices in the country. Prices are lower in Quebec as well, and it looks like still further easiness ahead. Dairy goods are now confined to prints and solids, it being impossible to ship rolls just now.

EGGS.—Eggs are coming along in goodly quantities, and there would be considerable easiness were situation not balanced somewhat by good demand. There is some stock still going into storage. While there is no material change in local quotations, prices are down in the country, 18 to 19 cents being paid this week. Shrinkage is already quite marked, and candled stock here is bringing 23 cents.

CHEESE. — "Those who have old cheese can get almost what they want for it," said one dealer this week. Stocks are exceedingly small, and now in a couple of hands locally, and therefore firm. There has been no large accumulation of new cheese, and situation has continued quite steady. Certain dealers think that perhaps market is a little high, as June production should be large. Slight waverings at country boards also indicates this feeling.

Outlet for Surplus Country Store Produce

Mount Forest Firm Establish Retail Store in Toronto—What They Purchase From Farmers is Sent on to the City—Make Sure Butter and Eggs are of Good Quality—All Eggs Candled.

As an outlet for the surplus produce and dairy products taken from farmers in exchange for goods, R. Scott & Co., general merchants of Mount Forest, Ont., conduct a store at 678 Bloor St. West, Toronto. The Toronto branch is known as the Mount Forest Produce Co., and is in charge of S. C. Maltey, a man of several years' experience in the butter and egg business.

It is his contention that many country stores lose no little trade on account of not being able to take all the produce offered by farmers for the reason that they are not able to dispose of it to advantage. This was the reason that Scott & Co. opened a branch in Toronto, where there is always a good demand for quality farm produce. This store has been established now for over a year.

Began With Butter and Eggs.

It was the idea of the firm at first to handle only butter and eggs and kindred lines, secured at the Mount Forest store; but as many customers asked why they did not handle groceries as well, they finally decided to stock this line also.

Butter and eggs are the chief lines brought in from the country, poultry and potatoes being imported at certain seasons. During winter, shipments are brought by express daily, and sometimes oftener. In summer the firm secures weekly shipments, which come in refrigerator cars. The goods are quickly transferred to the store, where they have a refrigerator with a capacity of 4,800 pounds of butter. Butter is handled in prints only.

Make Sure of the Quality.

The system which the company has, makes certain that goods sent out to customers are fresh and of good quality. This is in itself considered an advertisement, and brings customers back again, while satisfied patrons pass the word along to their friends, and a good deal of advertising is thus secured.

Why Bad Eggs are Sold.

There has been a great deal of complaint made by country merchants and wholesalers regarding bad and stale eggs, boiled eggs, nest eggs, and anything in the shape of an egg which farmers insist on marketing. Mr. Maltey, manager of the Mount Forest Produce Co., has had a wide experience in the egg business, and believes this is to a large extent the fault of the merchants themselves, who are afraid to take a decided stand against the marketing of such eggs, lest they should lose a little custom and because they do not understand eggs and cannot tell stale ones from fresh.

"The only solution of the problem," maintains Mr. Maltey, "is for the merchant to candle the farmers' eggs as they are brought in. At our Mount Forest store we have a man who thoroughly understands candling, and eggs that are not fresh are rejected. The farmer has no right to sell stale eggs, and if all merchants would take a firm stand, this in justice would soon disappear.

Rejected Thirty Dozen.

"Last winter I had a man bring 30 dozen eggs into the store. He said they were just in fresh from the country, and wanted fresh egg price for them. I saw they were not even second class, and would not take them. Some grocer probably bought them at a fancy price, and sold them for strictly fresh. If he had understood eggs, he also would have rejected them."

Mr. Maltey told of another interesting experience in Mount Forest. A farmer's wife brought in 40 dozen eggs. Now it takes a big flock of hens to produce that many eggs in a period of time which would assure them all being fresh.

"You must have quite a few hens?" he remarked.

"No, not very many," was the reply.

Over Half Above Age Limit.

This answer gave her away. Suspicions were aroused, and it was decided to candle them. It certainly paid, too, for over half, to be exact 20 dozen and 10 were found to be over the age limit. If they had not been candled in her presence, the loss would have had to be borne by the merchant, or some one else in the line of distribution.

"And they call them the honest farmers," was Mr. Maltey's comment.

Did Not Prosecute.

"The merchant who purchased these eggs is one who does not candle his receipts. He would probably send them on to a commission house and wonder at the poor returns, or, if customers who got them complained that they were all bad, he would probably regard them as prevaricators.

"He was told that they were bad. Did he prosecute this woman for selling food she knew to be unfit for consumption? No, he did not. 'It would lose her trade and probably that of her friends and neighbors,' was his excuse for not doing so."

ROYAL YEAST CAKES

WHY EXPERIMENT?

Grocers: Royal Yeast Cakes, like all of the products of this Company, have, on account of their superior quality, long been acknowledged as the standard of Canada. They have given perfect satisfaction for so many years that the attempt to experiment with unknown brands may, and likely will, cause the loss of valued customers.

Facts Concerning Bovril

The fame of our immense manufactory has been built around just this one product. There are numerous imitations, but there is nothing that enjoys the reputation of BOVRIL, or that possesses its vitalizing power, or that can give the same appetizing flavor and toothsomeness when added to other foods.

The BOVRIL estates cover: in the Argentine, 438,082 acres; in Australia, 9,261,400 acres.

YOUR SUGGESTION

To The June Bride

will no doubt result profitably for you through a sale — if you suggest an Ermaline Cooking Bag.

There is nothing that helps to make the newly-wed more interested in her home than the knowledge that she is observing modern methods.

Tell her of the possibility of making roasted meats more tender, juicy and sweeter, and the many other advantages that she could obtain through the use of the Ermaline Cooking Bags.

Don't overlook this season, Mr. Grocer, for doing a good sale in Ermaline Cooking Bags. It will pay you well.

Ask your wholesaler, or write us for particulars.

A Satisfaction-Giving Dish

Every user of Cox's Gelatine may be put down as so much sure business for your store. Its superior quality has worked a "good will" that will always be yours and mean business that will grow indefinitely.

For upwards of a century the name Cox has been connected with the making of Gelatine. To-day it towers over all competitors and is the tribute to genuiness of British manufacture, because it has not varied one iota from that perfection attained years ago.

Imitations are Not Succeeding

The sales of Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes are increasing every month.

There can be no stronger proof of the worth of an article than the fact that it is being imitated.

During the present season there is an enormous bid for cereal goods. Have you the stock that will sell?

Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes have the largest sale of any cereal in Canada. Is not this a commendatory feature that speaks for high quality and saleability of this popular food?

"Sunny Monday Bubbles Will Wash Away Your Troubles"

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY, MONTREAL

THE TEST OF SERVICE

Few electric coffee mills develop trouble in the first year of their service. To the new owner, enthusiastic over the beauty and convenience of his new mill, what is out of sight is more than likely to be out of mind.

But to the level head buyer the value of foresight in what is out of sight needs no explaining. He knows that on these parts depend the life and service of his mill. Many a COLES mill is to-day, after three or four years service, giving just as good satisfaction as when it came fresh from the factory. Is this kind of service worth anything to you?

Buy a better Laundry Blue.

Playing a great part at the tail end of the wash, every Blue has to satisfy the searching eye of the critical woman, which means every woman. If it does not satisfy—if in purity, strength, and colour it fails under the microscope of experience—somebody at the counter is going to face a "breeze." "OCEAN" Blue signifies not strength alone, or brilliant colour only, or purity, but all three—as much of them as can be packed into the best 5 cent packets sold. And they never vary, or somebody would have said so.

STANDARD BLENDS

To the Grocer:

Dear Sir—Possibly in the past you have been imposed upon by Tea Dealers selling you teas that have been anything but right and consequently you are sceptical of our offer.

There is no necessity to be so, for the simple reason that you have nothing to lose, nothing even to risk.

When a reputable Firm has such confidence in the value they are offering, that they undertake to take back, at their own expense, goods that do not give satisfaction—rest assured there is something in the offer.

If you do not care to mail your order right away—at least send us a card for free samples. Test them by making Tea for your own household. Have their opinion on the merit of the respective Blends, and as sure as we write this advertisement your order will follow.

In those districts where there are numbers of Old Country folk do not fail to order STAR at 27c. per lb., as it is just the Tea they used to drink in the Old Land, and they will buy regularly.

Take us at our word and send along your order.

Talking to the Point

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS get right down to the point at issue. If you want something, say so in a few well-chosen words. Readers like that sort of straight-from-the-shoulder-talk, and that is the reason why condensed ads are so productive of the best kind of results.

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS are always noticed. They are read by wide-awake, intelligent dealers, who are on the look out for favorable opportunities to fill their requirements.

Things Seldom Just "Happen"

There are sound reasons, if you look for them.

Red Rose Tea is as distinctive in cup quality as it is in name. This didn't just "happen." The reason is that in Red Rose Tea we use a proportion of the rich, strong teas of Northern India—teas grown in the district of Assam, where the tea bush is said to have had its origin, and where it grows so luxuriantly that the bush in its wild state sometimes reaches a height of 25 ft. or more.

These teas, when blended with the finer sorts of Ceylon teas give that rich strength, and pleasing flavor which are the distinctive characteristics of Red Rose Tea: especially so in the Blue Label quality.

THE EDWARDSBURG STARCH CO. LIMITED

MONTREAL—CARDINAL—TORONTO—BRANTFORD—VANCOUVER

A Quebec City Store Front appropriate for the Ancient Capital. Four large display windows and a broad glass door are to be seen.

The Store Front--As Business Builder

Should Have Some Distinctive Character to Attract Business—A Quebec City Store Exterior With Four Display Windows — The Value of Favorable First Impression—Lighting of the Display Window.

That a man is known by the clothes he wears, is considered much of a truism these days. The careless, ill-dressed individual who mopes along in half-hearted fashion, isn't likely to create much of a furore in the office of an employer of salesmen, technical or skilled labor.

The exterior of the store is somewhat analagous to the exterior of a man. No particular customer is attracted by a dirty, uninviting store front. She would not likely give the service of such a store even a chance to make good. On the other hand cases are numerous where the front of the store has been the means of securing not only occasional business but permanent customers. Such an exterior becomes a valuable asset; it is a business builder and therefore merits careful attention when a new building is being planned or an old one remodelled.

The Favorable First Impression.

First impressions, says the artist, are usually best. When he erases his original sketch his ideal sometimes disappears. His second effort is inadequate to improve or even equal his first impression.

The same applies to the purchaser of food stuffs. The woman or man on a shopping expedition, whose first impression of a store exterior, is favorable, will frequently be found later on to be a regular customer of that store. It sometimes takes a great deal of inadequate service inside the store to dispel the power of the original idea formed.

It must also be realized that the store front has the first call on a passerby towards getting new business. The windows, the doorway, the architecture and the building itself either speak out to the public to come, or they repel.

An Introspection Advisable.

Many dealers, however, are blind to their own shortcomings. Robert Burns' immortal prayer on "Wad some po'er the giftie gie us," etc., has not yet been answered to many of us. We fail to see the beam in our own eye, but even a mote looms large in that part of our neighbor's. This presents a splendid opportunity in the study of store fronts. By getting out and observing the exteriors of other establishments; by noticing the attracting powers of the windows and doorway, and taking it all to heart, one can easily see the defects and advantages and apply them to his own case.

There is character to the store front illustrated above. It comes from the old city of Quebec, and one who is familar with the architecture of the ancient stronghold will realize its appropriateness. A. Grenier, the proprietor, is one of Quebec's progressive dealers. He realizes the selling power of attractive windows set in a distinctive store front. With four display windows always available and an inviting doorway, he secures considerable business that otherwise would go elsewhere.

Advanced Store Front Ideas.

The planning and erection of store fronts has reached a degree of importance that calls for manufacturers who make this work a specialty. In many of the present day retail establishments scientific and practical principles are introduced which were unheard of a few years ago. For instance manufacturers of store fronts are urging the use of copper, brass, bronze and aluminum, as these metals do not rot, rust, nor is it necessary to paint or decorate them in any way. Insurance, too, is saved.

Improvements have been rapid in devices for regulating ventilation and drainage. By means, for instance, of a metal sash, ventilation can be regulated by simply operating a slide. In winter this prevents the accumulation of frost, and if desired the entrance of air can be entirely cut off.

The lighting of the front window at night calls for a few remarks. It should be remembered that the light should always come from the top, and the lights so located that they are not visible to the passerby. Critics, too, claim that lights should not be placed in vertical rows as they are glaring to the eyes and detract from the richness of the display.

Help the Housewife Kill the House Fly

Now is the Time to Sell Fly Destroyers—Advice on Why the Pest Should be Done Away With Early Will be Worth While —Ridding the Store of Flies Necessary to Hold and Attract Custom—Watch the Window.

It is not an uncommon sight at this time of the year to see the busy housewife with grim countenance, denoting determination and several other things, armed with broom, club, mop or flat iron taking vigorous calisthenic exercise in every room of the house. These calisthenics are not gone through for mere exercise, nor does she move from room to room for a change of air. It is in an effort to clear every part of the house—well, to get down to brass tacks, she is in pursuit of that troublesome little pest, the housefly.

This cartoon explains what customers are likely to do if flies are allowed to hover about food stuffs.

Backward in Coming.

Thanks to the kind consideration of the weather man, the fly this year has not yet become so troublesome a nuisance in either home or store as is usual at this season. Special emphasis should be laid on the word "yet," for while the production of flies has, like the season in general, been rather backward to date, we may soon expect to see it blossom forth in full array—and it will not be a thing to gladden the heart of the housewife.

If there is anything that the housewife detests, it is the presence in the house of flies. Not only are they bothersome, but they cause a great deal more work, which is not appreciated in hot weather. Besides it is becoming recognized that because of the capacity of the fly for carrying disease germs, it has no place within the home.

The Opportunity Here.

These facts should surely give a cue to the dealer which he should be able to turn into increased business and profit. Now is the time for the dealer to get his campaign of selling fly destroyers under way. He has strong arguments to put forth to convince the housewife why she should purchase now. It is in her own interests to early annihilate as many as possible, for one fly killed now means as much as a great many more killed later in the season.

Now is the time to begin when they are few in number. Once the real warm weather sets in, the number will show an enormous increase, in proportion to the number the housewife has failed to destroy.

These lines should be swung into prominence, so that the customer will frequently be reminded of them. More than that, the dealer and his clerks should take every opportunity to talk them up. Advertising space may be made good use of because one has strong and convincing arguments to put forth why they should be purchased.

The Store to be Watched.

But there is another side to this question for the grocer. With the advent of warm weather and the appearance of the fly in large numbers, many grocery windows become almost valueless. In fact, some windows even swing over to the opposite extreme and become a detriment. An unclean, ill-kept window instead of carrying out the purpose of selling goods, drives customers away. The same may be said to be true of the interior of the store as well, unless some steps are taken to prevent it.

The "No Admittance" Sign.

A little money spent in barring the fly from the store and the display window is money well spent. Those dealers who have not already made provision for "no admittance" to the fly should do so at once.

A start should be made by the removal of all refuse and filth from the neighborhood of the store, for this is the breeding ground of the fly. A screening of all openings that will prevent the fly entering, is the next step, while the dealer should himself put his fly destroyers to work to clear the place of those which have already congregated.

The window being a valuable selling medium, it is important that arrangements be made to maintain its value during fly time. Some dealers have already a closed in display window. Others, however, have not. A good many of the latter class have screens fitted into the back of the window during the summer months. One dealer has several frames about a yard wide over which ordinary fly netting is stretched. A good point about these is that it allows a free circulation of air into the window. With this latter plan one frame only needs to be removed when the window is being dressed.

A Deterrent to Trade.

But the fly should be driven from the store for its presence there will drive customers away. Newspapers are continually harping at the general public to beware of flies, and people are beginning to look with marked ill-favor on the store where flies hover in swarms over exposed food. Here is a sample of what some newspapers are saying about the fly:

"They are born in filth; they feed on filth; they walk on filth; and then with filth sticking to their feet, legs and bodies, they feed and walk on the food which has been prepared for human beings to eat."

Wholesalers and Peddlers in Limelight

Some of the Former Again Alleged to be Selling to Consumers—Retailers Ask Legislation Committee of City Council to Stop Peddlers Calling Out Their Wares on the Streets—Beginning With January of Next Year Fee of Members of Toronto R. G. A. Will be $2—One Dollar to Go to Provincial Body.

Toronto, June 20 (Special)—That the problem of some wholesalers selling direct to consumers is showing no improvement, but on the other hand is becoming worse, was the declaration of many members of the Toronto Retail Grocers at their monthly meeting on Monday night. The association has before denounced the practice as unfair to the retail grocers, and appears determined that it shall be checked. Many instances of alleged violation of this trade principle were cited by the members.

Delivering to Dealers' Customers.

"On our street, which is not much over 300 yards long," declared one member, "I have seen the wagons of five different wholesale fruit men delivering goods at wholesale to my customers. One customer told me the price she paid for pines, and it was exactly the same as I have to pay.

"Another customer came in the other day and was wondering if she too could get her pines wholesale. Moreover, she declared she was getting two different kinds of cereals at wholesale, and the price she quoted was exactly the same as I pay."

"The fruit men are big offenders in this regard," said another, "I have a customer who claims he can get fruit from any fruit house he wants to."

On Drivers' Books.

"If you look over the drivers' books," chimed in another, "you will find there is a great deal of selling to consumers. Just the other day I saw three pounds of butter going out to a customer of mine."

"We can be loyal to the people that are loyal to us," remarked a member. He suggested that the association point out to members the names of reliable and upright firms. It was suggested by another that two companies that were willing to refrain from selling consumers be asked to sign an agreement to forfeit a certain amount for each proven offence, and that the names of the companies that would do this be posted up in the association's rooms.

It was finally decided to communicate with all wholesale firms, asking them if they will agree to refrain from selling to consumers. This will allow the association to ascertain just how each house views the problem.

It was decided that the association meet the legislature committee of the city council, and urge on them the passing of a by-law prohibiting peddleds from calling out their wares on the street. Wm. C. Miller was appointed to lead the deputation. They waited on this body on Tuesday afternoon, the request being forcibly put by Mr. Miller, backed up by D. W. Clark, Neil Carmichael and J. S. Bond. The chairman of the Civic Legislation Committee, Ald. McGuire, favorably received the deputation, adding that peddlers calling out their wares were a great annoyance to the sick, citing a case in point. It took the members of the committee but a few minutes to recommend to the council an amendment to the by-law, embodying the request of the grocers, who will further their cause before the council next Monday when the matter comes up.

The deputation while at the city hall called on Dr. Hastings, Medical Health Officer, to ask him to see that the by-law re covering fruit such as berries, etc., be enforced, and that an amendment be brought in compelling all fruit to be kept inside the store. The doctor gave a favorable ear to the requests, promising his support in both cases, and advising the deputation to lay the latter matter before the health board at its meeting on the first Wednesday in July. It would then be referred to him and he would advise its adoption.

Dr. Hastings pointed out that netting could not now be used to cover fruit.

Breaking Sanitary By-Law.

The opinion of the grocers expressed at their meeting was that fruits being peddled around were not properly covered, that the grocers were complying with the law regarding the covering of fruit, while foreign fruit dealers were not, that the goods being peddled were not rigidly inspected, and a lot of inferior goods were being sold; that policemen did not understand many of the by-laws of the city, and last but not least, that the city medical health officer did not himself understand the scope of some of the by-laws he has had passed.

Two motions, notices of which were given at last meeting, brought forth a deal of warm discussion. There were several tilts among members as to parliamentary rules. The following motions were finally put through: That $1 per member be drawn from the trust fund to pay the association dues to provincial association," and "that fees of the association be raised from $1 to $2, commencing January 1, 1913, one dollar to go to provincial association and $1 to local association."

Some of the members wanted the passing of this last motion deferred until later in the year. They thought the rise in fees might affect the membership. This was not the opinion of majority, however. "Two dollars is little enough," "Our fees have been too low anyway," "anyone who wants to belong will be willing to pay $2," were some of the comments.

Notes and Comments.

Fred Giles, College Street, and H. G. Macdonald, Sorauren Ave., were admitted as members.

"The canopy of cotton some peddlers have on their wagons is no good. The dust blows right through it."

"That netting cover is a farce."

"Is there a house that doesn't give discounts to certain customers?"

"Where are we going to draw the consumer line? I don't think even big hotels should be sold."

Provincial Association Work.

The platform of the association has been distributed throughout the province.

Secretary W. C. Miller has written to the Wholesale Grocers' Guild regarding the selling to consumers question, but as yet has received no reply.

The executive have been busy on the Weights and Measure inspection question. They are planning to wait on the Government at next session.

NEW BULK TEA CONCERN.

Stock in the Canada Tea Company is being offered this week. It has just been incorporated under an Ontario charter, and has taken over five other companies operating tea routes from Woodstock, Brantford, Peterboro, Hamilton and Toronto. These companies, which have been in existence from four to ten years, were formerly operated by J. S. A. Whealy, of Toronto, who is president of the new company. C. J. Scandrett, late partner of Hayter & Scandrett, tea importers, Toronto, is managing director.

The increased capital according to the prospectus will enable the company to purchase at more advantageous times and to take advantage of all discounts. It is very important that a sufficient quantity of certain teas, composing the company's blends, should be purchased at one season of the year, in order that the blends may be kept uniform. This will now be possible owing to the additional capital provided which will be ample to meet the company's requirements."

ASK FOR WARRANTY.

A dealer has been fined for selling adulterated ginger. It cost $5, plus the analysis fee, and that of the prosecution lawyer, amounting in all to some $37, to settle the matter.

Retailers who are honest should realize that there is no reason whatever why they should have to pay fines for selling adulterated foods There is a section of the Adulteration Act by which a dealer, in order to protect himself against fraud, can demand a warranty from the manufacturer that the goods are pure. If this warranty, which amounts to a sworn declaration, is obtained, the retailer cannot be held accountable for selling adulterated goods. The onus then belongs to the manufacturer or party who gave the warranty.

This is a protection which every dealer, anxious to buy and sell pure goods, should avail himself of. It costs him nothing, and insures him against a manufacturer unloading on him goods of inferior quality.

DOMINION DAY SELLERS.

This is haying time in the country. Farmers are following that old but wise advice, "Make hay while the sun shines." It is good advice for the grocer as well to consider. For instance, around every holiday the grocer has an opportunity of getting extra business. The wise merchant makes hay while the sun shines.

The next Canadian holiday is July 1. Dominion Day is one of our most important holidays, and already people are eagerly looking forward to its celebration. It is this spirit of celebration, of holidaying, of more than usual generosity in the expenditure of money, that works greatly to the advantage of the merchant who is live enough to realize the results to be attained by working in unison with this holiday spirit.

There are several lines of goods in special request at this time in which the grocer should anticipate his wants, and be prepared to supply the demand. Fruits of almost every variety will sell well and should be given extra prominence. Another line which needs little effort to move at all holiday periods is confectionery, and it should also be wheeled into the limelight.

Both fruit and confectionery should be given liberal counter space, while a window display showing these two lines separately or combined is desirable. It would naturally add much to the attracting power of such a window to have a setting appropriate to the day. Flags may be made good use of in the decoration of the window.

There will also be many picnics and outings, and the dealer would do well to suggest by window and counter display lines that will assist in packing the lunch hamper. Any picnic goods would make a suitable subject for display.

The dealer will find it greatly to his advantage to reap as large a harvest as possible while the opportunity is at hand.

ATTITUDE OF THE DAILY PRESS.

It is a good many knocks the retail dealer receives in a year from the average large daily newspaper. Every opportunity that arises, the retailer is condemned for this or that, for charging excessive profits, holding up prices, combining to agree on margins and scores of other alleged irregularities, until he has almost become a fit inmate for the penitentiary among the usurers.

It was only last week that a Toronto evening paper practically accused retailers of making 92 per cent. profit on potatoes. It is safe to say that any retailer would be pleased to supply the writer of that article with his yearly potato requirements if he could show how any dealer might make 92 per cent. margin on such a well known line. The fact of the matter was some potatoes could be bought wholesale for somewhere around $1.30 and $1.50, the general price being from $1.85 to $2.00 for best stock, and some retail dealers were uoting $2.50 per bag. The article in question made it appear that the retailer who bought for the $1.30 price was selling at $2.50—a preposterous assumption for these days of competition.

It is refreshing to note, however, in another large Canadian daily, an editorial taking the part of the grocer on the charge of forestalling on the market, for which offence a number of St. John, N. B., dealers were recently fined $20 each. This was referred to in The Grocer of a couple of weeks ago, but the paper in question is worth quoting so far as its reference to the obstruction of the middleman is concerned. It says:

> Carlyle says the human mind treats what it does not know as if it did not exist. That accounts for the prevalence of such obstructions as the anti-forestalling law of St. John, the market charges and restrictions of Toronto and other well-intentioned obstructions. The consumer sees a dealer buy in wholesale quantities from a farmer and offer at retail at increased prices. The impulse is to prevent this, and it usually prevails. The obstructionists compel the farmer to stay for three hours before selling, when his time could be more profitably spent elsewhere. They do not see that they must pay for this time, just as they must pay for the time of the middleman when they allow him to exist. He has the business better in hand and better organized, and there is less waste to be paid for in his case.

This is an unusually frank statement from a source that generally flies to the side of the "poor, dear consumer" in any such controversy.

SELLING PROFITABLE LINES.

The example of the retail dealer referred to in the article in this issue on the placing of Crisco on the United States market, is one that should be taken home by every member of the trade. This man was the indirect means of getting for the trade of the United States a fair profit on a new line destined to become a large seller.

There are many Canadian dealers to-day giving greater attention to articles on which the gross profit is scarcely sufficient to cover their share of the overhead expenses than to lines bearing good margins. Providing the quality of the latter variety is equal to or better than the former, there is no earthly reason why it should not be pushed. It undoubtedly can be sold by the progressive dealer even if customers have never heard of it before. This is true, because we have so many evidences of the selling power of the retail merchant who comes face to face with the ultimate consumer.

The article referred to above should be read by every dealer. It shows a man of character who will stand up for his profits, and who does not submit to the low profession of giving his time, energy and ability to the sale of the goods of a manufacturer for nothing. There would be no unprofitable goods on the market to-day if every dealer insisted on a fair margin on every line.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

A new column has been begun in this week's issue, which, we have every reason to believe, will prove interesting to the trade. It contains "Twenty Years Ago" items from the pages of The Canadian Grocer of the year 1892.

This column will appear from week to week, and will contain a few of the brief interesting items published two decades ago. As far as possible items will be used which can be connected up with situations and incidents of the present day. It will be particularly appreciated by old timers in the trade, but there will be a number of references to events that will appeal to the more recent generation.

Watch for these items every week. Some interesting coincidences may be expected.

FOLLY OF INCONSISTENCY.

A woman called at a certain large provision store in a Canadian city to purchase a pound of breakfast bacon —the woman tells this story herself—and was easily persuaded by the salesman to take the pound off a Wiltshire cut at a few cents above the price of the ordinary variety. The salesman explained that Wiltshire was a quality above the average, being cured especially for the British market, that it was superior to any other kind on the market, and that he was sure if she ever tried it she would want no other kind in future.

The appeal, as above intimated, was quite successful. The bacon was tried and found by this particular woman to be all that had been claimed for it.

Some time later she went back to the same store for bacon and chose the same salesman to serve her. He, of course, was not aware she had ever purchased from him before. It was a big city, he waited on many people during a week, and at any rate this particular woman had only been in the store once or twice previously.

"I want some Wiltshire bacon," she asked, with confidence in her capabilities as a purchaser of good goods.

"We haven't any Wiltshire to-day, madam," he replied, "but I'll show you some just as good."

"I thought Wiltshire was the best," was her next venture. "Isn't it better than the ordinary kind?" remembering her recent conversation with the same man.

"Why no, madame; there is no better bacon produced than this breakfact bacon; it is superior to the Wiltshire and I'm sure you would like it."

The purchase wasn't made. It looked too much like attempting to effect a sale at the cost of any statement, regardless of principle. That store is now regarded as one not to be depended upon. Satisfaction cannot be secured and there is one member of the public who will henceforth pass it by.

The moral needs no comment.

To Pay Grocers a Legitimate Profit

A Big United States Food Concern Changes Its Entire Selling Policy—Finds That It Cannot Afford to be Antagonistic to the Dealer—Co-operation Necessary to Ultimate Success.

By R. Bigelow Lockwood.

The Story of Crisco, the new cooking fat that has made butter "infamous," has as its dominating character a certain individual about whom very little is known outside of those who have made his study their specialty; the retail grocer.

In the scramble to "reach the consumer," manufacturers of products selling through grocers have been prone to forget that the grocer is the mouthpiece between them and the person who uses their goods. The fact remains that grocers and their solicitors know their customers so well that it is safe to say that the ordinary retail grocer can sell seven out of ten customers any brand of food he wants to. Granted that consumer, influenced by an advertisement in the general magazines, asks for a certain product, the grocer is able in most cases to substitute something else if he wants to, for the simple reason that the customer knows him and trusts to his judgment.

Created Baking Powder Demand.

To illustrate just one case where this relation between grocer and customer offset the influence of advertising. The Acme Tea Company, of Philadelphia, a chain of nearly 250 stores, sells four times as much of a certain baking powder as it does another brand. Next to nothing has been spent on advertising the former to consumers, and probably $500,000 per annum has been spent on the latter.

When a manufacturer reaches grocers he reaches their customers. Creating a demand on the part of the consumer is important, but beware lest the tendency be to overestimate the consumer end of the campaign to the detriment of securing active co-operation with the dealer. Work on the dealers is the missing link in modern selling methods; or if not actually missing, it is often the weakest link in the chain. Every manufacturer has to cross a certain bridge—and that bridge is the retailer, provided his product is one which must be sold through this channel.

Dealer Needs Profit Story.

The manufacturers selling a product through the medium of the retail grocer must convey two messages; one to the consumer about Quality, and an entirely different one to the grocer about Profit. If a consumer, and we are speaking now of the housewife, could remember a manufacturer's message and repeat it verbatim it would hold not the slightest particle of interest for the grocer. The grocer must be sent a message which cannot be entrusted to the consumer—a message regarding Profits which will make him push the manufacturer's goods. The consumer cannot be expected to convey this message; there is no reason why she should, and it would not be the best policy to let her know it anyway.

The logical campaign is to reach both grocers and consumers—but reach the grocers first. Thus when launching a new grocery product the dealer campaign should be started at least 30 days before general advertising begins.

A Triangular Relationship.

Now, perhaps you are thinking what all this has to do with Crisco. The answer is just this: Before we take up the actual story of the product, it is necessary to thoroughly understand the actual field conditions and the relations which exist between the three corners of the triangle—manufacturer, grocer and consumer. Once this relationship is established we shall be able to follow clearly each move in the Crisco campaign.

In the way of enlightenment regarding the character and importance of the retail grocer, I am indebted to the C. M. Wessels Co., of Philadelphia, and to Paul Findlay, the New York manager of the company, and a recognized authority on grocery store management and other matters of general and specific detail about the retail grocery business.

Should there by chance be an isolated reader who does not know what Crisco is, then let me advise him to ask his wife. For the benefit of those who are not so fortunate as to possess wives, Crisco is a wholesome cooking fat made entirely from edible vegetable oils by a secret process. It is also a Proctor & Gamble product.

Method of Introduction.

When Proctor & Gamble fired their opening gun at the retail grocers and dealers the following letter came, in the usual course of procedure, to the hands of a Mr. Hjermstad, proprietor of a general merchandise store at Chippewa Falls, Wis.

"Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 12, 1911.

"Dear Sir:

"We are expressing you to-day, charges pre-paid, six packages (25c size) of Crisco. Please accept these packages with our compliments—they are given to you absolutely free.

"Our national advertising campaign on Crisco begins in January, when large advertisements appear in practically all of the leading magazines, especially in the household publications, which are so largely read by housekeepers.

"We want you to have Crisco in stock, so that you can supply the first demand this advertising will create among your customers. It will be big advertising and the magazines will be read in several million families. You will have calls for Crisco, and so will every other grocer who sells to a good family trade. Sell the six cans, and then order what further supply you need from your jobber.

"The price is as follows:

1 case (36 cans each) $7.50 per case.

5 cases (36 cans each) $7.45 per case.

10 cases (36 cans each) $7.40 per case.

"We enclose copy of our January advertisement, which we feel sure you will read with much interest.

"At the present time the jobbers only have Crisco in the 25 cent size the same that we have sent to you, but after the first of the year we will be in a position to supply Crisco in 50-cent and $1 sizes also.

"Any further information you may desire will be promptly given you.

Yours respectfully,
The Proctor & Gamble Distributing Co."

Didn't Suit the Retailer.

Mr. Hjermstad replied to this letter as follows:—

"The Proctor & Gamble Distributing Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

"Gentlemen:—

"We have received the six cans of Crisco, forwarded to us by express in accordance with your circular letter, dated the 12th.

"While we appreciate your kindness in sending us the six cans free of charge and recognize the spirit which prompted you to present us, entirely unsolicited, with so generous a gift, we cannot conscientiously act upon your suggestion to place an order with our jobber for your product.

"At your quoted price of $7.50 per case of 36, 25-cent cans, each can of Crisco would cost us nearly 21c. It costs us close to 18 per cent. to do business, which would leave us a net profit of less than one cent per can.

"We call it bad business to ask a merchant to handle your goods on such a basis of profit.

"We trust your advertising campaign will not be a disappointment to you and that the hundreds of thousands of dollars you will thus spend will not be entirely wasted. Personally, we think if part of that money were spent with the grocer in the way of better profits to him, the result would be far more satisfactory to both manufacturer and dealer.

"Anyway, we know it is time for the retail grocer to wake up and protest against the unfair treatment accorded to him by so many of the national advertisers of the day who want to make of him a mere automaton for the vending of their wares, with little or no compensation for services rendered; the customer simply puts the money in the slot and the manufacturer gets it all.

Yours truly,
The Success Store Co.
Per O. P. K. H., Secretary."

By this it might be inferred that Mr. Hjermstad had a grievance. Also that something was wrong with the Crisco selling scheme to provoke such an attitude on the part of a distributor.

A Question for Thought.

Paul Findlay, who was conducting a department under the name of "Hy Credit," in the Twin City Commercial Bulletin, for the benefit and uplift of the retail grocer received these letters from Mr. Hjermstad with the request to look into the matter.

With the arrival of this correspondence Mr. Findlay realized its vast importance. Here was a situation existing between manufacturer and dealer staged to take advantage of. Hasty action might waste the opportunity. Good judgment, on the other hand, might easily result in great and widespread betterment for both maker and distributor.

Fundamentally the Crisco selling scheme was wrong. Taken as an average, 20 per cent. is a fair profit for a grocer to make on a product, but by charging the grocer $7.50 per case, and fixing his selling price at $9, the profit to the grocer was limited to 16 2-3 per cent.

Consider this if you please. The Crisco campaign had only just started, on the wrong basis to be sure, but still there was ample time to work some change. What was the remedy?

From Half Page Trade Paper Ad.

A brief analysis of some representative Proctor & Gamble products will point it out.

Take Ivory Soap, Large Ivory, as the 10-cent cakes are called. Large Ivory was planned as a 10-cent seller. Present day costs are as follows: Single box, $7; 5 boxes, $6.92; 10 boxes, $6.85; 25 boxes, $6.80. Selling at 10 cents, the margins on these costs are 30 per cent, 30.80 per cent.; 31.50 per cent. and 32 per cent. These are certainly generous margins on an article nearly as staple as sugar.

Now Large Ivory may be cut by the grocer, with the following results. If sold at 9 cents the grocer retains margins of 22.22 per cent.; 23.11 per cent.; 23.88 per cent. and 24.44 per cent. If sold at 3 for 25 cents the scale drops below the line of safety with margins as follows: 15.96 per cent.; 16.92 per cent.; 17.76 per cent., and 18.36 per cent.

To Head Off Price Cutters.

Proctor & Gamble had thus always made it possible on all their products for the dealer to realize liberal margins —goods for which at the same time a steady market had been created through general advertising. Proctor & Gamble had always given dealers their goods on a basis where honest margins could be made when sold at the fixed standard price, but what did the dealers do? The 3 per cent. or 4 per cent. of natural born cutters, together with an unfortunately large percentage of dealers who do not know enough business to correctly compute their margins, destroyed the plan by taking advantage of its liberality.

The result was that when Proctor & Gamble were ready to launch Crisco a plan was shaped to head off the minority from price-cutting instead of attempting to co-operate with the majority; those who will take and keep an honest margin when it is offered.

The selling scheme which Proctor & Gamble launched and which caused all the trouble, was the very simple one of setting a price to the dealer which allowed such narrow margin that even the blind could see their loss if they attempted to cut. In their attempt to force the dealer to maintain the advertised price they had incurred his enmity.

Low Margin Fixed.

This plan fixed the possible margins on Crisco as follows: On one case purchased, 16 2-3 per cent.; on five cases, 17.22 per cent plus; on 10 cases, 17.77 per cent. plus. Thus the biggest purchaser was prevented from making a legitimate margin, right from the start. He was up against a stone wall, for remember, Crisco was advertised to the consumer at a fixed price per can.

All this Mr. Findlay realized — and more. He realized that Proctor & Gamble had, perhaps very naturally, been deceived by the noise of the few into forgetting the silent, intelligent many who figured right, retained fair margins and plugged ahead honestly, content with the legitimate profit allowed them.

Dealer Must Have Profit.

There was only one thing to do—and if done instantly the day might be saved. The price to the dealer must be reduced 30 cents per case, so that the smallest buyer could realize his full 20 per cent. profit.

To the everlasting credit of Proctor & Gamble, who through the entire period had really been anxious to work with the dealer, the price on Crisco was reduced not 30 cents but 50 cents per case, with the following results: 1 case yields the grocer a profit of 22.22 per cent. plus; 5 case lots 22.77 per cent. plus; 10 case lots 23.33 per cent. plus.

Thus a wrong selling scheme was changed into one which yielded the grocer a liberal margin of profit and changed his attitude into one of interest and co-operation.

Do not be deceived into thinking that this argument against price-cutting is a sweeping protest against the entire system of price-reduction. Manufacturers and retailers alike are up against this question—"How far is it legitimate to go in price-reduction on special occasions?"

It is quite true that certain articles are handled for less than the cost of doing business, yet the statement cannot be made that they do not yield a net margin. Other articles pay heavy gross percentages, yet there is nothing to prove that there is anything left net, after they have been handled.

In the matter of price regulation the best guide is the judgment of the careful merchant—an educated judgment. Price-cutting, on special occasions, requires cool-headed calculation. But to return to Crisco.

Decide on Trade Paper Campaign.

Having decided to reduce the price to dealers there yet remained something else to be done—to reach the distributors with the message and to establish a new and closer harmony of relations between manufacturer and retailer. And to gain this end, to talk to these distributors in their own language and through mediums which would carry the message of Crisco home, it was finally decided to begin a trade paper campaign.

Comparing the cost and efficiency of letters, post cards and the grocer trade press we find that while letters are conceded to be twice as effective the cost is 14 times greater than trade paper advertising. Post cards are conceded to be equal to trade press advertising, in efficiency, but the cost in this case is 7 times greater. Thus it is that trade paper advertising would seem to be the most rational and economical way of reaching dealers. (We are speaking throughout this article entirely of the grocery trade press.)

A Change in Conditions.

Time was when the grocery trade press was not seriously considered by big manufacturers. As used to be the case among the technical publications—and trade and technical papers are as different as day and night—manufacturers considered their advertisements of so little importance that very little attention was paid to copy or plan.

Consider the two Crisco trade paper advertisements herewith illustrated. Notice how the new prices on Crisco have been displayed and how the argument of a steady profit to the grocer on Crisco has been driven home.

The Crisco grocery trade paper campaign has been running since March, and is proving very successful.

The complaint of Mr. Hjermstadt, which was representative of grocers everywhere, proves just this: "Unwilling service is never good service," and had Proctor & Gamble, through the expenditure of a great amount of money advertising to the consumer, finally forced grocers to handle Crisco the price paid for the distribution would have been excessive.

The Cheaper Methods.

It costs less to make grocers want to handle a product than it does to try and force them to do so. When a grocer buys a product because he is convinced of its merit and because it shows him a good profit he buys to sell it. If he is forced into buying against his will he may hand it across the counter when it is called for, but he certainly will not be likely to push it. Get the grocer's interest and the business is won. Allow him a fair profit and he keeps customers buying the product that yields him a fair margin.

————, Can., Mar. 22, 1912.

Financial Editor, Canadian Grocer.—As a subscriber to your valued journal, The Canadian Grocer, we have from time to time noticed your interesting articles on the subject, the correct figuring of profits, and take the liberty of sending you our trading profit statement, which we would ask you to please criticize, but please do not use our name, place of business, etc. The open criticism of accounts, both trial balances and profit statements, and their method of arriving at results, is a matter that should interest all your readers, and we venture still further to say that there are many business men who are not paying the attention to their standing that they should. We therefore do not hesitate to say that your criticisms are a very big help to the man who will take advantage of facts, be they for or against his guesses. We are inclined to think that the retail merchant does not pay the attention to his system of booking and accurate accounting that this form of business demands, and, as stated in one of your articles, is content to go along thinking he is making a substantial profit, and sooner or later, Mr. Editor, such a man is bound to face the cold facts, be they for or against. We do not for a moment submit our statement for your criticism as a model, as we are quite aware that there is lots of room for improvement and we believe now that we should have written off $300 against our profits for interest at 6 per cent. on $5,000 capital invested, to show an accurate state of our profits, or to put it in common sense shape, just what there was in the business for the year.

You will in all probability criticize the cost of doing business. This percentage is brought about by our curtailment of help, as there are only three men to be paid out of the business, two partners and the hired man. The management and packing is done by ourselves, and all detail work.

We thank you for this privilege and trust it may be of service to your journal in opening up some new question for discussion.

Yours very truly,

P—— L—— & R—— S——.

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

N.B.—The expense account from 9th Sept. to 30 Dec. you will note is out of all reason to previous expense account from date of starting business to trial stocktaking, namely, $1,244.83, against $1,641.65. The reason for this is, our last account of $1,244.83 bears the full charge for insurance for 1912, and the full account for fuel for 1912, also a charge overlooked in horse maintenance account made Sept. 9th. In setting our selling prices we have adopted the method as per example shown, and would like to have you confirm our method. Example, Article; total cost trucking placing in warerooms, $2.37½; selling figure, $2.65; margin, 27½c. Or, 10.37 per cent. gross profit, less 6.43 p.c. net profit, as it should figure in year's statement.

N.B.—Statement of expenses, $1,641.65 leaves insurance charges which do not cover the whole year 1912; but up to September. You have no particulars of this account.

Applying General Principles.

I am frank to say that I know nothing whatever about the wholesale or commission business, so cannot dissect this kind of statement in any technical way. All I can do is apply general principles, leaving it to others to say whether this merchant is running his business as scientifically and economically as he should run it. Fact is, I shall be much interested in any continuation of discussion which may ensue from the publication of this letter, and I sincerely hope others will write on it. I shall merely review the figures and try to answer the definite questions.

I am pleased to know that my articles prove helpful to merchants of this class, for thus I am encouraged to believe that smaller traders may derive some real benefit from it—provided, as this man says, they will read it. True it is, no doubt about that, that the average retailer does not pay sufficient attention to his accounting. Only very recently I obtained convincing proof that some 28 out of 37 retailers in a big city had no idea whatever of what it cost them to do business; and of the reamining 9, only 1—note that, ONE—really knew what his expense account amounted to, as a percentage, on his sales! Wonder grocers go broke? No; wonder that so many succeed in keeping their heads above water, let alone making any money.

Should Add Interest on Capital.

The business done by this firm was practically $74,000. The total expenses were $2,886. This yields us exactly 3.90 per cent. I do not see where the 3.94 per cent. comes in. However, that is a trifle in view of the excellent net margin left over. I agree that they should have included 6 per cent. on their capital, or $300 more, in their expense account. Then they would have spent $3,186 for expenses, or 4.30 per cent. plus. This would not have changed the figures much, and the net money-result not at all; but it would have been better business.

The explanation of the variation in the expense accounts for the two periods covers that part of it O.K., so there is nothing to be said on that head. Two curious errors have crept into the statement sent—unless I am unable to add and subtract. First is the footing of the detailed expense account. This adds up not $1244.83, but $1212.60—difference, $32.23. I think this is a mistake merely in copying the items. Again, in giving the capital invested as $5,000 and subtracting the fixed investment therefrom, there is an error of 3c—the net should be $3,363.07 instead of $3,363.10. I mention these slight discrepancies merely to forestall criticism, not because they are important.

Computing Margins Correctly.

Surely I confirm that method of computing margins. The article which costs $2.37½ and is priced at $2.65 shows a margin of 10.37 per cent. plus. This is, of course, on the selling price—as it should be. If, now, we deduct 3.94 per cent. for expenses, we have the net margin of 6.43 per cent. for the profit account. The obvious inability of a retail grocer to do much with this kind of a statement may perhaps best be illustrated by these figures. For here is a gross margin which is much less than our average expense account. The different basis of computation all the way throughout the business is here strikingly demonstrated.

Glimpse Into Wholesaler's System.

I fear that I have not been of much service; but maybe my friends will ask me something further of a definite character which I may hope to answer more serviceably. Meantime, I certainly appreciate their writing as they have done, for the glimpse their letter has given us into the workings of the wholesale business. One thing is clearly demonstrated. That is, that the jobber does not make an abnormal average margin; and that he makes any reasonable net profit is surely due to good management, economy and plenty of hard work.

Sears, Roebuck & Co., the big Chicago mail order house, is putting up a building 325 x 300 feet, in which they propose to do a retail grocery business. On the upper stories the out-of-town trade will be attended to. The lower floors will be given up to the city trade. All business will be done on a strictly cash basis.

Interesting Extracts From Early Files of The Grocer.

In The Canadian Grocer of June 24, 1892, the following items appeared which will be of interest to present day readers, many of whom will recall the circumstances:—

"A. P. Tippet & Co., St. John and Toronto, have moved to more convenient offices at 43½ Welling ton St., E. W. H. Tippet will be the resident manager."

Editor's Note.—Their Toronto offices have since been changed to 84 Victoria St., but W. H. Tippet still retains control.

"Fraser Viger & Co., retail grocers, Montreal, have got all their suburban teams running and are now doing a big out of town trade."

A Montreal market report in this issue quotes granulated sugar at 4½ to 4 9-16 cents per lb. To-day it is $5.15 per cwt., or 65 cents per cwt. higher.

* * *

"Chas. Hudson, grocer, of Belleville, Ont., claims $3,000 for damages sustained on account of a defective road between Thurlow and Sidney in May last."

* * *

"The Toronto city travelers have completed arangements for their excursion. The date is 27th of July and the trip will be by boat to Buffalo and Niagara Falls."

"An ingenious way of buying the necessaries of life is reported from the neighborhood of Berlin. A peasant woman with a large basket on her back entered the grocer's shop of that place. In the circular basket was a large earthenware jar. The woman bespoke about five dollars' worth of things, which she carefully packed in the earthenware jar, then tied up the mouth and asked permission to leave the jar in the corner. She would return in an hour, she said, get the things and pay for them. The grocer having granted her wish, she carefully put the jar in a corner and retired—not to return. After many hours the shopman proceeded to examine the large earthenware jar. It had no bottom."

More than 50,000,000 lobsters are exported from Canada yearly.

Montreal, June 20.—One of the important features of the week was decline of 10 cents per cwt. in refined sugar, which took place on Friday last, bringing local quotations down to $5.15, as compared with $4.60 one year ago. With preserving season now about to open up in earnest, a brisk demand for this line is anticipated. There has been no big buying movement for a long time, and country is not by any means heavily stocked with sugar.

Another change of the week is an upward movement of 15 cents per cwt. in Rangoon rice, following the strong position of market recorded in our past issues. Reports from the East still indicate a market degree of steadiness. Adding to the amount of expenses of the grocer is the recent upward movement in price of manilla wrapping paper.

Business is reported as fairly satisfactory, but real warm weather would be beneficial to business in general, as it would give impetus to movement of summer and picnic goods.

SUGAR—The market at time of going to press for last issue certainly was a little weak, but the drop which came towards the end of week was, we might say, somewhat unexpected. Raws have advanced a little in New York, and the local market is pretty steady, though there is a downward tendency noticeable. We are now at the start of a good business season, the demand for home preserving purposes being well up to the mark.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES—An improvement has taken place in the demand for syrups, and prices remain firm. The molasses situation is exceptionally firm, and higher prices may be expected, as Barbados has sold all her holdings. The demand naturally keeps strong, as molasses is one of the few cheap foodstuffs remaining on the market.

DRIED FRUITS—The market for Californian fruits continues fairly dull, business being confined to small purchases. At this time of the year a slow consuming demand is natural, and as a result, little speculative spirit is shown. Bad weather has been experienced on the coast, and it is not at all unlikely that prices of new prunes will reach a high level. The supplies of old stock are not excessive, and may not last out till new crop arrives, so that present holders are not inclined to make any concessions. California raisins are inactive, while dates and figs are receiving good attention. Hallowee dates have dropped a half-cent. There is not much doing in apricots or peaches, the market being unusually dull.

Owing to high prices at which Sultana raisins were held and the accumulation of stocks, prices have declined one cent. The demand has not been up to expectations, and holders are anxious to see a strong movement before new crop arrives.

TEAS—IN JAPANS—Samples of new season's pickings are now in the hands of jobbers and are being closely examined, the trade being anxious to prove conclusively just how they stand compared to last year's crop.

There has been a noted falling off in quality of Ceylons, with the result that the lower grades are not receiving as much attention as usual, dealers being satisfied that still further depreciation is likely to take place, and, therefore, being more inclined to handle the better grades. Fine, high-grown teas are, therefore, in demand, but supplies are not over-plentiful.

In Chinas, Congous have been considerably quiet of late, the main inquiries being for other descriptions. Instead of the revolution having had any bad effect on the market, as anticipated, supplies are reported more plentiful, and there are indications of lower prices for all classes of China teas. The season for scented teas and Oolongs is nearly ended.

COFFEE—The recent decline of a few points in New York indicates a turn for the better, more activity in general being noted. Roasters report an increase in business over last year, despite the high prices prevailing, which once more proves that Canada is becoming quite a large coffee consumer.

The coming crop of Santos, which is generally acknowledged to be a small one, is also a late one, and as the ripening of the fruit has been irregular, it is natural to conclude that the quality will also be irregular. There may, therefore, be a better demand for mild coffee, but the stocks of this are moderate, and will be small next year.

RICE—Following last week's report of likely advance in prices, we have to announce a further increase in Rangoons. The market is still firm, and the upward movement continues. According to cable received last week from Rangoon, it is estimated that the total quantity left in Burma to come to market is only about 250,000 tons, so that the Government estimate will not be realized.

An advance from Japan states that rice has risen to record prices, speculations there having converted the market. Thirty-seven dealers are said to have been arrested by the Government for gambling, and it was hoped that this would have had a lowering effect, but, on the contrary, it has had the opposite effect, prices still mounting up.

The present supply of rice in Tokio is about 165,000 tons less than that held this time last year, and there is now only enough to last for a month or so.

All these facts point to continued firm markets and higher prices.

NUTS—As may be expected, trade in nuts is seasonably dull, and it will be some few weeks before the situation brightens up. There is a small demand for confectionery purposes, but it is more or less domestic, as manufacturers generally fill their requirements in these lines during the fall.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Rice—Rangoon up 15c cwt.

Sugar—Down 10c to $5.25.

Domestic Sardines—Lower.

Peas and Corn—Lower prices by some firms.

Toronto, June 20.—Sugar is down another ten cents to $5.25 locally, as compared with $4.70 a year ago. The change took place the end of last week following the weak feeling which had characterized the market for some little time before. It is a most unusual thing to find a declining market at this time of year, as it is general to look for a tendency to strength when opening upon the preserving season. It is not custom, however, that rules the market, but crops and crop prospects—and some other things. With fruit now coming on, there should be a big consumption of sugar. Meanwhile retailers pursue a hand to mouth policy.

Trade continues normal for the month and season, although weather is somewhat unkind to certain lines. This had been particularly true in picnic and camping goods. Farmers are not so busy as they were, and have now a chance to get into town, although belated seeding on account of backward season is still being done in some sections.

SUGAR—Sugar, which was reported weak in last issue, declined 10 cents per cwt. at end of week. The general trend was towards easiness, but it has been suggested that arrival of some British sugar on market may have been immediate cause for the reduction in price.

"Sugar is weak and market practically a duplication of last week," was the way one sugar man summed up the situation this week. Market is steady to a certain degree at moment, although with an undertone of weakness, while outcome is shrouded in doubt.

Among the depressing feature just now is the anticipation of a full crop in Cuba, and Willett & Gray, in view of latest information have increased estimate of 1,850,000 tons. Besides this, weather in Europe continues favorable for growing crop. There being no indication of higher prices in near future, buyers continue a hand to mouth policy.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES — Corn syrups naturally sell better during cool weather, and in this regard weather man this summer has been kind to the grocer. High butter has also worked for a better syrup demand, but this line is now becoming more reasonable in price. Syrups show no change in price, but general values on raw material are easier.

Molasses continue steady, but demand will be rather quiet until on in fall.

DRIED FRUITS—Prices on dried fruits show no change, nor is there any material change in general spot situation. Evaps, dates and figs appear quite steady.

The California crop of prunes is being estimated at a somewhat smaller tonnage than recent current ideas, although still problematic. The California crop will run more largely than usual to small sizes, and it would seem that there will be plenty of these.

"Even, however, with as good crop as California can now expect, the situation looks steady in prunes." says a report from the West. "The world's supply for this crop, even figuring the largest probable spot holdings in as carry-over, appears to be below average annual consumption."

TEA—Reports from India indicate a favorable opening of new plucking season with increased yields in many instances. The quantity advertised for first Calcutta auction of season on June 4, was 20,000 packages. In no previous season has an auction of such extent been held earlier than July 3.

COFFEE—The market shows no particular change, but appears to hold its own. Pending first out-turn of the crop of 1912-13, as well as action commenced by United States Government against coffee trust, general purchasing has continued small.

This year's crop of Santos is now over 9, 500,000 bags, and will probably reach the 10,000,000 mark. Next year's crop is estimated at not over 7,000,000 bags, so unless Government succeeds in breaking up existing combine, there will be no lowering of prices.

SPICES—Demand from retailers for spices continues on a good scale. Indeed, spice men say that since early spring trade has been appreciable. Not only are dealers now purchasing for immediate needs, but are anticipating their wants for pickling season as well.

Markets as before reported, are generally firm, and entering as we are, upon season of largest demand, those lines displaying strength, are likely to continue firm. Peppers are among those with an upward tnedency, cloves are strong, as well as mace.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—Emphasis has been given in our last two issues to strong position of rice. That it was well warranted is shown by this week's advance of 15 cents per cwt. in Montreal milled Rangoon. General market is still quite strong.

In Burma market is still firm, according to cables, and it is stated that owing to the strong position of eastern markets sellers are very reserved.

According to cable received last week from Rangoon, it is estimated that the total quantity left in Burma to come to market is only about 250,000 tons; in other words, the Government estimate will not be realized.

The chief feature of interest in Japan is reduction of duty on foreign rice entering Japan, the Japanese Government having decided to reduce this by about 1s. per cwt. Cable advice just received states that prices of rice in Japan having risen to record prices, speculators there have practically cornered the article.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—There appears to be an easier trend to peas and corn. At least lower prices on these two lines being quoted by a number of firms would indicate this. Corn at present is being quoted at 95c to $1. A couple of firms quote peas lower at $1.30 for extra sifted, $1.25 for early June, and $1.15 to $1.20 for standards. The new packing season is fast approaching, and some houses feel inclined to ease quotations somewhat in order to get stocks in shape for new pack.

"We haven't any too much corn," said one dealer, "and we had a wholesale house trying to buy from us just recently."

"How are peas?" he was asked.

"I don't expect to have ten cases left when new pack is ready," was his answer.

Salmon is steady and one firm is quoting $1.70 for ½ lb. flats. On account of high price of salmon, sale of this size is showing a big increase. Salmon is held with marked confidence.

Canadian sardines have been reduced 15 cents per case by packers. New packing season has just commenced, and so far promises none too rosy, so it is suggested that possibly competition is responsible for recent decline. There i a heavy carry over of domestic sardines in the United States, but it is not known whether this is true or not on this side of line. Canadian sardines are quoting by local wholesalers from $3.15 to $3.50 per case.

Demand is mostly for immediate wants in canned goods at present. Salmon is a good selling line, as well as other lines of fish. Pork and beans, soups, canned beef, jellied meats and other lines suitable for picnic and camping purposes should sell well from now on.

The California Fruit Canners' Association have named opening prices for this year, which show they are materially lower in practically all items than last year's opening prices. This is, of course, entirely due to the reduced cost of raw material this year. In No. 2½ extra standards apricots are 35 cents lower, except on peeled and sliced, which are 50 cents lower; yellow free peaches 15 cents lower and other peaches 20 cents; pears are 30 cents a dozen and plums 5 cents less than last year.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Evaporated Fruits—Cheaper.

Sugar—Down 10 cents.

WINNIPEG, June 19. — There is a steady movement of staple goods in groceries and most lines in wholesale list are firm and unchanged.

Easier prices prevail in evaporated fruits and reductions are certain to come within a few weeks in prunes, the crop of which is heavy.

As regards general business outlook: Industrial activity goes on without any noticeable break, the labor situation throughout Western provinces on whole being most satisfactory. There is no enforced idleness. This is most favorable to the retail trade, and volume of cash business is reported as much larger than that of last year.

In the country, crop prospects are good, and farmers have been purchasing freely since seeding finished.

Collections have greatly improved, and there is a generally healthy tone to trade from the unusually large amount of cash in circulation.

SUGAR.—Refined prices were reduced 10 cents per cwt. on Friday last, bringing Montreal and B. C. granulated in barrels down to $5.80. There is a fair demand for all lines and prospects are for parctiularly heavy trade in the preserving season, as many fruits promise to be plentiful and cheap.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, June 19.—The local market has offered little of interest since last report, and there were few changes in price listings. All grades of flour are steady at present.

Sugar market has apparently settled to a normal condition, but situation in molasses is adding strength every day. Stocks in the Barbadoes are practically exhausted, and a further advance is looked for at almost any moment. The sale of jelly powders, bottled juices, etc., has greatly advanced during past week or more.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, June 19.—Butter is only line in local grocery market in which price is easier. Receipts of butter during past week have exceeded all expectations, and as a result prices have tumbled. Quality of most of the stock arriving now is very fine, and choice dairy in small tubs is being offered at 23 cents per pound. Creamery also shows a decline of two cents per pound. From present indications prices will go still lower.

Flour prices are also firm in local market, and some predict that there will be a further advance. According to advices received here from Boston, prices of flour there are declining, and mills in some parts of the States are not working full time, on account of the surplus product.

WINDOW DRESSING COMPETITION

The prizes for the House Cleaning Window Competition have been awarded by the judges, H. C. McDonald, president, and J. L. Maude, secretary, of the Canadian Window Trimmers' Association. A large number of competitors sent in photographs of windows and many fine displays in all parts of the country were represented. It required careful consideration on the part of the judges to reach their decision, and it was only after a thorough sifting out of the merits of the different displays that the awards were finally made as follows:

1s prize, $50.00, Bruce & Sanderson, Toronto, Ont.; 2nd prize, $35.00, G. W. Robinson & Co., Ltd., Hamilton, Ont.; 3rd prize, $20.00, Goodall Bros., Ottawa, Ont.; 4th prize, $15.00, Wm. Black, Toronto, Ont.; 5th prize, $10.00, F. McDougall, Ingersoll, Ont.; 6th prize, $10.00, H. S. Terris & Co., Springhill, N. S.; 7th prize, $10.00, T. J. Moore, Stratford, Ont.; 8th prize, $10.00, Wm. B. Duffey, Charlottetown, P.E.I.; 9th prize, $10.00, A. P. Johnson, Ottawa, Ont.; 10th prize, $10.00, A. Hagmeier, Hespeler, Ont.

The competition was inaugurated by the St. Croix Soap Manufacturing Co., St. Stephen, N. B.

CATSUP MILLIONAIRE KILLED.

Had Many Acquaintances in Canada—The Origin of His Business.

Toronto, June 20—(Special) .— A week ago Monday T. A. Snider, a Cincinnati, O., millionaire, and the original maker of Snider's catsup, visited the wholesale trade in Toronto renewing some old acquaintances. A despatch reached the city one week later stating that Mr. Snider and his wife had been killed near Erie, Pa., by a train striking their automobile at a grade crossing. Mr. Snider's daughter was injured, but may recover, while the chauffeur escaped unhurt.

Canadians will be much affected by this news, which will be particularly regretted by many old friends who knew Mr. Snider before he left Canada. He was born at Eglinton about 70 years ago and has a brother living here now.

An interesting story is told of how he began the manufacturing business which was destined to make him a wealthy man. Shortly after his first marriage he and his wife moved to Rochester. Not being in very affluent circumstances, his good wife assisted in earning the family's livelihood by making catsup at her home and retailing it out to the neighbors and stores. It was appreciated and the demand for Mrs. Snider's catsup developed and developed, eventually rewarding Mr. Snider with the title of millionaire.

Sometime ago he retired from business to enjoy his wealth. His remains will be buried in Toronto.

A quarter of a pound of adulterated ginger sold by a Toronto dealer to a Dominion food inspector, has cost that dealer thirty-seven dollars. The inspector, upon analyzing the ginger, found it to contain a mixture of starch. The defence was that the ginger was sold in the condition it was purchased, and while the magistrate offered sympathy, he found it necessary to impose a fine of five dollars and costs. As well, the defence must pay the cost of analysis, and the fee of the counsel who prosecuted her.

Predicting Bumper Wheat Crop in West

One Man Looks for Yield of 200,000,000 Bushels — Nothing Certain Yet, However—Conditions are Favorable Now—Bran and Shorts Continue Downward Movement—Flour and Cereals Quiet—Cornmeal Less Steady.

While it is too early in the season to predict with any degree of accuracy the outcome of this year's wheat crop in the Canadian West, still conditions so far have been so favorable in the three provinces as to lead many to predict a yield which will establish a new high record point in the production of wheat in Canada.

This is how one man who looks for a production of 200,000,000 bushels figures it out. The acreage sown to wheat in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta is, according to estimates 11,180,000 acres, compared with 10,400,000 sown last year. He believes then that if fairly favorable conditions obtain from now on, and particularly during latter part of July, and early days of August, a bumper harvest can be safely anticipated.

In the three provinces, the final estimates of wheat production last year were about 170,000,000 bushels or an average yield per acre of 17 bushels. Taking this figure as a basis of comparison, the prospect, as it appears at present, providing conditions this year are no better, and no worse than last year, would point to over 200,000,000 bushels. The harvest is quite distant as yet, however, and any predictions now can be little more than guesswork.

The market continues rather uneventful, and from a news standpoint is saved by a further weakening in millfeed. Further reductions are announced at some centres, while at others downward tendency is apparent. This is due to a marked decrease in consumption, which has taken place during past weeks, as the grass became heavier. There is more demand for shorts than for bran.

As millers are now getting less money for their by-products, more strength is thrown on flour. Market is regarded as steady, but millers are not predicting any advance just at present. Demand is rather slack while as can be expected, there is little to boast of in the movement of cereals.

Following trend of raw material, cornmeal is less steady than a few weeks ago.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—Business for all lines for export is quiet; indeed, there is nothing interesting either from a domestic standpoint. The undertone remains firm—no change in prices.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—Flour market is steady. Reduction in millfeeds has a tendency to throw greater strength on flour. Millers, however, are not predicting any advance just now. Trade is rather quiet as usual at this season.

Winter wheat flour also maintains a steady position, Ontario wheat holding up. Domestic trade is only routine, while export business is decidedly dull.

CEREALS.—Cornmeal is less steady than a few weeks ago, due to weakening in raw material. Rolled oat situation remains about the same as reported last week.

Demand is inclined to quietness. There was a little brisker movement of rolled oats following recent decline, but this is not the season of big consumption.

MILL FEEDS.—While several firms are quoting same price as last week, the market is easy and weakening. This is shown by fact that one firm is quoting $1 per ton lower, namely $22 for bran and $25 for shorts. As expected, with good pastures the demand is falling off, although this is more marked in case of bran. A number of firms still quote $23 and $26 respectively.

FLOUR AND CEREALS.—Flour is steady and oatmeal firm. Cornmeal is quoted cheaper. The market in all lines is subject to change.

CLOSING SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

New Departure of St. John Grocer—Will Open Again in Evening.

St. John, N.B., June 20.—(Special.)—A new departure has been made in regard to the half-holiday in St. John among the grocery trade by Walter Gilbert, grocer of Charlotte Steet, whose policy and ideas of conducting a store have always been advanced in their character.

Mr. Gilbert has announced to the trade that during the warmer months of midsummer he will have his store open on Friday and Saturday evenings, but will close on Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock, reopening again at 6 p.m. This affords his clerks and himself to take a little rest at the week-end, and he feels he will not lose much custom on account of it, as many of his customers are heartily in sympathy with the scheme.

Pine Season Has Reached Its Zenith

Let Up in Shipments Expected Shortly — Prices are on the Ascent—Fruit Showing Waste— Expect Lower Prices on Strawberries Shortly—Valencia Oranges Arrive on Market— Tomatoes Scarce and High.

The pineapple season has probably reached its zenith for this year in point of volume of supplies and amount of demand. Prices have been at quite a reasonable level, and there has been a big movement of this fruit both for preserving and table purposes. In the absence of strawberries for preserving this month, retailers have been pushing pines strongly, and not a little of their big sale has been due to retailers' efforts.

It was pointed out in last issue that prices on pines had probably reached lowest point they would touch this year. This will likely prove true at most centres. There has already been an upward movement at several centres, which will likely continue to become more marked. Not only have primary markets shown a stronger tendency, but recent arrivals have shown considerable waste, which all works for higher prices. Cuba is still shipping quite a quantity, but will probably soon show a let up. Canadian markets are beginning to receive some Florida stock, but prices are above the par at which Cubans have been ruling during past couple of weeks.

The Canadian strawberry continues very tardy in its progress. There are some shipments being received, but quantity is small, and the U. S. is called upon to supply the Canadian demand for this article. However, there is expected to be a big change in the situation shortly. At least this is the opinion of several fruit men who expect the Canadian berry to come forth in large enough quantities to cause prices to recede from present level.

There will still be quite a few navel oranges to come forward, but season is gradually moving towards end of its tether, while Valencias are starting in. Lemons are quite steady, and real hot weather would without doubt make this steadiness more marked. Verdelli lemons have arrived in Canada, and are bringing the high figure it was pointed out before could be expected.

Tomatoes continue scarce and high. Florida shipments are easing off, and Mississippi and Texas will now begin. New potatoes have eased, but very little more, but slight recessions are still being made in old stock.

Fruit men expect a big business next week when retailers will be purchasing their supplies for Dominion Day. Fruit will sell well around the holiday, and grocers should prepare to care for this trade.

MONTREAL.

FRUITS.—Bananas still receive close attention, but are not getting any cheaper, nor is there likely to be a decrease as the warm weather is now here. Lemons are active and there seems to be some speculation in this market, as it is not at all unlikely that prices will make a heavy jump. Oranges, as may be expected, are in good demand also, while pineapples are active, owing to big demand for preserving.

VEGETABLES. — Beans reached a reasonable figure last week, but have soared again. Carrots as stated in a previous issue have gone up, and a further increase will be registered if present good demand and scarcity continue. Sweet potatoes also show an advance and are becoming rare. New Egyptian onions are a shade easier, cauliflower not being so plentiful as usual and consequently a little dearer.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS. — Huckleberries and lawtonberries have made their appearance during past week. They come from across the line, and are selling at 20 cents per quart box. Strawberries have been holding decidedly steady, under exceedingly tardy movement of Canadian article. Fruit men are looking for a big change in this market, however, as they should now begin to come forward plentifully. One firm estimate strawberry crop at 60 per cent. of a normal yield, for while they are doing well this year, the dry spell of 1911 killed out a good many vines.

Pineapples are higher. Recent arrivals have shown a good deal of waste. With $3 per case being asked on Tuesday, price is likely to ascend to $3.50 by end of week. Some Florida are expected this week and will range close on $4 per case.

Navels are coming along, although crop is gradually winding up. Valencias have made their debut at $4.25 to $4.50 per case. Lemons are steady. Verdelli are in now.

The fruit men will betake themselves to their summer quarters at foot of Yonge Street next week.

VEGETABLES.—Prices on new vegetables fluctuate considerably. This week there has been an upward reaction in asparagus and carrots, while both green and wax beans are firmer. Cabbage is coming in large crates, and is quoted at $3. Green peppers are also higher, baskets bringing as high as $1.25.

New potatoes are about steady at last week's prices, supplies coming from Virginia. New crop Canadian are expected to be late this year on account of backward season. Easiness has continued in old potatoes, and further concessions have been made in prices by some firms. With best Delawares commanding as high as $1.90, prices rule down as low as $1.50 for some classes of imported.

Tomatoes are scarce and higher. Offerings are practically all Floridas as yet. Some Mississippi are in, but are rather green.

ed to hurry home for the market.

Tom Shaw didn't care as long as he got home for Friday's ball game.

Adam Palmer had attended a wedding in the afternon and said he was too full for expression.

It is up to Toronto, Hamilton and Brantford to do likewise, said one of the boys.

FRUIT MARKET NOTES.

Huckleberries and lawtonberries are coming forward from the U.S.

Watermelons will sell well around Dominion Day.

The Valencia orange crop in California is short. Last year it was 9,000 cars. One New York man estimates that at outside it will not exceed 5,000 cars this season.

Most unusual heavy rains in Florida have interfered with growth and shipment of vegetables.

Honduras has sent its first shipment of bananas to Europe, 25,000 bunches going to Hamburg.

Good quality oranges ruled firm in New York last week.

London Grocers Lend Organization a Hand

Several Go Out to Belmont, Ont., to Attend Meeting—Eight Added to the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association — Sidelights on the Trip—A Pleasant as Well as Profitable Time.

London, Ont., June 19.—(Special)—On Wednesday evening last a deputation from the London Retail Grocers' Association went to Belmont, by invitation, to attend a meeting of the merchants of Belmont and the surrounding villages. The deputation consisted of Pres. John Diprose, Treas. Thos. Shaw, G. B. Drake, J. Dalgleish and W. A. Palmer, also E. J. Ryan.

A profitable and pleasant evening was the result, as every one of the deputation had to make a speech; some of them had to sing in the bargain, and those that could not sing had to tell a story. In connection with the pleasant portion of the evening one should not overlook Gordon Drake, with that infectious laugh. As Pres. Diprose intimated, it was better than any tonic.

Supper and Addresses.

The country merchants provided a nice little supper at the Charles House, which certainly was enjoyed by all. After the supper addresses were made on trade matters, including organization legislation, peddlers' licenses, and last but not the least one, the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association.

Eight members from the villages paid their fees for the Ontario Association. Pres. Diprose remarked that this would gladden the heart of Pres. Clark, of the Ontario body, and give encouragement to the executive to go ahead with the good work.

Treas. Thos. Shaw made a number of explanations for the benefit of the country merchants, which were appreciated very much. The credit belongs to Gordon Drake for bringing the different organizations together. It might be here remarked that he is a great favorite with the country merchants, more especially because in the fall of the year, they all unload their apples on Gordon when they are plentiful. In fact it was a standing joke with them, "How are the apples, Gordon?"

W. J. Coates, president of the village organization, conducted the meeting in business-like manner.

Those present were, W. J. Coates, Mossley; J. Talbot and A. Hodder, Dorchester; C. R. Eden, Harrietsville; J. Bloomfield; M. T. Payne, W. H. Soole, L. Purdy, O. Reid and W. Brown from Belmont; Pres. Diprose, Thos. Shaw, G. B. Drake, W. A. Palmer, J. Dalgleish, E. J. Ryan and J. Palmer.

On the Way Home.

Pres. Diprose drove out behind Gordon Drake's fine black team and rode home in Palmer's automobile. He want-

AN IMPORTANT VISIT.

More Than Half a Hundred British Manufacturers Touring Canada.

Montreal, June 20.—(Special.)—The party of British manufacturers referred to in The Grocer some weeks ago, visited Montreal on Monday. The embassy is considered to be the most important that ever left the shores of Great Britain for any of the self-governing colonies, as it includes the representatives of some 60 prominent British manufacturing firms. They are touring Canada with the object of observing first hand our resources, and it is believed some of them may decide to establish branch factories in this country.

The following firms of interest to the grocery trade are represented:—

Peak, Frean & Co., London, biscuit makers, $2,500,000.

Jas. Keiller & Son, Dundee and London, marmalade, chocolate, preserved fruits, $2,000,000.

A. J. Caley & Son, Norwich and London, mineral waters, chocolates and crackers, cider, $600,000.

Fardons' Vinegar Co., Birmingham, malt vinegar brewers.

Major Leather, representing Premier Refining Co., London.

Brown, Hopewood & Gilbert, Birmingham, wholesale provision merchants, $150,000.

Fish Weather Has Been in Retailer's Favor

So Far This Year—Has Allowed Beter Display of Fish—Cost of Refrigeration Has Been Less—More Difficult to Show Fish as Weather Becomes Warmer — Big Catch of Cod in Norway Depressing Market.

The weather man has been exceedingly kind to fish trade this year, at least from the retailer's point of view. While during other years we have had a great deal warm weather before this, during last couple of months there has been little real warm weather. Of course, as soon as the temperature reaches a certain point in the spring, refrigeration is necessary to keep fish in best condition, but if weather does not get too warm the cost of this is accordingly less. Besides, the weather has allowed the display of fish with less risk of loss. As weather becomes warmer, it will be more difficult to show fish unless the dealer has the desired glass refrigerator case used for the purpose.

The mackerel catch on the Nova Scotia coast so far this season is away below the average. Salmon are coming in better in New Brunswick. Whitefish, trout and halibut are three good selling lines of fresh fish.

It looks like easier prices on new cure codfish. Norway, it is estimated, will have close on double a normal catch and this is having a depressing influence on all markets.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL. — Buck and roe shads are practically finished, while dressed bullheads and perch are very scarce. Lake trout and whitefish, also pickerel, are more plentiful, and prices are lower. Gaspe salmon is now in season, and price is reasonable. Fancy large fresh mackerel are selling freely.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—A regular even trade is being done in fish for season of year. Fresh fish is, of course, the line that predominates. Whitefish, trout and halibut are big selling favorites at present time. Lake Erie herring are plentiful and on account of low price are selling well.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.—Heavy winds and rains have greatly interfered with fishing, and catches of marketable fish have been rather small. Salmon are coming in better quantities than for past ten days, and there is reason to believe from the size of the present catches that market will be well supplied, and that a good run will be experienced. The present price ranges from 17 to 22 cents, according to cut. Local grocers who conduct fish departments in connection with their business say that business is slackening at present in this line, but sales up to the present have been encouraging.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—The mackerel catch on Nova Scotia coast so far is away below average, and prospects for any large hauls of fish are not good. Only a few small catches were made during present week.

There is little doing at present in the line of pickled and dry fish. Dealers are more interested in closing out stocks of old cure before making contracts for the new catch. The abnormal catch in Norway, which it is estimated will reach 100,000,000 codfish against 55,000,000 ordinary catch, has completely upset all the large consuming markets.

A pleasing feature of situation is good catch of scale fish, particularly on the Nova Scotia coast, some of the districts reporting largest catch for years.

No opening prices have as yet been quoted on salt mackerel. These will be governed entirely by demand from United States market.

MANITOBA.

WINNIPEG.—There is a good demand for fresh fish, and theavailable supply is ample. The season on Lake Winnipeg has opened, and there is now a good supply of fresh whitefish. Salmon is 2c per lb. cheaper. Mackerel, smelt and soles are now on the market.

Season for Smoked and Cooked Meats

Now at Hand—Weather Should Soon Bring Big Demand for These Lines—Butter is Easier—Increase in Make and Less Demand from West—Eggs Still Being Stored—New Cheese is Easier.

The season for smoked and cooked meats is now with us, but it will loom larger under continued warmer and more favorable weather. It is usual at this season for sales on these lines to be on a much larger scale than during cooler months of year This has been true this year to some extent, but the dealer himself knows that the weather has not been favorable to best results. Now, however, Old Sol can be expected to hand out a better brand of sunshine, and smoked and cooked meats will shortly swing into the limelight. For this demand the dealer should be prepared. The advent of the picnic and camping season should bring a good trade in cooked meats of all kinds.

The West is becoming independent of the East—in regard to butter. For the past couple of months the West, even as far towards the setting sun as Vancouver has found it necessary to run back East in order to get butter to cover its bread. This demand has almost disappeared, the centre West now producing nearly enough to supply the Western provinces. As a result, speaking generally, the market is easier, with declines registered at some centres. Yet at other centres, although easiness was regarded as apparent last week, market has ruled steady. This may be explained to some extent by fact that some butter is being stored, in spite of fact that prices are ruling above normal. June butter is desirable for storing purposes, and country shippers, realizing this, have been firm in their ideas.

Pastures are good in nearly every part of the country, and there should be a big flow of milk. This should mean an easiness in butter, unless dealers insist in storing it, even at the high price. Dealers say the price is too high for storing. Lower prices might probably bring some more trade from the West.

The weather has been favorable for eggs to arrive in good condition, and storing has continued at many centres. There has also been a fair consumptive demand due to high price of meats, but there has been a big run on eggs this year, and public appetite is somewhat wavering. Receipts continue on a good scale, although behind last year's record at some centres.

New cheese is easier, influenced by trend of country boards, which, in turn, have been ruled by increase in production, the total of which should reach a good figure during June.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—Prices for lard remain unchanged, and as a result there is a steady demand for both local and country account. Demand for smoked meats is still dull, and trade is quiet. An improvement in trade for smoked and cooked meats should be noticeable from now on, as it looks as if the recent cold snap has passed and summer weather here in real fashion.

BUTTER.—A weak feeling continues in the butter market, and prices are on the downward move, still quotations are too high as it is, for this time of the year. An easy feeling prevails in Montreal owing to an accumulation of stocks on spot and an unusually small demand from the northwest and Vancouver.

EGGS.—Supplies of eggs coming forward are satisfactory, but the receipts show a slight decrease over corresponding period of last year. The market for selects and No. 1 stock remains steady, there being a good local demand owing to high prices asked for all fresh meats. There is not so much activity as far as the lower grades are concerned.

CHEESE. — The general trend of prices at country points is downward, and it would not be at all surprising to see a further decline following on the easy feeling. Still a fair amount of export business has been transacted, as the stocks of Canadian cheese in London are light for this time of the year, and as prices of meats, etc., are high, there is an increase in cheese consumption.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS.—A normal movement of pork products is reported by wholesalers. At this season it is natural to look for a greater demand in smoked and cooked meats than is present during the cooler months of the year. This is true this year as well, but only to extent that weather would lead us to expect.

Prices show little or no variation. Long clear may be a little firmer, at least one house quotes it at 14 to 14½ cents. Hogs show little change, and some dealers seem uncertain as to their course. Cattle and meats in general are high.

BUTTER.—Butter prices are stationary at last week's prices, with exception of dairy solids, which are a little off. Last week dealers regarded market as rather weak. Explanations of why this did not follow is not exactly clear. Pastures are certainly in excellent condition, and as one man said, "if the cows are in the country, we should certainly get a flood of butter." In the country 24 to 24½ cents is being paid for creamery prints.

One reason for steadiness is probably that some butter is being stored. June butter is in great demand for storage purposes, and country shippers, knowing this, are firm in their ideas, although wholesalers declare prices are too high for storing. Still supplies are disappearing.

EGGS.—"We are getting 25c for candled and 23c for uncandled stock," said one firm this week anent eggs. This would indicate a firmer feeling, but several other firms still quoted same prices as last week.

"There is no doubt," said one dealer, "however, that for guaranteed stock a price higher than our quotations might be secured."

Prices in the country remain on a par with last week. Receipts are on quite liberal scale, and storage is taking care of a considerable quantity. The weather has been favorable for this.

"Yes, the weather has been favorable," said one man, "but the price has not."

CHEESE.—Slight waverings reported in new cheese continued during last week, country markets all reaching a lower level than during previous week. Our quotations are easier by about ¼ cent. Increased make is cause of easiness, and total June production should be large.

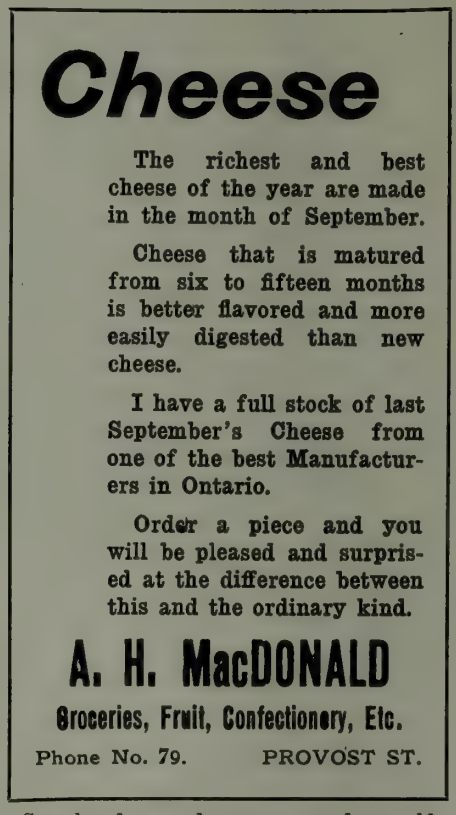
Selling Cheese by Means of Advertising

Sample of an Ad. Used by Nova Scotia Dealer Which Has Power to Bring Business—Selling Talk Worth While — A Good Subject on Which to Base an Advertisement.

There is no reason why the cheese department of a grocery store should not be developed into an extensive and profitable one. There are some dealers who have already made a special feature of cheese, and to good advantage, but still there are others who have not yet grasped the opportunities presented by this line.



Cheese
The richest and best cheese of the year are made in the month of September.
Cheese that is matured from six to fifteen months is better flavored and more easily digested than new cheese.
I have a full stock of last September's Cheese from one of the best Manufacturers in Ontario.
Order a piece and you will be pleased and surprised at the difference between this and the ordinary kind.

Sample of a good newspaper ad. on old cheese.

Of course, while there is cheese and cheese—fancy, cream and the ordinary variety — and the age which different customers prefer the latter varies considerably. Still it is the matured cheese that finds greatest favor with the public. There may be a certain demand for the new product, but it is far exceeded by that of the old. In addition to this, cheese made during certain months seems to be in greater request. One dealer in particular prefers, or at least he says his customers prefer, June cheese, for winter cutting, and September make for late winter and spring cutting.

Deserves Greater Effort.

While almost every grocer carries cheese in stock, there are a good many who put forth little or no effort to increase its sale, other than presenting it to view in the usual show case or display stand. There are others' however, who have realized that here there is a chance to increase business. Some have used personal talks to good advantage while others have gone further and used newspaper space and found it profitable.

Sample of a Good Cheese Ad.

Herewith is an advertisement on cheese used by a Nova Scotia dealer in his local paper, and to say the least, is an excellent selling talk on cheese. Educative and selling facts have been combined in a manner which should create the desire on the part of the reader to buy, and this is truly the object of every advertisement.

It will be noticed how one statement has been made to lead up to another. The first paragraph gives information regarding cheese that is interesting to customers. Then the writer of the ad. gradually leads up to quite forceful selling talk in the last sentence.

A commendable feature of this advertisement is that it has been handled well by the printer. Much of the selling force of many an ad. is lost by being poorly set up.

The Price Omitted.

It is generally deemed advisable by ad. writers to add a price, but whether it would have been best in this case is a question, as the article advertised is rather a specialty and would probably command quite a high price, so that the addition of a quotation might not have been an improvement.

Another fact that can be made good use of in both personal talks and advertisements is the high food properties of cheese. Actual tests have shown that it ranges high in comparison with many other foods. Besides possessing a high food value, it is palatable, and can be used in a great number of ways.

CREAM TARTAR

CREAM TARTAR

GROCERS: It is poor business policy to offer to your customers articles that are not up to the recognized standard of quality. Cream of Tartar is so frequently adulterated that considerable care should be used to protect yourself against the possibility of handling Cream of Tartar that is adulterated or of low grade. Gillett's Cream Tartar is the pure unadulterated product of grapes, highly refined and absolutely guaranteed to be chemically pure.

Not an Enterprise for the "Quitter"

"If there is one enterprise on earth," says John Wanamaker, "that a 'quitter' should leave severely alone, it is advertising. To make a success of advertising one must be prepared to stick like a barnacle on a boat's bottom

"He must know before he begins it that he must spend money—lots of it.

"Somebody must tell him that he cannot hope to reap results commensurate with his expenditure early in the game.

"Advertising does not jerk; it pulls. It begins very gently at first, but the pull is steady. It increases day by day and year by year, until it exerts an irresistible power."

"I might say we use FIVE ROSES flour and think "it cannot be beaten. In fact, when I remarked a few days "ago that another bag of flour would soon be needed, my father "said, 'Well, I suppose there is no use getting you anything "but FIVE ROSES,' altho' it is miles farther to get it than "several other kinds at nearer stores."

(Name on request)

Five Roses Flour

Not Bleached Not Blended

LAKE OF THE WOODS MILLING COMPANY LIMITED KEEWATIN TRADE MARK REGISTERED

If one buyer will drive miles past other stores in order to be sure of FIVE ROSES, what of the woman who has merely a street to cross?

It is inevitable that the store where FIVE ROSES flour is sold becomes the supply house of the best cooks in your district —because permanent patronage gravitates to the man best able to satisfy it.

There are many women in Canada to-day, Brother Grocer, who made their first FIVE ROSES purchase in 1888. These are the good cooks that teach the younger generation how to use flour—how to buy it.

Because FIVE ROSES has shown ability to hold what it has won and reach out for more, the output has grown from 800 barrels in 1888 to 10,500 barrels to-day. And soon, very soon, the big Keewatin mills will be too small.

Why don't you get YOUR share of the profits involved in such a large turnover, a steadily growing turnover?
Your jobber knows FIVE ROSES—or write our nearest office.

THE TURNED-DOWN CORNER

¶ Here and there in the Ledger of Life you have turned down the corner of a page for remembrance sake — you'd forget something if the turned-down corner wasn't there.

¶ To-day turn down a corner deep and wide to remember this one sure fact, "quality is remembered long after price is forgotten." Every time you come to that particular page —remember, every time you try to sell inferior quality, think of the turned-down corner. What it stands for and what it really means to your success.

DOES YOUR BUSINESS NEED A TONIC ?

The best tonic for building up lost business energy is a

McCaskey Account Register

It will brace up your business system, prevent mistakes, misunderstandings—shorten book-keeping, improve trade and prove loss in case of fire.

Only one writing is necessary, it keeps the customers' accounts totalled to the minute. No night-work and worry for the dealer with a McCaskey Register.

Investigate the merits of this system.

has no rival. It is in a class by itself. There is always one by which the rest are measured. In the tea market that one has always been, and is to-day, TETLEY'S. Ask the particular buyer of good tea, and the answer is invariably TETLEY'S.

Put up to sell at $1.00, 75c, 60c, 50c, 40c.

Look for the elephant on every package—the guarantee of quality and excellence.
Beware of Imitations.

Purity-Cleanliness-Freshness

AFTER years of experiment in the proper making of jams, Chivers & Sons are now the recognized leaders of the preserved fruit industry in the Old Country. Exhaustive investigation by the world's best critics has pronounced them "excellent."

PURITY—Cleanliness—Freshness—these three, are the hall-mark of this world-famed make of food products. Starting in a very small way with a mere handful of employees, Chivers & Sons have developed into a thoroughly organized concern employing thousands of people.

Chivers & Sons' Fruit Preserves

have a flavour that is unequalled, being composed of the choicest fresh fruit skilfully prepared. This delicious flavour may be attributed to their method of preserving and packing, almost immediately after the fruit is gathered. This is an advantage obtained by Chivers' factory standing in the midst of thousands of acres of orchards in the finest fruit-growing district of Cambridgeshire.

A feature that you will find as a selling point is the careful packing in tins or bottles. By a special process all the tins are prepared so as to prevent the possibility of any detrimental effect on the fruit.

You safeguard your reputation, Mr. Grocer, by stocking foodstuffs of perfect purity and quality—tried and tested. You will find it the means of bringing many repeat orders—at good profit.

The Grocer Who Pushes

Redpath

Extra Granulated SUGAR

wins trade from the dealer who tries to satisfy his customers with other brands.

For over half a century "REDPATH Sugar" has meant, to Canadians, the "best sugar." The new 2 and 5 Pound REDPATH Sealed Cartons, so clean, so convenient, and the vigorous advertising campaign which is being carried on for REDPATH Sugar, have strengthened the desire among your best customers to get REDPATH Sugar in the original packages.

It follows that the Grocer who resists this desire inevitably loses trade to that wiser Grocer who gladly satisfies it, and features REDPATH Extra Granulated Sugar in the original 2 and 5 Pound Sealed Cartons.

THE TEST OF SERVICE

Few electric coffee mills develop trouble in the first year of their service. To the new owner, enthusiastic over the beauty and convenience of his new mill, what is out of sight is more than likely to be out of mind.

But to the level head buyer the value of foresight in what is out of sight needs no explaining. He knows that on these parts depend the life and service of his mill. Many a COLES mill is to-day, after three or four years service, giving just as good satisfaction as when it came fresh from the factory. Is this kind of service worth anything to you?

Hold a Bottle in Your Hand

One top-notch retail salesman we know attracts the housewife's attention to Shirriff's True Vanilla by taking a bottle and holding it in his hand. Then, with his pencil, he points to the words:

Shirriff's True Vanilla

"Notice the words, True Vanilla, Madam," he says. He then goes on to explain to her their meaning, telling her that Shirriff's True Vanilla is the real extract of Mexican Vanilla beans, and not a chemical imitation. He asks her if she wouldn't like her cakes, puddings, and sauces to have the real Vanilla flavor, which is far more delicious than any imitation flavor. He winds up by telling her how Shirriff's True Vanilla excels in strength, and how many cakes one bottle will flavor. He rarely fails to make the sale.

Upon request we will send you a list of selling points that have proved successful in promoting the retail sale of Shirriff's True Vanilla.

GET AFTER THE PEDDLER

Reach out after the trade he is getting—the trade that rightfuily belongs to you. But how is this to be done? Only by educating your customers to purchase goods the peddler cannot buy. You can never hope to win back the peddler's tea trade by selling bulk teas. The peddler sells that.

Concentrate your energy and selling force on pushing a tea of supreme quality—well advertised and having an enormous sale—a tea the peddler cannot buy. Such a tea is

"SALADA"

The most profitable tea for a grocer to handle. For twenty years it has maintained its prestige as the highest grade tea. A constantly increasing demand shows its great value to every grocer as a sure trade-winner. With "SALADA" you serve the public well, and the peddler can't take your trade.

WHY EXPERIMENT?

GROCERS: In ordering Yeast Cakes, always be careful to specify ROYAL YEAST. If you neglect to take this precaution you are liable to be imposed upon and put to needless expense by having your order filled with one of the poor imitations for which there is little or no demand. We know of some houses that might do this. The original good kind with the blue label is the kind the consumers want. Avoid imitations which are known and represented as the "just as good" kinds.

Good Opportunities in Summer Lines

Whether Weather is Hot or Cold People Must Eat—Percentage of Those on Holiday Never Large at Any Time—A Winnipeg Window Display Featuring Hot Weather Goods—Dealer Strongly Recommends the Window as Aid to Sales.

Whether we live to eat or not, we must eat to live. This is where the importance of the retail grocer comes in. He supplies the necessaries of life and whether summer or winter everybody must come to him.

Too many dealers have got the idea that the summer months are dull and quiet. But things are usually as we make them; they are the results of our own work or the absence of it. Now that the warm weather is here, it must not be supposed that people are going to cry a halt on their digestive organs and fast until the autumn days come again. It is surprising the consistency with which people take their places at the table three times a day—and some even four.

Summer Goods Sell Easily.

It is perhaps true that the same class of food it not always purchased in summer as in winter, but food is bought just the same. There are summer resorts, it is true, and people go to them in July and August, but when one thinks of it the percentage of the population of any town or city which is absent at summer resorts is very small.

In the great majority of cases during the summer months there are just as many visitors in towns and cities as absentees at the watering places. Having therefore reached the conclusion that people eat just as much in summer as in winter and that there are practically as many to feed, the question arises how to get the business.

List of Goods to Push.

The writer has talked to grocers, who, when summer comes, make out a list of goods which they know they can sell easily. Then they display, display and display these goods where they can be seen, and advertise them consistently in their paper.

A look at the illustration above shows a tempting window. It was dressed by R. H. Graham, a Winnipeg dealer, who despite the fact that he has been in business only a little more than two years has made rapid advancement.

Mr. Graham places window dressing at the top so far as getting new business is concerned. "I consider my window," he recently said, "as a most valuable if not the most valuable form of advertising to me. Day after day and every hour of the day, I see people stop to look at the window, and then walk in.

"I have secured many new customers by it, and if once we get a customer we generally manage to keep him."

The Lines on Display.

In the window shown here, Mr. Graham has placed such lines as olives, sardines, preserved fruit and vegetables, pickles, meat sauces, etc., in the centre, confectionery on the right and on the shelf to the left may be seen packages of cereals. These are all good spring and summer sellers and from the attractive appearance of the window, one can easily understand the enthusiasm of this dealer on the value of the window as a selling force. In showing the goods mentioned Mr. Graham has used a number of pieces of plate glass supported by bottles.

"In our window displays," he says, "we try to bring into prominence lines that are escaping attention often because people are ignorant that they are obtainable or ignorant of their existence. You will find people in this city to-day with most discriminating tastes and with money to gratify such whims. It is these people that we try to get after in our window display."

Cater to Many Tastes.

Winnipeg, from its location as gateway to the West, has, naturally a cosmopolitan population and dealers have to cater to many tastes in every season. Therefore, when Mr. Graham gets in a new line of goods he invariably makes a display in the hope that it may attract representatives of some particular nationality. By this method, he claims, he sells large quantities of goods that otherwise would not be disposed of.

With summer here in earnest it is advisable that every dealer has lines out for as much extra trade as possible. The "hot weather goods," sign should be hung upon those goods which pay a fair profit above cost of doing business. Extra trade is sure to come and summer will be found to be just as profitable as any other season.

Good Sellers During the Camping Season

Lines of Goods That Can be Disposed of Easily, Providing Proper Attention is Given Them — A Window Suggestion— Local Picnics and Outings Help This Trade.

Dreaming is acknowledged as a bad habit. Allowing this to be true—there are many people at the present time who possess a bad habit; for where is there a person at this season of the year who does not dream of lake and river, of canoe and rowboat, of fishing and paddling and bathing and all those other delightful experiences which go along with the summer outing.

A good many have already had their dreams of outdoor life beside lake or stream realized, but there are a great many more during the next three months who will follow in their footsteps. Nature is calling loudly to the people to partake of her many pleasures. Many have found the call too appealing, and have responded, while others are now planning to do so.

Must be Gone After.

The season for the sale of camp goods is now well under way, and will shortly be in full swing. How much have you profited, Mr. Grocer, or how much do you expect to profit during the coming three months? It will depend pretty well on just how much effort you put forth to secure this particular business. It is there for the merchant who is willing to go after it, and it behooves him to go after it good and strong.

If you have already been doing something to corral the camp goods trade, so much the better. Keep it up for results should warrant the attention to it. If you have not, however, now is the time to begin. Now is the time to make plans and by mapping out a progressive campaign of advertising and window displays of these lines, some extra and profitable business should be secured.

Many Lines to Offer.

There are certain lines of goods peculiar to the camp goods trade, although the range is quite extensive and varied. However, when people betake themselves to their summer homes, or on an outing, they do not want to have their pleasures hampered by slow meals. They want goods that can be easily and speedily prepared. This is the class of goods which the grocer must feature in order to arouse the camper's interest and attention.

Canned goods of different kinds immediately suggest themselves, and these are big sellers for this purpose. Although they may not be the stellar lines, tomatoes, corn, peas, beets, etc., command an important position. Then there are pork and beans, corned, roast, boiled and ready lunch beef, jellied veal, potted tongue and veal and other similar lines. At first thought, it would not seem that the campers, going to a spot where fresh fish are available for the catching, would think of taking along canned fish. However he does, and the more experienced the camper is, the more inclined he is to take along a good supply of this particular food. In fish, the grocer can offer salmon, sardines, herrings, smelts, anchovies and lobsters.

Chance for Condensed Milk.

There was a time when the campers frequently found it necessary to drink his tea and coffee without milk, unless he wished to tramp to the nearest farmhouse night and morning for a supply. This, however, detracted much from the pleasure of having the milk in his selected beverage. Now, however, canned milk has solved the problem. The camper will want this, and if he is a coffee drinker, concentrated coffee may now be had. Cocoa is another line that should be suggested.

There will be some warm days during the camping season, and during these and at other times, when the appetite languishes, something will be needed to coax it back again. Sauces, pickles, olives, catsup, etc., are good appetizers, while lemonade powders, soft drinks, raspberry vinegar, lime juice and other liquids will be desirable on the warm days.

And even yet we have not completed the list of goods which will sell. There are light breakfast foods, condensed soups, cheese, mustard, cooked ham, bacon, macaroni, biscuit, etc. For desserts there will need to be a good supply of canned and preserved fruits, jams, marmalades and jelly powders taken along as fresh fruits are generally in limited supply and variety at the summer camp.

Use Displays and Newspaper.

Having determined the goods which the camper and picnicker wants, the next question is how to get them interested in your particular goods in such a way as to make sales. Advertising can be made good use of, but window display is a method that properly followed should bring good results.

The T. Eaton Co., Toronto, had a suggestive display last week. The setting was good. At the rear a canoe was placed in a sloping position. There was also a tent and in front of it an imitation camp fire made to look quite realistic by electric light. Over the fire hung a camp pot. Towards the front of the window was a rough board orange box, turned on its side, and on and around this nearly all the articles mentioned above were shown. At the same time the Eaton Co. gave a good deal of advertising space to camping supplies. By combining advertising and window displays, better results will be secured.

Appropriate Setting Desirable.

In a camp goods window, it is most desirable to have an appropriate setting. It attracts attention at once. Many a grocer contends that he has not the time to put in a realistic setting. This should not require a great deal of time. A simple arrangement will carry out the idea. A canoe either ordinary size or miniature placed in the window, a tent with a camp fire, if possible, but even a hammock placed in position, with a couple of fishing rods, will suggest the idea. The setting may be made as elaborate as the trimmer desires, but any simple arrangement is better than none. It would be difficult to outline any method of placing the goods in the window, as there is such an extensive range to be shown. The display should be set off with a neatly written and suggestive show card.

The main thing is that the grocer get after this business—get after it by real live methods, and right away while the business is to be had. Not only will it get the camper's trade, but in every town during the summer months, there are many picnics and outings, and one of the chief features of any such outing is the lunch.

THE SHAD FISHING.

The Canadian Conservation Commission says that during past 10 years the shad fishery of Eastern Canada has declined about 50 per cent. In view of this decline the Government will this year operate for first time a floating hatchery, which will accommodate from 20 to 30 million shad eggs.

In Sydney, Australia, a regular conference under the title of "wages board" is held to lay down conditions in the retail grocery trade as to wages to be paid employes. The grocers have their representatives as also have the employes on the board, who select a chairman. The chairman of the present board is an attorney-at-law.

Mr. L. Galbraith, Harwich, Ont., writes as follows:—
Please find enclosed postal note for above amount. Cannot do without The Canadian Grocer.

Forty-Six Years in Business in Orillia

Thos. Mulcahy, One of the Pioneers of That Town — Has Seen It Grow From 500 Population to 8,000 — Methods to Which He Attributes His Success—Only One Line of Sugar and Vinegar Sold—Personal Interest in Customers.

It was a good many years ago that the practice prevailed of municipalities granting hotel licenses strictly according to population. Whenever a new license was applied for, a census had to be taken. If the required number could not be secured, the application failed.

If one were to ask Thos. Mulcahy, an Orillia, Ont., merchant, about his recollections of the early days in that town, he would probably tell you that he well remembers a census taken almost half a century ago, to see whether Orillia could stand another hotel or not. For every 250 population a license could be granted. Two would mean 500 and three would require 750 people. Mr. Mulcahy relates how difficult it was to get the third. When the census was being taken it was found there were not sufficient actual residents to make up the required 750. It was then found necessary to count in the river-drivers who happened to be in town, the inmates of the asylum, and hotel frequenters with no actual place of abode. The license was granted.

That was 46 years ago. Orillia has a population now somewhere around 8,000, so it can be said that Mr. Mulcahy has seen his adopted place of business grow up from an infant to a sturdy, progressive town. He has many interesting stories to tell about early life there; but as we are more interested in his success as a retail business man, remarks will be confined to his methods.

The Foundation Stones.

Ask him to what he attributes the development and prosperity of the business and he will tell you this: good goods, knowledge of the customer, courtesy and civility, studying and applying good points in trade papers, compact arrangement of departments and advertising.

It was in Oshawa, Ont., that Mr. Mulcahy began business. While he still operated a store there he opened the one in Orillia, and shortly after centered all his interests in the latter place.

He makes sure that in his grocery department good goods are stocked. He sells, for instance, only one line of sugar and one of vinegar. He was positive each was as good as he could purchase before he decided many years ago to handle it exclusively. Customers accept his word that they are the best, or equal to the best sugar or vinegar on the market.

"I tell the boys not to change," Mr. Munlcahy remarked, "to stick to the known always unless it is self-evident that a change should be made."

Should Know Customers.

A great deal of weight is placed on the value of knowing customers, in the Mulcahy store. Mrs. Brown or Mrs. Jones is greeted with her name always, and while the parcels are being tied up she is asked how the baby is, how that field of wheat she previously referred to was getting along, how Tom or Jack likes going to school in the city, etc., etc.

"This interest shown in her welfare," states Mr. Mulcahy, "is certainly appreciated. She observes we take a personal interest in her welfare and that it is not simply her trade we are after.

"Of course, you don't find conditions similar in large cities where the population is of such a transient character. But here we have customers stay with us for years and years. In fact one of the oldest said to me yesterday, 'forty-six years ago your grocery department was on the opposite side of the store.' A number of our present customers began with us when we first opened for business here. The children of many other old friends of the store deal with us now, and we believe it is chiefly because we have always shown a personal interest in their parents and themselves."

Employes are urged to be as civil and courteous as possible. Any little act of kindness that presents itself from time to time is willingly done.

Benefits from Trade Paper.

Mr. Mulcahy is a great believer in the trade paper. He has taken The Grocer practically ever since it was published, and has read it.

"I tell my boys to read the trade paper," he said," because I know they will always find something useful. While everything it contains may not apply to our business, yet a good deal does. On looking through it, I usually mark what I consider to be the best paragraphs and underline the best sentences in them. 'Good reading boys' is often tacked on so that no one will overlook it."

The Flight of Expenses.

To build up a business, goods must be sold at a fair profit above total costs and profits must be secured. "We have our special sales," Mr. Mulcahy says, "but we must maintain our profits to live in these days of high expense."

He maintains that wages for help and some other expenses have gone up 50 per cent. in recent years and this makes it absolutely necessary to be sure of a profit margin.

This store contains besides groceries, departments for dry goods, boots and shoes, and men's wear. A feature of the interior is the compact system of arrangement of these departments. There is no waste space and yet no overcrowding. Partitions in the centre of the floor give further room for stock and archways connect one department with another.

Uses the Newspapers.

The selling power of newspaper advertising is by no means lost sight of. In the Orillia papers may be seen full page advertisements from the Mulcahy store —and the ads are well written too.

The Silver Anniversary.

Despite the fact that Thos. Mulcahy is getting up in years, he is still as hale and hearty as many men twenty years younger. He makes regular trips to the markets in the city and has planed a trip to California next winter. In about three and a half years' time he will celebrate the completion of half a century of successful business in Orillia.

Ffty years in business in the one place is a record of which anyone might well be proud.

RICE, AN IMPORTANT FOOD.

Rice is one of the oldest foods cultivated by man. It has been cultivated in China for at least 5,000 years and it still forms by far the largest portion of the daily food, of the people of that country, as well as of Burmah and Japan and of the far East generally. In fact, there is probably no food which is so universally used as the main article of diet, for it forms the staple food of more than one-third of the human race.

The total production of rice is about 56 million tons of which more than one-third is grown in China, about 6 million tons in Japan and the rest in a great number of other countries, chiefly India and Burmah.

Bengal rice, known as Patna rice is firm and hard and is therefore suitable for cooking when the grain is required to be kept whole. Carolina rice in the old days enjoyed a great reputation but one of the indirect results of the American War of Secession was to bring the Carolina rice trade practically to an end. A kind of rice similar in many of it's good qualities to the old Carolina rice is now grown in large quantities in Java.

SUGAR DOWN AGAIN

Sugar has continued its downward movement, refined declining another 10 cents per cwt. at the first of this week. At the decline, prices are 45 cents above those ruling one year ago.

The good out-turn of the Cuban crop has been one of the depressing features, and it was found necessary to increase the original estimates set down for this year's crop. The tardiness with which fruits for preserving purposes have been moving forward has delayed the big movement of sugar, which is generally present at this time of the year. These things combined with good reports of beet crops in Europe has caused the continued easy market.

The sugar market has failed to steady since the decline. Cuba is now becoming more of a finished issue, and attention is being directed to the beet crop in Europe. So far reports have been favorable. News from this source will supply to a large extent the cue to the movement of the market. For this reason reports from Europe will be followed closely.

CROP PROSPECTS IN WEST

The crop conditions in the three prairie provinces this season are so far very promising. Although the spring was rather cold and wet, retarding seeding in some localities, yet upon the whole the indications to the present for a large crop are excellent.

The warm weather of the last few days has brought growing crops rapidly forward, and in many places wheat is a foot high, and is well rooted and stooled.

In Alberta all reports agree that present indications point to a bumper crop, it being much ahead of this time last year; and already the probabilities of a grain blockade are being freely discussed. In Saskatchewan and Manitoba, although growth is not so advanced as in the Western Provinces, still it is as far forward as at the corresponding period last year. Of course, things may happen between now and harvest time, but the most crucial period with the Western crop is nearly over. Most of the troubles that are likely to beset it later are of a local character, and not so apt to affect the crop in general.

The big grain growing province, Saskatchewan, is in the throes of a general election. The effect upon business, however, seems very slight. So far the great majority of the people appear to take very little interest in the result.

THE TRADE IN SUMMER

July is regarded by many dealers as a quiet month. There is absolutely no reason why it should be so. The demand for foodstuffs during the summer months does not abate, or at least should not, if the dealer continues to use his salesmanship powers to maintain business. There is a change in the variety of goods sold, but consumption keeps up just the same.

"Oh! everyone is out of town," is not an uncommon excuse from the listless merchant. Summer is the holiday season, but the percentage of absentees from any town at any one time, if figured out, would be found to be small, indeed. Besides there is a balancing up by the fact that there are visitors from other places in town. This is much to the advantage of the merchant, for it cannot be denied that the housewife is inclined to "spread" when there are visitors about, and many fancy lines and specialties which they are not accustomed to purchase at other times of the year will find sale.

There may be a tendency during the extremely warm days for appetites to lag, but this is not to the disadvantage of the grocer. It merely gives him an opportunity to introduce to his customers those lines which will coax the appetite along. Besides, during the warm weather the housewife purchases many lines already prepared, which at other times she would prepare herself.

So the grocer who analyzes the problem will find there is no reason for a let up in business during summer, and that the only difference is a change in the class of goods called for. It behooves him, therefore, to allow no let up in getting after business. He cannot afford to invite a dull season by discontinuing aggressive business-getting methods.

There is no reason for that eternal plaint on grocers' lips that "there is nothing doing during the vacation period."

BUILD UP THE TEA TRADE

In last week's issue announcement was made of the formation of a tea company to operate tea routes in various parts of Ontario. This is taken to infer that there will be a large tea-peddling company in opposition to the retail trade.

The natural outcome of such a situation will mean less trade to the dealer unless he can counteract its influence by making sure he holds his present tea business and gradually adds more.

There are at present many grocers throughout Canada who have built up splendid tea businesses in spite of strong opposition from the peddler. That others can do the same, there can be no doubt; and now that a company highly capitalized has gone into the business, greater efforts should be put forth by dealers, especially in the districts affected.

QUALITY VS. PRICE.

Recently reports have reached The Grocer of dealers being fined for selling adulterated goods. One case in particular was mentioned in last week's issue where a grocer had to pay $37 to settle a case. Ginger containing starch had been sold.

These reports indicate that insufficient attention is being paid by at least some dealers to quality and purity in goods purchased. They are too anxious to buy cheaply, believing they will have an advantage over competitors in selling.

Facts, however, are all against this supposition. The biggest retail grocery stores to-day, and the most successful, are those that have placed quality before price. The reason is that people want pure things to eat, and they go to the stores who can supply them. They may be fooled sometimes, but not always, and it is undoubtedly to the advantage of the retailer that they be not fooled at all.

PRICE REGULATION IN BUTTER

So many consumers and daily newspapers have claimed that the trade has been responsible for the high price of butter, that the remarks on the question of J. A. Ruddick, chief dairy commissioner, to the contrary will prove instructive reading. They appear in this issue in our Produce and Provision Department.

It has been referred to so often in The Grocer that butter supply in Canada has been inadequate during the past winter to meet demand, that it needs no further comment. All dealers will remember the importations of New Zealond and United States butter early this spring to help supply the call for butter. It has long since become an established fact, that when any article of commerce becomes scarce and there is a large demand for it, the price at once soars. This was the case with butter, but the daily press is usually so interested in catering to the multitude that it loses sight of such facts.

Since butter is an article of international trade, its price is regulated by supply and demand the world over. The world-wide scarcity during the past season accounts for the price. Anyone can see that since the spring season opened butter has gone down. The increased supply was the natural cause.

MAKE USE OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

The trade newspaper differs from other publications in one very important essential. Not only does the reading matter have a direct and practical interest for the reader, but every advertisement has the same. There is quite as much inducement for the trade newspaper subscriber to read the advertising sections as the editorial pages. This fact is pretty widely recognized, and most dealers look The Canadian Grocer through from cover to cover.

The information obtained in this way should not be lost. If a dealer reads his trade paper every week he undoubtedly benefits, but unless he takes some steps to retain the information, he does not realize the fullest benefit. Some system of tabulating information is needed. We suggest that readers of The Canadian Grocer study the advertising pages carefully and mark with a blue pencil everything which especially interests them. Clip out everything marked and paste the clippings in a scrap book. Better still, have several scrap books each devoted to some branch of the business. By this system it will be found easy to turn up any information desired.

The advantages of the idea will be patent to all. The dealer who follows it will have information with reference to every branch of retailing ready for reference at any time. The same idea might be used in the preservation of reading matter. Any article or item which has a point of particular interest might be clipped out and pasted in a scrap book for use in the future. Many window dressers find this to be a valuable idea. They keep every window display shown and thus secure ideas for their own work.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

There is plenty of business to be had during summer if the grocer goes after it.

* * *

The picnic season is here. It means not only more recreation, but more business as well for the grocer.

* * *

The questions on credit giving, and answers by Henry Johnson, Jr., in this issue, are worth careful perusal.

* * *

Forty-six years in business in the one town is the pretty good record of Thos. Mulcahy, of Orillia. Not many can beat it.

* * *

The income of John D. Rockefeller is $140 per minute. Don't tell this to the delivery boy. He often says, "I'm worth as much as any man."

* * *

If people don't eat as much fresh meat in summer as in winter, they eat something else. They have to live just the same, and the grocer gets the benefit of the change.

* * *

Someone poetically inclined says "that it's always safe to swat the fly unless he's on a custard pie." But wouldn't there be wails and woes if he were swatted on baby's nose?

* * *

Dominion Day falls on Monday next. As it is not possible for The Grocer to see all the window displays appropriat for the holiday, any good photographs would be appreciated.

* * *

No longer need the traveler kick his heels for a whole afternoon around the empty streets of a town which has closed up for the afternoon. By consulting The Grocer he can plan out his route to dodge the half-holiday.

* * *

If the daily press would begin a campaign to instil truthfulness into those shoppers who misrepresent the prices of other dealers, instead of making wholesale accusations of graft against retailers, the world would be better off. It would have a great deal more timber to work with.

Credit Giving Questions and the Answers

Where is the Proper Place to Dun a Customer?—What Would You Do in Case an Account is Disputed?—Should Bill of a Poor Pay be Discounted?—Further Explanation of Statement Submitted in April Issue—Some Items for Expense Account.

*By Henry Johnson, Jr.

Winnipeg, May 29, 1912.

Mr. Johnson, c|o Canadian Grocer.—

Dear Friend,—I find I did not make my statement very plain. I own the building. But I charged interest on building and fixtures so I should not charge rent. Neither should I charge contributions; that is voluntary. One hundred dollars would not let me out on that. Neither should I charge for trade papers. I take several, but that is optional.. I think it pays to take them. Taxes and sundries should be in. My business of 1910 was $24,579; for 1911, $28,455.17, not quite $4,000, gain. I commence Feb. 1st for 1912. Feb. and March show a gain of $166.24. My gain in April will be much more as I bought a car of seed potatoes and have them all contracted to be taken from the car, so there will not be any expense hauling. I have been doing business for myself for eight years. My inventory has never been over $1,700, generally, $1,500. I don't suppose you would do business my way. I don't advise anyone to. I credit most anyone for a small amount, carry farmers one year, sometimes more, lose a lot every year. In spite of all losses I have made some money every year. With best wishes for you and The Canadian Grocer, the best trade paper I ever saw, I remain, yours,

A Lesson From Solomon.

If that is not a prize letter, I want to be "shown." Makes me think of old Solomon with his profound wisdom: "Better a dinner of herbs and contentment than a stalled ox and strife therewith." The square peg who has found a square hole into which to fit; who has studied the exact shape of that hole so that he can fit in snugly; who has then fixed himself firmly into it, and is now perfectly content to stay right there, "making some money every year" — why, what more can anybody want?

This man would not pass as a literary man, generally; yet I should like to compare the concise little story he has given us in these two brief letters—the first appeared in April 26 issue—with the best of anyone of supposedly high attainments. The little tale is a classic in its simplicity and sufficiency. Can you picture him as he is in daily life? the reliable friend of all; knowing everybody; helping everybody to the limit of his conservative ability with his "voluntary contributions whereof it appears that his left hand knows nothing that his right hand does? This is surely a reproduction, in a slightly different form, but just as true to life, of The Village Blacksmith; a character we can all so justly love and ever profoundly respect.

The Charging of Rent.

I dislike to wake up and disturb this idyll with sordid business details; but we must do it if only for the fuller enlightenment of some who might conclude that such methods may do for general rules. Hence, here goes:

It is better to charge interest on building and fixtures than to follow some examples and not charge anything. It would be still better to charge the business with such a rental of the building as it would reasonably bring if leased to another. Then interest and depreciation should be charged against the building. The remainder would constitute the net earnings of the building. Furniture, etc., should be depreciated 5 per cent. to 10 per cent. annually: Interest should be charged against the entire capital investment.

Contributions as Expense.

Contributions that are made out of the $75 monthly salary which H——— allows himself do not concern the business and are not expense; but every dollar that goes out of the business must be accounted for. If contributions are made as a matter of good business policy, they are made because the making thereof is good for the business; hence, valuable to the business; ergo, a part of business expense. If they are made because it is the part of a good citizen to make them, then they are a portion of the duty of the citizens to his community; hence, are like taxes; therefore, must be considered part of the expense. You cannot take something for nothing. When you spend a dollar, you take it from where that dollar was; and you must account for it—call it what you will. Thus contributions must be credited to the business, and the most logical credit is to the expense account.

Same with trade papers. H——— "thinks it pays to take them." So does it pay to buy light. Pays whom? The business. Hence the business must foot the bills.

In Harmony With Environment.

For the rest I have no possible criticism. It is all admirable. To say that he would not advise another to do as he does is only to say that what is good for one business may not be good for another. I incline to the belief that H——— knows just what he is doing and why he does it; that he has fitted himself perfectly to his environment; that he does just the right thing in his circumstances and for the community in which he lives; that in every respect he is a good citizen.

My good friend, I thank you for your letters. If fortune ever favors me by landing me in your neighborhood, I shall do myself the honor of paying you a visit.

Credit and Collection Questions.

I have a list of questions entitled "Credits and Collections." There are 44 of them, many of which are mere repetitions to all intents and purposes; and many more of which can only be sufficiently answered by "Use Your Judgment." For instance:

No. 4. If you have a stipulated time for settlement, in case the customer fails to pay promptly, would you demand a note?

No. 10. In holding a special sale or selling regular goods at special prices, would you demand cash from your credit customer?

No. 11. Would you allow a wealthy or influential customer to override your business rules?

No. 17. Would you consider it good business to dun a customer in the store?

No. 18, Do you think it proper to mail statements to patrons at the end of each month?

No. 19. Should a merchant in presenting his bill leave the impression that he is in sore need of money?

No. 22. Would you advise the discounting of a bill, say 10 per cent., from a patron who is considered poor pay, in order to make collections?

No. 28. Would you advise the placing of account in judgment should customer fail to meet your requirements?

No. 29. Would you give trade checks when customer has an open book account?

No. 39. In case of disputed account you know you are right in demanding payment, but in case you make the demand you lose the customer, what would you do?

No. 40. How would you handle a credit customer who trades with you when he wants credit and with your competitor when he has the cash?

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

Some Answers Submitted.

To which a little comment might be added as follows:

No. 17. The store is the place of business. The giving of credit is arranged there. The payments are made there. Dunning should also preferably be done there when you get the chance on a slow customer—no other place is quite so suitable.

No. 18. If that is your practice, it is proper. If not, it is not.

No. 19. Use careful judgment. It may work sometimes; but remember the boy who cried "wolf."

No. 22. If you don't you may have to "discount it" 50 per cent. or 100 per cent. later on. Therefore, take 90 per cent. quick; congratulate yourself on your good fortune; and then "sin no more."

No. 28. If the "judgment" is going to help you enough to make up for the "stink" of gossip. As a general thing it is good judgment to take your loss quickly, wipe off the amount from your resources, and extend no more credit. Take due cognizance of the long tongue of the "offended" buyer, and consider that well in the equation.

No. 29. As a general thing, especially in a small town, you must treat all alike, even though they are not all entitled to the same treatment. You must consider this feature when you inaugurate the "sale."

The Customer Always Right.

No. 39. Usually it pays to remember that "the customer is always right," even though it "hurts" sometimes. Better the definite loss now, that you know about, than the indefinite, indeterminate loss that may otherwise be entailed. If you yield, you can probably "make it up on her" someway; but she's gone if you stand firm. Plenty of opportunity for good judgment here.

No. 40. If the credit is profitable, continue the account—but, of course, it is NOT profitable if it is never paid. Cut out all feeling in the matter. If the account pays, continue it, and exercise your best ingenuity, continually and unremittingly, to win the entire trade of the customer. You always have this opportunity so long as she trades with you, even on time; but you will not have the opportunity if you once drive her away.

Some others of the questions will bear more detailed discussion and I shall take them up again.

London Grocers Hold Annual Excursion

Seven Hundred Take in Their Excursion to Detroit—Had a Delightful Outing—Many Attend Ball Game and See Ty Cobb in Action—Joy Riders Among the Excursionists—Take Automobile Ride Around the City.

London,Ont., June 27.—The excursion of the London Retail Grocers to Detroit on Wednesday, June 19 was perhaps the most delightful of the many successful outings the grocers of London have had. The weather was made to order it being a beautiful balmy summer's day, such as to make everyone wear that smile that denotes real happiness. They forgot the care of shop and thought only of a good time, and they certainly had it. There were nine coaches filled with grocers and their friends—in all seven hundred people boarded the train at the G.T.R. depot at 7.45 a.m.

The train had not gone many miles before the excellent committee started to look after their patrons, baskets of oranges, bananas and sandwiches being passed through the train as well as liquid refreshments in the shape of soft drinks and buttermilk. Two London biscuit and candy mannufacturers presented each lady with a souvenir package of candy and biscuits. Chewing gum was also in evidence as well as olives and other relishes.

The travelers of all the local wholesale houses were on hand to look after their customers, while representatives of some Toronto Firms were also present. In the baggage car ahead was where the real fun took place. Here grocer, clerk and traveler congregated together. Gordon Drake and Albert Young served out refreshments while a quartette consisting of Alf. Carr, M. Baker, Ed. Ryan and R. Noel sang a great variety of songs both old and new.

Many Attend Ball Game.

Arriving at Detroit at 10.30 the crowd scattered, some going to Belle Isle Park, while others visited the stores and friends. In the afternoon the majority went to the baseball park to see Detroit and Cleveland of the American League battle for nine innings. Gregg, the pitcher for Cleveland, was too much for the "Tigers," even the great Ty Cobb striking out. The London fans were disappointed as they wanted to see Detroit win. The few who stayed over for Thursday's game saw Detroit win in a game full of excitement.

Several of the excursionists formed automobile parties during the afternoon, among the joyriders being Gordon Drake, Walter Hungerford of A. M. Smith & Co., Clem Garvey, Tom Shaw, Harry Bell, Mr. Baker, Eddie Richards, Tom Ranahan and others. The return special arrived in London at midnight in time for everyone to get a street car home.

Committee in Charge.

The committee who worked hard to make the outing a success were John Diprose, Pres.; J. A. McFarlane, 1st vice-president; H. Forentaine, 2nd vice-president; Thos. Shaw, treasurer; Jas. McKenzie, secretary; G. B. Drake, M. A. Young, J. W. Eddy, N. McLeod, W. Mullins, Harry Ranahan and E. J. Ryan.

On the Side.

Fred Tobias and Joe Boyd did not root as well as usual at the ball game. Perhaps that lady was the cause.

The blue given away by the manufacturers didn't dampen the spirits of the ladies.

John Diprose wished that Dave Clark and Billy Miller, of Toronto, were along.

Dick Donagby was one of the ex-grocers who took the trip. The boys were glad to see him again.

President Diprose made himself solid with the ladies by his liberal dispensing of the olives.

Tom Shaw generally stays two days, but his better half stayed herself this time and sent Tom home.

GATHER IDEAS FROM OTHERS.

While it is commendable that dealers should to a large extent put into practice ideas of their own, still he should make full use of any good ideas that other merchants may use. Very often he will see a window or interior display that he would be able to use to advantage himself or he may see an advertisement that particularly appeals to him. The dealer should study the advertisements of other stores, both in his own and other towns. From them he may gain points for the general advertising or it may be only an advertising phrase that he may secure, but he should continually be on the lookout for any of these helps. By giving attention to the displays of other stores he may get ideas which he may use in whole or part in his own business. Many of the dealers in the smaller towns at intervals make trips to the larger centres, where they secure many ideas which they are able to put into practice in their own store.

Geiger & Shetler have succeeded M. M. Durkee, general merchants, Semans, Sask.

Current News of the Week

Quebec and Maritime Provinces.

Miss Hannah Lipsett, Fredericton, N. B., has sold her grocery business to H. A. Cronkhite.

W. R. Spooner, manager of Halifax Cold Storage Co., Limited, Montreal, has returned from his annual Western trip.

Alfred H. Brittain, managing director of The Maritime Fish Corporation, Limited, Montreal, has just returned from his honeymoon.

John Robertson & Son, Limited, wholesale grocers and importers, Montreal, have been incorporated with capital stock of $250,000.

Leonard Bros., wholesale fish dealers, Montreal, are installing an additional electric elevator, and are increasing capacity of their cold storage.

Share & Campbell, retail grocers, Gottingen Street, Halifax, N. S., have dissolved. The business will be continued under same name by W. L. Share.

T. A. Wilson, of J. & W. Kearney, tea merchants, Montreal, who has been ill with erysipelas for past couple of weeks, will soon be in his usual good health again.

A. G. Snowdon, of Snowdon & Ebbitt, commission merchants, Montreal, is homeward bound from the British Isles, having started thence on a business trip some few weeks ago.

Bruno Trudel, managing director of tea and spice department of L. Chaput Fils et Cie., Limitee, Montreal, has returned from a business trip to Toronto, Port Arthur and Fort William.

J. A. Nadeau, of Forbes & Nadeau, Montreal, recently made a short business trip through Northern Quebec towns. Mr. Nadeau has evidently taken to mountain climbing, as he spends his weekends always among the Laurentians. W. E. Forbes of same firm has just returned from holidays spent at Nomingue, Queebc, where he indulged in considerable trout fishing.

The eighteenth annual meeting of the Maritime Board of Trade will open at Truro, N. S., on Wednesday, Aug. 21. Mr. Williams, of Moncton ,the secretary, who looks for a big attendance at the forthcoming meeting, is urging the several boards to consider and forward the subjects they wish to have discussed. A new by-law passed last year at Moncton provides that: "No subject of a purely local character, in which the interest of one board may be opposed to the interests of others, will be allowed on the program for discussion at any meeting.

Ontario.

J. E. Wilson, grocer, Blind River, Ont., is moving to Steelton, Ont.

Mrs. H. Moss, grocer, Hamilton, Ont., is succeeded by J. R. Turner.

W. S. Wilcox, general merchant, Inwood, Ont., has sold his business.

Chas. Rishor, wholesale grocer, Peterboro, Ont., was in Toronto on Friday last on business.

A. E. Edwards, grocer, Beaverton, Ont., has recently brightened up the front of his store.

The merchants of Galt, Ont., will hold this year's picnic to Port Stanley on Thursday, July 25.

Major J. M. Ross, of the Canadian Cereal and Milling Co., Toronto, is attending the military camp at Goderich.

Howard Cane, of Wm. Cane & Sons Co., Ltd., woodenware manufacturers, Newmarket, Ont., is on a business trip to Winnipeg.

McKinnon & Davidson, grocers, Sudbury, Ont., have purchased the business of D. McKinley, of that town. They will conduct it as a branch.

Charles R. Ead, of St. Thomas, has sold his grocery business to William J. Powell. Mr. Eads expects to enter the grocery business in Toronto.

The Toronto open air horse show will be held as usual on the morning of July 1 this year. A number of grocers will enter in the delivery outfit contest.

MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co. have opened a show room at 31 Front Street East, Toronto, for such lines as Christmas crackers, stockings, novelties and confectionery.

The grocers of Chatham, Ont., have inaugurated a weekly half holiday for the summer months. Beginning with June 18 and continuing till Sept. 1. all the grocery stores will close at one o'clock on Tuesday afternoons. They will not close, however, on weeks in which there is a public holiday.

Jas. Patterson, general merchant, Ceylon, Ont., has left for a six month trip to his old home in Ireland. Before leaving he was presented with a handsome umbrella suitably engraved by the traveling men with whom he deals. Ed. Groskurth, of Gordon, McKay & Co., and John Charles, of H. P. Eckardt & Co., Toronto, made the presentation.

F. M. Tait, of Oshawa, who for past ten years has represented Jno. Sloan & Co., wholesale grocers in the territory east of Toronto, has been transferred to their Belleville office. Previous to his departure from Oshawa, he was banquetted by the business men of that town and presented with a splendid club bag. Mr. Tait is an ex-councillor of Oshawa, where he has resided for past thirty years.

The MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Toronto, were quite busy last week receiving several of their principals. Among them were: A. W. Maconochie, of Maconochie Bros., Ltd., Millwall, London, England; Percy A. Spaul, of Huntley & Palmers, Ltd., Reading, England; Edward J. Caley, president of A. J. Caley & Sons, Ltd., of Norwich, England, whom they represent for such lines as Christmas crackers and confectionery; and Mr. Gray, of the Cleveland Macaroni Co., Cleveland, O., manufacturers of the "Golden Egg" products.

The stores and offices at Ridgetown, Ont., with the exception of the Northway Co. and Craig Co. stores, will close every Wednesday during June, July and August at 12 o'clock noon. In order, however, that the public may not be inconvenienced, one grocery store will remain open each Wednesday afternoon.

Among the retailers from Ontario points who were in Toronto this week were: A. H. Milner, Brampton; A. Thompson, Pine Grove; C. H. Gibson, Porcupine; J. D. Glover, Mattagami; W. C. McFarlane, Queensville; Frank Chapelle, Brown Hill, and W. H. Blyth, Bellwood.

Sugar Declines Another 10 Cents

Montreal. June 27.—Trade has been very satisfactory in practically all lines though dried fruits have not been so active of late.

Considerable anxiety has been caused by an evident corner in rice in the Far East, and prices are now hovering round the level reached during the panic last year.

Wholesalers report an improvement in collections, and there seems to be a greater surplus of cash throughout the country. Things are now in a good way, and it seems that good times are ahead.

SUGAR.—Last week we reported a weak feeling in the market, and at beginning of this week a ten cent decline was registered. The weakness was no doubt due to the good crop on this side, and reports of good general appearance of things in Europe.

It is said that the United Kingdom will not have to buy sugar to any great extent from Cuba, owing to heavy shipments from Java, so that a source of possible competition has been removed. Further reports advise that planters in Cuba are all carrying heavy amounts for this time of year, so that bullish feeling so common on market just before end of crop will be removed.

Demand at present is good, and we may see a still further decline, though it is not expected that it will go below the five dollar mark.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.—Considerable interest is shown in grocery grades of molasses, and large demand makes things more interesting. As said frequently before, molasses is one of the few foodstuffs remaining cheap, and so a good demand is natural.

DRIED FRUITS.—Trade in California fruits for either future or immediate delivery is not over brisk, although considerable inquiry is reported from Europe for California prunes. Coming crop should be a good one, as late rains have aided it rather than harmed, and while others go so far as to say that bad weather has prevailed and that things are not at all rosy, we may accept the latest optimistic advices as authority.

The local market is fairly active, with dullness noticeable in some lines, the chief to suffer being raisins and currants. Apricots are now in the limelight, and a fairly strong feeling prevails. Peaches are also quiet, just a small volume of business passing.

TEA.—There is a very strong feeling in market for higher grade Japans and we are safe in saying that we have reached point where crop output is not equal to the demand. Japan sifting have declined one cent.

There is a fair distributing demand for general list, but we understand that there are less Indian varieties offering than last year, so that market is hardening.

COFFEE.—There is quite a good demand for coffee both locally and from the country, and roasters are expecting a good run of business during the summer. Considerable interest is being paid to reports about the new crop, as most roasters are anxious to see it a good one, and thus break up the past succession of crops which have not been sufficiently large to meet the world's requirements. However, the situation in Brazil is exceptionally strong, and no cheap coffee can be seen there.

RICE AND TAPIOCA. — The rice market continues strong and if full weight is to be paid to reports arriving from all leading centres, higher prices will be reached in a short time. That the Government in China has little control over the merchants is perfectly evident, as after supplies had been cornered and merchants refused to part with stocks for less than $10 per 100 lbs., the Government ordered a general unloading of stocks at reasonable figures, but little attention was paid to the order and goods are still held. Foreign rice has therefore been in demand on the Rice Guild, and as prices for Saigon and Rangoon rice for immediate shipment are still higher than those asked locally for Chinese rice, it seems an odds-on chance of foreign rice receiving considerable attention.

An official report on trade of Japan states that the chief agricultural crops have been better than last year, but price has remained high and the problem is a serious one for rice being the bread of Japan regulates cost of labor.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Sugar—Down 10c to $5.15.

Canned Beans—Advanced.

Celery Seed—Still Climbing.

Rice—Firm.

Toronto, June 27.—Sugar has again been one of the features of week, another decline of 10 cents being recorded on Monday. This leaves refined at $5.15 as compared with $4.70 one year ago. Lateness of preserving fruits has delayed movement of sugar, but consumption should shortly begin to reach substantial proportions. In absence of any indication of higher prices, dealers continue a hand-to-mouth policy.

Jobbers report business as fair for season. Sugar is not so brisk as usual at this time, but in general lines business appears up to normal. Picnic, camping and summer goods in general which were neglected in early June because of unseasonable weather are now beginning to move better.

Canned beans have been advanced this week. High cost of raw material is principal reason assigned.

SUGAR.—Following the weak feeling recorded in sugar last issue, refined declined 10 cents per cwt. at beginning of this week, bringing it down to $5.15 per cwt. on local market.

Situation still continues easy, market having failed to steady up since decline. Cuban output continues to slow up well, but this is becoming more of a finished issue, and attention is being directed to beet crop in Europe. So far reports from this source have been favorable, but it must be remembered that it was just about a year ago that Europe began to send out adverse reports.

Demand still continues on a hand-to-mouth basis.

DRIED FRUITS.—Business, as is to be expected at this time, is rather inclined to quietness. Stocks in most lines appear to be cleaned up to fairly good margin for time of year. Some jobbers are quite well supplied with large-sized prunes, but from present appearances it would seem as if these will be needed this fall, as there is a tendency in new crop to run to small sizes.

Some interest is being directed to future dried fruits. A buying movement of California prunes from Europe has been a recent feature. Currants are reported as progressing well, and present indications point to a good crop. Quotations of around 23 shillings are heard on new crop goods.

Spot dried fruits show no change in price.

TEA.—Opening sale in Calcutta was held on June 4, when 20,000 packages were offered. This fairly large quantity tends to confirm indication that a favorable opening of new plucking season, with increased yields in many instances, will prove correct, and from forward musters seen, it is generally anticipated that quality will be up to the average of previous seasons. The weather reports from Ceylon are of a character favorable for heavy flushing, so that large quantities of inferior liquoring teas are likely to come forward. The shipments from Colombo to United Kingdom during May were 13,000,000 lbs., or an increase of 2,000,000 lbs. on May of last year, while estimate for June is for a further increase of 1,500,000 lbs., which, if realized, will put the available supply for first six months of the year approximately 2,000,000 lbs. over the corresponding figures of 1911.

COFFEE. — There is no material change in local coffee situation, but steadiness prevails, with primary markets showing no tendency to recede. The new crop begins its outturn on July 1, but it is so gradual that it has no great effect on market immediately. This year prospects do not look promising.

Local wholesalers do not note any great falling off in consumption. Trade appears to be fair for time of year.

SPICES.—Celery seed still continues its spectacular advance. Three months ago it was selling here for 18 cents, asked. It seems difficult to obtain, and while to-day 40 to 45 c. is being asked it is hinted that market is probably cornered. Cloves are strong and advancing, while mace is firm on primary market. Peppers still hold steady. A report from New York on spices says:—White peppers have advanced sharply on active trading, and the large business done is perhaps the most important feature of the week. Zanzibar cloves are also firmer, as are Cassias and nutmegs, and the trade demand is exceptionally brisk for this season of the year. The actual scarcity on the spot of a number of articles is being felt, and should the demand continue on its present scale, further advances for spot goods are probable.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.—Rice, even at last week's advance of 15 cents per cwt., continues strong. Advices from the producing sections of the Far East all denote a strong upward tendency, and it appears that the decline in prices during early spring is soon to be made up.

Not only is market on Rangoon firm, but there is a marked steadiness all down the line. Trade is reported as fair for season. Rice is a good summer food.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—The inevitable has come in canned beans, prices having at last been advanced. The strong feeling in this market has been referred to for some time now, and retailers should be well prepared for the advance. One firm quotes 1's up from 50 to 60c; 2's from 90 to 95c; 3's flats from $1 to $1.15, and 3's tall from $1.25 to $1.35. This is for pork and beans. The high cost of raw material, as well as higher prices on other goods used in manufacture is cause of advance. The manufacturers are experiencing great difficulty in securing supplies of raw material.

Some firms are still offering slight concessions in peas. Corn is selling from 95c to $1. Salmon continues steady.

Demand is mostly for immediate wants in canned goods at present. Salmon is a good selling line, as well as other lines of fish. Pork and beans, soups, canned beef, jellied meats and other lines suitable for picnic and camping purposes should sell well from now on.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS:—
Sugar—Down 10 cents.
Canned Goods—Good demand.
Prunes—Firmer.
Peanuts—Dearer.

Winnipeg, June 26.—Real summer weather is driving all who are able to spend the week end at least to summer camps and cottages. This has given a decided boost to many lines of canned goods, smoked meats, cheese and other goods that are easily prepared and handled.

Staple lines are in good demand, and prospects bright. Rain would, however, be welcome, though want of it would not seriously affect business for another week.

Further reductions in dried fruits have not taken place. Reports of "dropping" in the prune orchards have given a firmer tone to this line.

A feature has been a further reduction of 10 cents per cwt. in sugar. Easier raw material accounts for this. Locally there is an excellent demand, which should improve next month.

India teas are reported easier, and coffee is unchanged, and remains high.

SUGAR.—A general reduction of ten cents has taken place in sugar. Local demand is excellent, and will improve with advance of the preserving season.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, June 25.—The market in St. John during past week has shown little change, few differences in quotations being noted. Business has been promising, and with picnic season now at hand demand on many lines has vastly increased. Coming of finer weather which has not been experienced since the middle of May has also made a difference in sales. Fresh fruits are in huge demand, and canned goods for outings and suburban trade are finding a ready purchase.

Advices to local wholesalers are that wheat is firm in Canada and flour shows the same tendency. Feeds have been on a little slump largely due to fact that pasture land is opening but even yet they are bringing a fancy figure. Cornmeal is a little higher and is apt to stay that way because of scarcity of old corn.

Because of high prices prevailing on beans cost of canned baked beans has at last advanced and local wholesalers have received word that future orders must be rated higher. Canned meats have also gone up because of record prices for beef, and other meats, but neither this nor the advance in baked beans was unexpected. Beef still continues at a record price for St. John and no change is looked for until well on in July, when new grass fed cattle should ease the market. There is no barreled beef with many of the supply houses and they are of the opinion that none can be had until about August, allowing time for preparations necessary to be made before the stock above referred to can be ready for market. Because of pastures being in use, dairy products have fallen in price and butter and cheese are both slightly lower. Reduction in butter, eggs and ch ese is not so great as had been expected.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, June 26. — Business continues in excellent volume on local grocery market. Wholesale dealers report trade in good condition, travelers sending in orders fully up to average, while collections are satisfactory.

At the lower prices there is a much better demand for sugars, and this will no doubt continue, as the berry season is near at hand. The first native strawberries reached the market last week, and sold at 20 cents per box. United States berries are quoted at 16 cents.

There was a sharp advance in price of navel oranges this week. They were marked up from $3.50 to $4.00. Pineapples were also advanced one dollar per crate. They are now quoted at $4.00. American tomatoes are selling at $4.50 per crate. Bananas are in good supply, and are going to the trade at $1.85 to $2.75. Cocoanuts are quoted at $4.75 per hundred. Lemons are in heavy demand, price being $4.50 per case. Bermuda onions are plentiful and price is unusually low, now selling at $1.20 per crate.

Butter continues plentiful, but price holds firm. Eggs are in good supply.

ENCOURAGE YOUR CLERKS.

A young man who has been clerking in the leading store in a town of about 1,200, tells the following experience: "I have been getting up the window displays and advertising of the store I clerk in for some time, but in doing so I am held back by the proprietor in a great many things. No matter if it is only a few cents that is needed to improve the display, he wants it done without it and then he says the results are not as good as they should be. This is also true about advertising: I will get up some good idea and then when he figures what it would cost to print and mail he will turn it down."

How often you see this the case. Some merchants will have a clerk who will take enough interest in the business to try and make a window display, but instead of the merchant encouraging him and getting the little things that are absolutely needed, he will not let him have them and in this way he blights the prospects of some bright clerk who might some day be able to put in a display in any store.

Grocers who do not care to try and keep their windows in shape themselves or who haven't the time, should appreciate the clerk who will take enough interest in his store to try and do it, and if there is anything that the grocer can do to help this clerk along he should do it.

LITTLE BUSINESS SERMONS.

It is very easy for the merchant to form plans, but the hard work comes in carrying them out.

It is all very well to increase business by getting trade away from your fellow merchants, but it is much better to increase it by creating new demand.

Enthusiasm will not keep up itself in your clerks. They must constantly have an example and incentive.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Items of Interest From Early Files of The Grocer.

The following items are taken from The Canadian Grocer of July 1, 1892:—

"The measure to enforce early closing referred to last week has since been rejected by the Quebec Legislature."

Editor's Note.—Early closing is still a live question, not only in Quebec, but in other provinces throughout the Domionion as well.

* * *

"The grocers of London, Ont., purpose holding a grand procession on the occasion of their annual picnic next month."

Editor's Note.—It is interesting to note that in this issue of The Grocer appears an account of this year's picnic of the London grocers. They still believe that business men need an occasional holiday.

* * *

"Mr. Henry Swan, of Swan Bros., grocers, King Street, Toronto, is taking an extended trip through Manitoba and the Northwest Territories. He writes Mr. Armstrong, of Armstrong & Cook, Toronto, and says that letters and books can give no adequate idea of the country, that you must see it to be fairly impressed with its greatness. Mr. Swan goes through to the Pacific Coast, returning about the middle of July."

Editor's Note.—Mr. Swan is still actively engaged in business in Toronto and in the same location as at the time of his trip to Western Canada twenty years ago. Swan Bros. are one of Toronto's oldest retail grocery firms, having been in business on King Street for 49 years.

"There was a big attendance at the molasses auction held in Montreal on Tuesday afternoon. Twenty-two hundred puncheons were sold. Five hundred puncheons were withdrawn before the auction and sold privately at 29c. Among the purchases were 50 puncheons at 28½c and 50 tierces at 32¼c, Caverhill, Rose, Hughes & Co.; 50 puncheons at 28½c by C. D. N. Osgoode; 50 puncheons at 28c, by W. S. Goodhugh. James Stewart & Co. handled the sales satisfactorily to all concerned. Five hundred puncheons to arrive will be sold on July 5th."

Matters of Mutual Interest

To spend a hot July morning on the keen jump, lugging around from store to store a couple of well-filled sample cases, miss the station bus by half a minute and just manage to fling yourself on board the last coach as the train pulls out is no joke. But on top of this, to find all your customers in the next town closed up and off to the lakeside is little less than a tragedy.

By collecting the information given on the other side of this page The Grocer hopes it may avert some of these hot weather disappointments, and save the boys on the road some fruitless errands.

This information covers towns of 1,000 or over, but if any of the readers of The Grocer can help to make this holiday list any more complete, we would ask them to send in the particulars without delay.

This is one of the little ways in which Canadian Grocer helps the traveler. But it is insignificant when compared with other ways, which, however, may not be quite so apparent.

Every traveling salesman who calls on the grocery trade, will be ready to concede that retail grocers are kept well informed of market tendencies and of all important developments in the trade through reading Canadian Grocer's weekly issues.

When a traveler advises a customer to buy sugar or canned goods in view of an approaching advance, his advice carries greater weight because Canadian Grocer has reported to the same effect. There is no need for him to waste valuable time in trying to convince the customer that his advice in genuine, and not merely due to a desire to make a sale.

If a traveler is introducing a new line, he finds that it is not regarded with suspicion and distrust, if the dealer has read about it in Canadian Grocer. On the contrary, his interest has been aroused, and he is more likely to grant a good interview even though he may be busy.

So it is that the travelers who benefit most from Canadian Grocer, are those whose firms are advertising regularly in the paper. It is blazing the way for them, influencing their prospects before they appear on the scene, making it easier for them to get the signature on the dotted line.

This is the twenty-sixth year in the life of The Canadian Grocer, and inspired the appreciative reference reproduced first slim numbers making their bow to the grocery trade of Canada, and who agree that if small in compass, The before from the Detroit Herald of Commerce:—

"The Canadian Grocer is one of our most valuable and interesting exchanges, and is so ably and carefully edited that its articles are widely copied by trade papers throughout the United States, and should be read with interest and profit by all grocers on this side of the line, as well as by Canadians. It is published weekly at Toronto, contains 32 pages, and is only $2 per year, and often a single number would be worth the price of a year's subscription to any enterprising tradesman who desires to keep posted on commercial affairs."

We have had many kind expressions of appreciation since the one quoted above, but those we value most are from the retailers out through the provinces, who consult us so frequently and on so many phases of their business. Take this, for example, from a Nova Scotia grocer:—

Canadian Grocer, Toronto.

Dear Sirs,—Enclosed find cheque for four dollars (4.00). Two for my subscription to The Canadian Grocer, and two for a copy of your Grocery advertising.

If your advertising manager has the time, I would like to have a criticism of the attached ad.

I would like to see a short editorial on sugar in your next or an early issue, as I am thinking of buying a carload, or perhaps a little more, but naturally would like to get it as near the bottom as possible.

The Canadian Grocer is a genuine live paper. All the suggestions are worth money to your readers.

Yours very truly,

J. M.

New Glasgow, N. S., June 6, 1912.

A letter like the above is the result of years of faithful service. The writer knows by experience that what he reads in the editorial, news and market sections of The Grocer will be absolutely unbiased and reliable. He knows that what is popularly known as a write-up finds no place in the columns of The Grocer, and that what is apparently the opinion or statement of the editor is so, in fact, as well.

* * *

The question of how to figure profits correctly and the kindred one of the cost of doing business raised by The Canadian Grocer some months ago has proved two things conclusively. First, that a large number of retailers had no definite idea of what it was costing them to do business nor what actual profit they were making on the goods they sold. Second, that the leading grocers have now become very much alive to these questions, as is evidenced by the number of statements submitted to our Mr. Henry Johnston for criticism.

The case is put very neatly in the following letter:—

Dear Sir.—I think your articles on "The Cost of Doing Business" are by far the most important of anything you have been publishing. If you can once show the general run of grocers what it costs them to do business you will have made a big step towards eliminating price-cutting.

With kindest regards, believe me,

Yours very truly,

A. MALCOLMSON.

Chatham, Ont., April 30, 1912.

There can be little doubt, that price-cutting and failures are in a great majority of cases simply a result of an inadequate idea of the cost of doing business, and the figuring of profit on cost rather than on selling price.

Rather Strong Front to Flour Market

Some Mills Have Advanced Prices on Manitobas in Western Canada—Lower Prices on Mill Feeds Throws More Strength on Flour—Bran is Reduced Again—Flour Trade Fair for Season.

There is a further easier feeling in bran this week, and reductions of from $1 to $2 per ton are reported from different centres. There has been no recent shading in shorts, but market is naturally rather inclined to weakness. Pastures in all the provinces are excellent, so that demand for mill feeds is greatly lessened, although shorts continue in better request than bran. The reason for this is that shorts are used as feed for pigs, while bran is used mostly as cow feed.

There is a somewhat firmer and stronger tone to flour. A number of mills have recently advanced Manibtoa flour 20 cents per barrel in Western Canada, and there is some talk of extending the advance to Eastern provinces as well. Wheat is holding quite a strong front, while lower prices on mill feed throws greater strength on flour. If millers do not get the money on their bran and other by-products, then it is necessary to tack it on to flour prices.

Demand from millers for flour appears to be on quite an appreciable scale for season. Naturally the sale of flour through the grocer is not so large in summer as during cooler months of year, but grocer who gives attention to this line will find business much better than it otherwise would be. "Flour business is keeping up much better than I expected," was the comment of one flour man this week.

Cereals are doing fairly well for June. Business is mostly done on a hand-to-mouth basis, as it is best for retailers to buy in small quantities and oftener during summer, so as to maintain a fresh stock. During week oatmeal has declined 12 cents per sack, but cereal men say that rolled oat market is holding fairly steady. Exporters appear anxious for business.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—The market has stiffened up considerably, and prices show an upward tendency. Bran has dropped a dollar per ton, making quotations now $20.

Winter wheat, fancy patents, in bags	4 75	5 00
Straight rollers, in bags	4 30	4 50
Manitoba 1st Spring wheat patents, bags		5 30
Manitoba straight patents, in bags		5 20
Manitoba strong bakers, in bags		5 10
Manitoba second, in bags		4 70

CEREALS.—Good oats are said to be somewhat scarce, so that there is a firm feeling in market and prices may be advanced in near future.

Fine oatmeal, single bag lots	2 75
Standard oatmeal, single bag lots	2 75
Granulated oatmeal, single bag lots	2 75
Rolled Cornmeal, 100 bags	2 35
Rolled oats, jute bags, 90-lb. single bag lots	2 50
Do., cotton bags, 90-lb., single bag lots	2 55
Rolled oats, barrels	5 25
Rolled wheat, bbl.	2 25

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—Trade in flour is on a fair scale for season. Some millers even report it as keeping up better than expected. With wheat holding firm and by-products lower there is quite a strong feeling in Manitoba flour.

Winter wheat flour is also quite steady with not a great deal offering. With Ontario wheat about on par with Manitoba, there is now not a great deal of difference between Ontario and Manitoba patents.

Feed flour appears to be firmer, as high as $33.00 per ton being asked.

Manitoba Wheat.
1st patent, in car lots, per bbl.		5 70
2nd patents, in car lots, per bbl.		5 20
Strong bakers, in car lots, per bbl.		5 00

Patents, 90 p.c., domestic consumption	4 80	5 10
Straight roller, domestic consumption	4 60	4 80
Blended, domestic consumption	5 10	5 30

CEREALS.—Cereals have shown no price change during week. Cornmeal is a little steadier on account of scarcity of good quality raw material.

Rolled oats appear to be in good demand for season. "We are quite rushed just now," said one miller. "It is not usual at this season for us to be quite so busy."

Rolled oats, small lots, 90 lb. sacks		2 50
Rolled oats, 25 bags to car lots		2 10
Standard and granulated oatmeal, 98-lb. sk.		2 64
Rolled wheat, small lots, 100-lb. bbls.		2 90
Rolled wheat, 5 barrel to car lots		2 80
Cornmeal, 100 lb. bags	2 35	2 40
Rolled oats in cotton sacks, 5 cents more.

MILL FEED. — Bran has shown another reduction this week, and is now quoted at $21.00 per ton in car lots. Shorts are in somewhat better demand, and have continued fairly steady at $26.00 per ton.

MANITOBA.

FLOUR AND CEREALS.—Prices are steady in flour and rolled oats and oatmeal. Cornmeal is 5 cents per sack higher. Wheat prices are going up daily and flour is liable to follow.

Flour—
1st patents, cwt.	3 05
2nd patents, cwt.	2 75

NEWS AND NOTES.

New wheat is already reported from Oklahoma, and harvesting has begun in Kansas and Missouri.

Reports from Western Canada indicate growing crop to be in excellent condition, though probably a few days late, owing to prevailing cool weather after seeding.

Export flour trade is decidedly dull.

RICE A GOOD FOOD.

A fact which the grocer may use in increasing his rice sales is the fact that rice is more nearly a complete food than any other article. Rice is easily digested, is very nutritious, and is even a good diet for strong men, as is shown by the fine health of the Japanese soldiers, whose main diet has always been rice.

Dominion Day Stimulates Fruit Trade

Increased Orders in Anticipation of Holiday Trade — Fancy Vegetables Were Also Helped—Firmer Tone to Pineapples—Lemons Moving Better and Are Stronger — Tomatoes From Texas and Mississippi—New Potatoes Easier.

Trade in fruits, as well as in a number of lines of fancy vegetables has been stimulated this week by the approach of Dominion Day. Around every holiday season, fruits are always in better demand, but this is especially true in the summer season, because fruit is a warm weather food. Early in the week advance orders began to arrive from country districts, and trade became more active as week advanced. Orders comprised a greater percentage of fancy and high-priced goods than is usually the case.

It was pointed out in last issue that pineapple season had reached its zenith. This proved to be true, and trade in this line is dwindling some, although a considerable volume of business is still being done. Preserving wants, with exception of some belated business, have been pretty well cared for, demand to a large extent now being for table use. Business in pines this year has been good, for, in the absence of strawberries, dealers have been pushing pines strongly.

Shipments of Cuban stock are about to an end. For a time they showed some little waste, although late arrivals have been better in this regard. Floridas are coming on the market, but at a higher rate than ruled for Cubans. Quality is, however, good, and next couple of weeks should see a continued good movement.

The Canadian strawberry is allowing public appetite for it to develop to a high point before making its appearance in anything like substantial quantities. However, the amount of imports from across the line are dwindling, but Canadian receipts so far have not been large enough to break the market in the way it was expected. However, some continued warm, ripening weather would soon bring the change they are looking for. Canadian cherries are now coming forward in limited quantities.

Past week has been more favorable lemon weather, and demand has been on a larger scale. If Old Sol would decide to hand out a more fiery brand of sunshine it would bring a much brisker movement, and no doubt bring a firmer tone to market. As it is there is a steadier feeling in fresh cuts because they are below the par of other varieties. These, as well as November cuts, are now going out, while Verdelli, on account of being higher, are not moving as yet.

Tomatoes are now coming along from Texas and Mississippi, and at a more reasonable figure. They are in four-basket flat crates. Florida stock is about done. New potatoes are in better supply and lower in price, and large quantities are being sold.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—Market is fairly active for practically all lines, in spite of some high prices. The banana market is acting in a rather unusual way, prices being advanced just as large supplies from Jamaica came to hand, when it was expected that the movement would be the other way. Navel oranges are pretty well exhausted now, and late Valencias will now be in the limelight. Strawberries are in good demand, and lemons are also being asked about more owing to the warm weather, which seems to be here to stay. That the highest price for lemons have not yet been reached there can be no reasonable doubt.

VEGETABLES.—There is a fairly good demand for all lines of vegetables, in spite of high prices prevailing. Cucumbers are not moving so freely as expected owing, no doubt, to smaller offerings and consequently higher prices. Potatoes are well looked after, and carrots remain scarce and dear.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS.—The big change in strawberries which fruit men were looking for last week has not yet taken place. In fact, prices at beginning of week were much the same as first of last week. However, Canadian berries have been replacing U.S. stock, but supplies have not been large enough to weaken market. Warm ripening weather will, however, cause a different story.

Canadian cherries have made their debut during week, selling at around 75 cents for six-quart basket. The quantity has so far been small. U.S. cherries are still coming along at $2.50 per box.

Pine market is stronger this week. Cubans are about done, but Florida are coming along, although at a higher rate.

Navels, which are winding up somewhat steadier and firmer. Valencias are selling at $4 to $4.50 per case. There are some Mexicans on market at $2 per case.

The wholesale fruit men moved to their summer quarters on Monday. The opening this year was two days later than a year ago, and the latest for six years.

Cantaloupes are on the market at $6 per crate.

Bananas, per bunch	1 50	2 00

VEGETABLES.—As usual, vegetable prices are fluctuating, but on whole tend downward. New potatoes are prominent on market just now, and values are easier under increased shipments, selling at $4.75 to $5 per barrel. Easiness in old potatoes is not so marked, holders of good stock being quite steady in their ideas. Trade in old potatoes is somewhat overshadowed by the new grades.

Texas and Mississippi tomatoes are coming along in flat crates, four baskets to a crate, and are more reasonable in price. Florida stock is about done.

Texas onions are in fair supply, while Egyptians are about cleaned up.

Trade this week has been quite good, especially in fancy lines.

SUGAR BEET PROSPECTS.

The progress of sugar beets in Canada has been somewhat hampered by continued backward season during June with much wet weather. However, field work has made fair progress, and sowings, which considerably exceed those of last year are furnished. Thinning is now under way, and while the crop is reported to be about 10 days late, the stand is good, and with favorable weather from now on the roots will soon catch up.

PEDDLERS MAY STILL YEL.

By-Law to Prohibit Calling of Wares Laid Over.

Toronto, June 27.—One little word or rather the difference of opinion as to its exact meaning has delayed the passing of the by-law to prohibit peddlers from calling out their wares on the street. That little word is "hawk."

The proposed by-law came before the city council on Monday, when a deputation from the Retail Grocers' Association was on hand to urge its passing, while opposition was offered by representatives of the peddlers. The by-law had received its first and second readings when the question was raised as to whether the privilege to "hawk," which is given the peddlers when they take out a license, did not include the calling of their wares. The city solicitor is to report on this question, and the by-law is to come up at the next meeting of the council, when the Retail Grocers will have another deputation present and hope to put the by-law through its final stages. Mayor Geary was of the opinion that license was merely given to peddlers to sell and that council could regulate the manner in which goods should be sold.

Wm. C. Miller, J. S. Bond and Neil Carmichael presented the grocers' side of the question. Mr. Carmichael raised the point that residential districts had been created where the grocers were not allowed to go, but hawkers could go there without hindrance. He contended that they should be kept out as well as the grocers.

Wm. Eckles for the peddlers contended that grocers can canvass and ring the telephone, which he thought was just as bad as peddlers shouting.

LONDON ALSO AFTER HUCKSTERS

They Buy Up Goods That are Scarce—One Man Was Fined.

London, Ont., June 27.—A committee from the Retail Grocers' Association waited on the chairman of No. 3 committee of the city council in regard to manner in which hucksters buy on local market. It was claimed they get down to market very early and buy up anything that is scarce, thus practically cornering the market. The grocers have to buy from them or go without. If they do buy from them they have to pay a big price. The chairman of No. 3 committe promised to look into the matter and put a stop to it.

The market clerk had the first of a number of cases before the police magistrate on Friday last when the offender was fined two dollars and warned that next time it would be more.

The grocers of London are pleased at the outcome and feel indebted to the association for having this nuisance stopped.

VEGETABLES BACKWARD IN N.B.

St. John, N.B., June 27. — There is little hope that there will be an abundance of vegetables at any early date this year in St. John, Fredericton, or Moncton markets. The spring has been decidedly backward all over New Brunswick, and there is a strong belief that potato crop and others will suffer on account of bad weather. For about three weeks there was a rain spell which was marked by a fall almost every day, while one or two days intervening with much heat may cause a rot. Conditions all through the province are practically the same and supply of green goods in the country market and on grocers' racks at present is not nearly so encouraging as might have been the case with finer weather. There will be a very heavy hay crop, however, and it is expected that harvest of oats will be very large as well, but there is little hope entertained for cheap vegetables, such as potatoes, turnips, carrots, onions, etc., which will likely be scarce.

FRUIT PROSPECTS IN ONTARIO.

A Toronto wholesaler who has just returned from a tour of inspection throughout the fruit districts of Ontario reports that quality of fruit will likely be good, but the quantity light. Condition of strawberries points to not much over 50 per cent. of a normal yield, while peaches do not promise much better.

Indications are that raspberries and thimbleberries will not be as plentiful this year as last. The severe winter was responsible for much of this prospective shortage. The strawberry plants did not run last year as well as usual, and many fields were ploughed up. The sections that promise best are Queenston, St. David's and Burlington, and most of the country situated along the heights that run back a distance from the lake. Generally speaking, a moderate crop is looked for, and good prices are anticipated by those who have followed the market.

Fish Trade Satisfactory for Season

Movement of Fish Quite Up to Standard for Time of Year—Fresh Fish Predominate—Hard to Handle Smoked Varities in Hot Weather—Easier Tendency in Codfish.

Reports from different centres of the Dominion, indicate that fish men are pretty well satisfied with volume of business. True it is that weather of late has not been quite so favorable as earlier in month but for this time of year, movement of fish is described as satisfactory. Trade at present time is of course nearly all in fresh varieties, for it is difficult to handle smoked lines during warm weather. However there is some business passing in smoked. Finnan haddie is one of the principal smoked lines while in fresh, halibut, trout and whitefish are favorites.

The mackerel catch on Nova Scotia coast has so far been disappointing. There are better hopes for the second run. Fairly good catches of codfish on eastern coast as well as phenomenal Norwegian catch is having a depressing tendency on the market.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—Haddock and cod are both plentiful and quoted at reasonable figures but there is a scarcity of lake trout, and whitefish, also pickerel and perch. Brook trout and pike are not so plentiful and prices are firm. Gaspe salmon is moving freely. Fancy large fresh mackerel are scarce and prices have advanced.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.—The finer weather of past week has differed greatly from former disagreeable period, and has had a promising effect on fish market. Large catches in many lines have been made, but this is only making amends for what has previously been the case, catches for most part having formerly been light. Past week has practically seen finish of the gaspereaux season which has been a fairly good one. The season in halibut has been poor and will soon be done. The backward spring has made supplies light, fish keeping into deep water and not coming near shore as a result of the cold weather. Salmon has come to a moderate price bringing from 16 to 25 cents a pound, and that it will not go below that price is the firm belief of dealers, who give as their reason that high cost of meat lines will create a livelier demand for this fish. The catch up to present has been well up to standard but will soon commence to fall off.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX. — Catch of mackerel on Nova Scotia coast so far this year has been a big disappointment on account of the main school of fish keeping for most part out in deep water. Nearly all the hauls of mackerel on south shore near Halifax have been marketed fresh, the bulk of them having been bought for ten cents each. Very few were salted in this district. Some few fish are still being taken, and fishermen hope to do better when second run comes along. Advices from Magdalen Islands also state that catch there is unusually small.

From all points, particularly Cape Breton, come reports of large catches of codfish. Gaspe also reports fish plentiful. Along south shore of Nova Scotia results have been fair, although interrupted by stormy weather. The Lunenburg spring catch of half million quintals will shortly be on the market, and this together with phenomenal Norwegian catch, will have a tendency to depress the market. Large codfish are quoted at vessel at $5 per quintal landed here, and the price will probably go still lower.

Newfoundland herring are arriving freely, but price has not yet been fixed.

MANITOBA.

WINNIPEG.—Market is steady, with supplies liberal and demand good. Fresh whitefish, pickerel and gold eyes are plentiful.

Butter Market Now in the Balance

Dealers are Wondering Which Way it Will Swing—June Butter in Demand for Storage Purposes—This Has Steadied Situation—Eggs are Unchanged—New Cheese Has an Easier Tendency.

It is just a question whether butter is any easier than a week ago. True it is that dealers were looking for an appreciable production this month and further concessions in prices, but as far as prices are concerned there has not been much change. Although this week market at some centres is still said to be on the easy side, holders are not giving way as much as was expected.

One explanation of bullishness on part of holders is that June butter is considered as very desirable for storage purposes. At some centres demand for it for this purpose has been quite keen. The West has now become pretty near able to supply its own demand, although an occasional offer is received from Western points by Eastern firms. There have been some inquiries from English houses for quotations on June butter, but prices in Old Country are much too low for business at present.

Pastures in most parts of Dominion are in excellent condition, and fact that make of butter should be large inclines some dealers to think that prices should be lower. "Perhaps they should be lower," said one man, "but I don't know where to go to buy any at a lower rate."

Warmer weather will soon be causing a greater shrinkage in eggs, and resulting in a generally steadier feeling with a greater premium on guaranteed new laids. There is no particular change in situation during past week. Up to the present, weather has been favorable to receipts arriving in good condition, and a greater quantity than usual has been stored. Demand for eggs is not quite so heavy, the public appetite tiring somewhat of this line, which has had a big run since early spring.

Trade in smoked and cooked meats on account of backward season has been rather tardy in getting under way, but should soon begin to blossom forth.

Cheese was easier last week, and still has a tendency in same direction on account of increased production. Advices from England state that although rains have fallen in Great Britain they have not been sufficient to compensate for previous dry weather.

MONTREAL.

EGGS. — There has been a marked falling off in supplies at some points, but not to same extent as during corresponding periods of past years. Supplies are coming along pretty freely and prices have been maintained under good demand, but market for second quality stock is quite inactive, as prices for this class are low, and sales should not be difficult to make.

CHEESE. — Prices at country points showed a slight decline during the week, owing to a weaker feeling, which has prevailed for some time. The local market is quiet, little business being transacted over the cable, and prices in general may be said to present an easier tendency.

POULTRY.—Stocks of good poultry are getting low, and tendency is for higher prices. Live fowl are plentiful, although there was a slight scarcity last week, owing to a number of Jewish festivals being celebrated. Eggs being high in price farmers seem to have decided to keep hens laying rather than send them to poultry markets, and this may to some extent account for falling off in supplies.

HONEY.—Market at present is quiet and no great activity will be noticeable until the fall. Grocers find honey a hard line to handle during hot weather as it must be exposed to be sold readily, and when placed on counter attracts a large number of flies, which are by no means welcome in any up-to-date store. The demand at present is from confectioners for manufacturing purposes. Prices remain unchanged.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS. — There is an easier tone to provision market this week. At least slightly lower figures are being quoted on smoked meats and lard by a number of houses. Lard is quoted in tierces at 13¾ cents. Breakfast bacon is lower at 17 to 18 cents, while a recession of 1½ cents in smoked hams is noted by a couple of houses. Demand for lard is not as brisk as earlier in year when butter was at a record price. Backward season has kept demand for smoked meats smaller than is usual.

BUTTER.—Butter prices show little or no alteration since last week. A number of dealers a short time ago were looking for further recessions in butter, but now they appear less confident of this. Differences of opinion prevail regarding the future. "I think butter should go lower," said one man. "It is still pretty high.

"I don't know where to go to get butter at a lower rate than I am paying now," said another.

The pastures are excellent, and there should be a big production of butter now, but June butter is desirable for storing purposes, and demand is therefore good, accounting for continued steady feeling.

EGGS.—With practically same figures being paid for eggs in country, price being asked city retailers is unchanged from a week ago. Some firms are getting higher than quoted price for guaranteed stock.

Weather on whole during June has been favorable to eggs, but now with warm days beginning to appear, shrinkage can be expected to be heavier. Cool temperature has allowed more eggs than usual to be stored this month, although price has been quite high.

CHEESE.—It is expected that when total production of cheese in June is figured up that it will be appreciable. At least the excellent pastures throughout the province indicate that. Reasons for the High Price of Butter

Chief Dairy Commissioner for Canada Says the Consumer Doesn't Pay, Feast or Famine, as Stated by a Newspaper—A Matter of Supply and Demand—Would be Butter Famine in Winter if Cold Storages Didn't Exist.

If the wholesalers and retailers have not been the cause of the high price of butter and other products during the past winter and spring, it is not the fault of a section of the daily press. Recently a large Canadian daily displayed an article on its front page, two columns wide, referring to the high price of butter under the heading, "Consumer Pays Feast or Famine." The article purported to be based on some statements in reports made by J. A. Ruddick, Ottawa, chief dairy commissioner.

Criticises the Heading.

Mr. Ruddick replies to the article in question calling attention to the heading, which he says was not justified by the contents of his statements. His reply is interesting inasmuch as it refutes the inference drawn in the heading and because it explains in concise manner the reasons for the prevailing prices of butter. It is herewith reproduced:

"I hope you will allow me sufficient space to show that anything I may have said on this subject would not warrant the interference contained in the headline just quoted.

"It is quite true that the price of butter may advance while there is a temporary demand for storage purposes, but the fact should not be overlooked that it is always necessary to store summer-made butter in Canada against the period of short production during the winter months.

Short Supply in Winter.

"This country never has produced and probably never will produce a sufficient quantity of butter during the cold weather to supply the consumptive demand at that period. The price of butter was unusally high in Canada last winter. Why? Simply because the quantity stored last summer together with the winter production was not equal to the winter demand. Had the merchants stored a full supply or more than was needed, the wholesale price would have been fixed by the export value, which was never above 28¾ cents per pound, and most of the time it was several cents lower.

"Butter having become an article of international trade, the price thereof is regulated by the world's markets. During a period of actual shortage in Canada, when supplies must be imported from abroad, the duty, cost of carriage and commissions must be added. If a sufficient quantity of butter is stored at this season of the year that contingency is avoided. It is not correct to say that the "Consumer pays, feast or famine.'

Butter Famine Otherwise.

"I would add also that the cold storage warehouses, as a rule, do not deal in butter. They leave that to the merchants, and if it were not for their enterprise in providing against it, we should have a butter famine every winter in Canada.

"Finally, I may add that there is a general shortage of butter all over the world at the present time. The Australasian exports, which are normally very large, have shown a great decrease during the past twelve monts. This is the chief reason why the price of butter is high at the present time."

A BELIEVER IN TURNOVER.

A prominent member of the retail trade stated to The Grocer the other day that his chief aim as a large dealer, was to get turnover. He pointed out that as turnover increased the ratio of expenses decreased; that if a fair, but not exorbitant, profit were secured, the business would build up more rapidly than with larger profits and less turnover.

The wife of C. L. Plank, general merchant, Lorneville Junction, Ont., was seriously injured in a railway accident recently, but is progressing nicely.

KNOX

Have You Noticed Our New Plan of Advertising?

We are making a special effort in all our magazine advertising to call your customers' attention to KNOX ACIDULATED GELATINE. This package is a strong seller, because it contains an extra envelope of concentrated lemon juice for flavoring, which saves the housewife the expense, time and trouble of preparing the fruits. It is much superior to the cheap, flavored, ready prepared gelatines which only make a pint of jelly as against the two quarts made with a package of KNOX GELATINE. Our advertising is making it easy to sell this customer-pleasing package, which pays you a fine profit out of the 15 cents it sells for.

"Make KNOX Your Gelatine Leader."

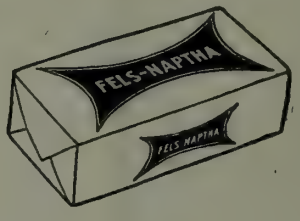
WILSON'S FLY PADS

Last year's increase in sales was greater than the whole output of a few years ago.

And the demand is still growing.

Reputation that Counts

must be reputation for merit. Fels-Naptha soap is not only known everywhere but it is preferred everywhere to other soaps. All our advertising wouldn't have made such a success if it had not been backed up by the merit of Fels-Naptha soap.



Keep in mind the dominant fact that mankind from its first appearance on the earth has been schooled by nature to look for signs; for invitations to taste; for suggestions as to what to wear. Tell your story briefly, forcibly, truthfully, and address it through the proper media and you can successfully apply advertising as a means to increased distribution.

EXTRACTS

There cannot be too much emphasis put on the Purity of Extracts in this day of imitations and inferior articles. The "Royal Shield" Extracts uphold the reputation for purity of this popular western brand. They are true fruit essences of extra strength and go farther in flavoring than most high grade brands. This is a strong point with your customers and will increase your extract sales.

Why Don't You do Like Him?

H. J. Buckley of Moberly, Mo., who bought a No. 84 Kingery Corn Popper with Peanut cylinder extra for $94.00.

He writes that the machine is doing fine. I pay $40.00 per month rent and have four people employed and machine pays rent and help.

Now to get at his profits in this little, big business, let's do a little figuring. Rent $480 per year. Four clerks at $5.00 per week each, $1,040, total $1,520 or 15 times the cost of his machine. Did you ever add anything to your business that beats it? In some cases they have earned more net profit than that of the business of the entire store. Furthermore its attractiveness turns the eyes of passersby upon your store. Often it is the agent of sending them in. It helps the business in the store. The Kingery Peanut Roasters and Corn Poppers are of many kinds and styles—Steam, Electric, Spring and Hand Power. Ranging in price from $8.50 to $350.00. Sold on liberal instalments.

You should have Kingery's Book of Possibilities and Catalog No. 39. They are free.

Talking to the Point

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS get right down to the point at issue. If you want something, say so in a few well-chosen words. Readers like that sort of straight-from-the-shoulder-talk, and that is the reason why condensed ads are so productive of the best kind of results.

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS are always noticed. They are read by wide-awake, intelligent dealers, who are on the look out for favorable opportunities to fill their requirements.

No Dirt Can Lodge in the "All-Metal"

It Stands to Reason that an all-metal washboard made in one piece will outwear the old-fashioned wooden kind many times. Then if this is a fact, the all-metal washboard is the most economical. This feature alone is one that prompts the housewife to buy MEAKINS' SANITARY WASHBOARDS when the dealer shows her this modern production in the art of wash-board making. Meakins' Sanitary Washboards give no chance for dirt to lodge or metal to loosen to scratch the hands. The "All-metal" has won favor for its practicability, and sanitary construction. It will not rust or corrode. Send for particulars and prices.

Not an Enterprise for the "Quitter"

"If there is one enterprise on earth," says John Wanamaker, "that a 'quitter' should leave severely alone, it is advertising. To make a success of advertising one must be prepared to stick like a barnacle on a boat's bottom

"He must know before he begins it that he must spend money—lots of it.

"Somebody must tell him that he cannot hope to reap results commensurate with his expenditure early in the game.

"Advertising does not jerk; it pulls. It begins very gently at first, but the pull is steady. It increases day by day and year by year, until it exerts an irresistible power."

With the proper system of account keeping you can put an end to accounting worries and know the amount of accounts outstanding at a glance.

The ULLMAN Account Register

is the safest, simplest, quickest, surest to charge and most satisfactory of any system on the market. It satisfies the customer as well as the merchant. There is a decided advantage to the grocer who uses an Ullman Account Register. The customer knows, every time he makes a purchase, how much he owes, and naturally tries to keep it as low as possible. Put in an Ullman Account Register and stop the incessant night work and worry of retail bookkeeping.

Send for illustrated booklet or ask for demonstration.

We want dealers to handle the Ullman Account Register in some localities.
